You would better be planting that spring advertisement.

A streak of May weather passed this way last Friday, and along in May a streak of March weather will bob up.

There are now seven rural routes that are supplied by Boone county postoffices, and applications for two more pending.

Alonzo and Hubert Beemon, of Limaburg neighborhood, were delivering $10 tobacco to John Hogan, last Thursday.

Too much water in the creeks again last Thursday and the rural mail carriers from Burlington made only partial deliveries.

Mark for permanent repairs the worst places in the roads this winter, but it is suggested that the entire road in many cases would have to be marked.

The very bad condition of the Lexington pike has caused considerable complaint for the last two months on the part of teamsters who have to use it.

The RECORDER has printed the 1908 bills for Xen Scott's fine horse and jack, which will be found again where they made the 1907 season. Popular prices.

A. L. Conner was prizing and shipping tobacco last week. He has quite a nice little purchase in his warehouse, and it is of a quality that demands a good price.

The weather, last Friday, gave a fellow that summer time feeling, and the boys began bunching on the street corners and lining up along the court house fence.

The improvement in the roads can be assisted along very materially by using a harrow on them so soon as they begin to get dry. Try the harrow and see how great a benefit it is.

In a neighborhood not very far from Burlington, mink traps set by the trappers are so thick that land owners are afraid to go about on their farms after dark, fearing that they will be caught by the traps.

Kreitcher, the Sedamsville dealer in livestock, was through this part of the county, last week, buying "cattles" and other animals of which the farmers desired to dispose.

Is the one you pay out for a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They bring you the health that's more precious than jewels. Try them for headache, biliousness, constipation and malaria. If they disappoint you the price will be cheerfully refunded at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

It is said that about $3,000 has been subscribed with which to complete the Hebron pike from a point near Walter Garnett's on to Limaburg. This amount increased by the county's subscription of $500 a mile is certainly ample, as it will be a road that is easy to build. Now is a good time to agitate the matter.

Best Healer In the World.

Rev. F. Starbird, of East Raymond Maine, says: "I have used Bucklen's Arnica Salve for several years, on my old army wound, and other obstinate sores, and find it the best healer in the world. I use it too with great success in my veterinary business. Price 25 cents at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

J. M. Eddins, of Frankfort, who was here several days, last week, purchased 36 acres of land near town, known as the Adams land, and which joins the land he bought of N. E. Riddell some time since. He now owns 75 acres in a body, on which to take exercise as soon as the Republicans dispense with his services; but, judging from the quantity of natural leaf he took back to Frankfort for chewing purposes, he expects to remain there quite a while yet.

With no tobacco requiring attention this year there should be a very great improvement in the appearance of many of the farms in Boone county. There will be time in which to repair fencing and buildings, and to dispose of quantities of briars and bushes that occupy land that ought to be producing grass. There is plenty of work of that kind in the county to give employment to all those who have depended on tobacco.

An effort will be made to increase the area of the Belleview Graded School district. The original boundary was found to be too small to provide revenue enough to erect the class of school building that is desired by a majority of the patrons, and, at the same time, support the school. Recognizing that they are building for many, many years to come, some of the most active workers for the school, advocate a concrete building, believing that it will prove the cheapest in the long run.

J. H. Stephens, of Idlewild neighborhood, who is the administrator of the estate of the late Henry Barlow, who resided in this county at the top of the river hill immediately below the mouth of Garrison creek, has brought suit in a Cincinnati court for $10,000 damages as the result of Mr. Barlow's death. It will be remembered that about the middle of last September, a building on Central Avenue near Seventh Street, Cincinnati, which was being repaired collapsed, and fell. Mr. Barlow was on the pavement in front of the building at the time, and was buried by the wreckage and killed instantly.

One evening, recently, between 8 and 9 o'clock, some sneakthief entered the residence of Elmer Kirkpatrick and swiped a large piece of cooked ham, half of a large cake and a generous supply of bread. Mrs. Kirkpatrick was entertaining her next door neighbor, Mrs. John Hogan, and they heard a noise in the dining room, and thinking it was her husband, Mrs. Kirk called to him, but received no answer. A noise was then heard at the front door, and Mrs. Kirk went to see who it was, but could find no one, and then the two ladies became alarmed and went to Mrs. Hogan's, which is near by. Mrs. Hogan called the telephone to their assistance and soon located their husbands, who lost no time in coming home. All returned with Mrs. Kirkpatrick, when an investigation proved, conclusively, that a thief or thieves had been in her house and took the above named articles. The thief or thieves evidently knew that Mr. Kirkpatrick was not at home, and took advantage of his absence to make the raid. There has been considerable petty thieving about Burlington, this winter, and the first thing somebody knows, the jail will have an occupant, a candidate for the penitentiary.

The State Revenue agent has filed suit in the Boone county court against the Boone county Board of Control, asking that the 1905 and 1906 tobacco held by Boone county Board of Control be valued and listed for taxation. Suits of the same kin dhave been filed in about 40 other counties in the Burley district while a blanket suit has been filed at Winchester, Clark county, where an attempt is being made to catch for taxation all the pooled tobacco, and in the event that suit is successful the suits in the several counties will be dismissed.

The Postal Department has ordered the extension of Burlington rural route No. 2 as petitioned for a few weeks since, viz: from Locust Grove school house to the top of Gunpowder hill at the site of the old Bradford residence. A letter from Congressman Rhinock states that the application of James Akin and others for an extension of R. F. D. No. 2 from Burlington has been granted to take effect on April 1st, and that the petition for R. F. D. from Burlington out north will likely be granted in a short time.

FOR IRELAND

Impassioned love my soul consumed for motherland, opprest;
Her glories gilt my waking hours, her woes my dreams o'ercast,
And the love that fed my heart's first fire, please God, shall light my last.

There's not a shagan shakes a spear above her many fens,

Oh, Ireland! for your holy sake I'll joyful bear all pain:
To your high cause I consecrate my heart, my hand, my brain.
If life and strife avail me not to save that soul one sigh,
Then, crowning joy, in your sweet name let one unworthy die.

ST. PATRICK, OF IRELAND

One thousand, four hundred and forty-two years ago, on March 17, according to the most trustworthy accounts, the death and beatification of Saint Patrick took place. That is why, on the anniversary of that event, the shamrock is worn by every loyal Irishman. If he cannot obtain a genuine leaf from old Erin, he wears the best imitation he can find, and if he can get no shamrock, real or counterfeit, he wears a green necktie or a strip of green in his coat lapel.

It was not many years ago that the more enthusiastic of the sons of Ireland on the day when they bedecked themselves with green would decline to tolerate the sight of a yellow emblem. Venders of oranges and bananas did well to keep their carts off the street. Even a belief in the same religion was not always sufficient to save orange sellers; that fruit was entirely too suggestive of the Orangemen's association.

In these days of increasing toleration there is less and less friction of this sort. The custom of giving Saint Patrick's day parades is gradually dying out in this country. Many years ago the New York city council passed an ordinance imposing a penalty on anyone who abused an effigy of Saint Patrick, but no such law is now necessary. Patriotic Irish societies observe the day quietly, and there are services in the Catholic churches, especially in those edifices named after the saint. Even in Ireland there is less and less of bitterness between the wearers of the green and the yellow, and the crack of the shillalah is not so often heard as formerly to the accompaniment of the strains of "St. Patrick's Day in the Mornin'." The attitude of Queen Victoria had much to do with bringing about this change of feeling.

It was the duchess of Buckingham and Chandos who, in voicing her majesty's sentiments, wrote these lines, which on each recurring Saint Patrick's day find warm response in the hearts of the Irish soldiery:

We're the most uplifted regiment,
Bedad we're mortal keen!
The shamrock's in our forage caps
By order of the queen!

This song bears date 1900, for it was in the last year of her reign that Victoria, just before her memorable visit to Ireland, gave orders that her Irish regiments were to wear the shamrock in their headgear on Saint Patrick's day. That raised the national emblem of the island officially to the heart-high position it had ever held in sentiment. It was a small and easy thing to do, but it made the tiny three-leaved plant popular as it never was before.

In spite of all ingenious attempts to discredit the beautiful story which represents the patron saint of the Emerald Isle as using the shamrock for an illustration of the Holy Trinity, in spite of the learned debates and academic differences of such scholars as Bentham and Britten, Colgan and Cook, your true Irishman the world over will ever cling to the chosen leaf which grows in the "moss, the moor and the mireland" of his old home, and the public indorsement of a queen surely did not weaken that affection.

Dear Shamrock of Erin, so sacred and green,
Though ages of sorrow thy past years have seen;
From childhood's bright morning to manhood's decline
Thy leaflet we wear o'er our hearts ever thine.

Shoots up, with dewdrops streaming,
As softly green as emerald seen,
Through purest crystal gleaming
O, the Shamrock, the green immortal Shamrock!
Chosen leaf of bard and chief,
Old Erin's native Shamrock!

By many of the faithful in Wales and elsewhere Irish soil is imported to keep away serpents, and it has been declared that a bite of Irish clay will kill a snake.

Patrick's labors in Ireland lasted more than 30 years. In Downpatrick, near the place where as a slave he once tended sheep, his ashes are now believed to repose.

In Down, three saints one grave do fill—
Patrick, Bridget and Columb Kill.

The mere student of folk-lore little guesses the feelings of the son of Erin who bears the shamrock in his cap or wears it on his breast. To him it embodies all the religious and romantic, mythical and national ideas which ever have stirred in the souls of his forefathers. The great love for the plant inspired the famous ballad "The Wearin' o' the Green," which tells that "They're hangin' men and women for the wearin' o' the green." This did not mean, of course, that people were being hanged for that, but it was poetical exaggeration implying their willingness to die, if necessary, rather than give up wearing it.

For the last half dozen years, under the inspiring influence of the Shamrock league, happily instituted and even more happily carried on by the Countess of Limerick, there has been an unprecedented demand for the Irish national emblem. Thousands upon thousands of little green boxes filled with tiny bunches of the trefoil have annually been packed by that great-hearted woman and her friends and sold the world over, the proceeds going to aid disabled Irish soldiers and the destitute relatives of those Irishmen who have fallen in battle. Last winter nearly 300 of the poor in Counties Clare and Limerick alone tided over the hard weather on the profit derived from the patriotic sale of shamrock.

And where does all the shamrock come from? It grows wild in every county of Ireland. Along the mountains, in the old hill-pastures and in the venerable meadows, it may be picked in small quantities as early in the year as February 25, and a fortnight later in luxurious abundance. The tiniest and therefore the most prized variety is usually found along the bank of a dry ditch where there is no grass, for the poorer and more arid the soil the better the shamrock. Not a bairn in Ireland but knows all the best places near his home to look for the little green leaf. It is the children who are the gatherers. For days just before the good saint's festival the hills around Stepaside and Stillorgan and the Scalp will be dotted over with the industrious diminutive toilers whose profits may in no case exceed two dollars but who are supremely happy in their patriotic task.

There are national emblems that may be eaten. Not so the shamrock. A man may eat a leek and enjoy it, a Scot might even try a thistle, but an Irishman must drown his shamrock. That is as sure as is March 17 itself.

IRELAND'S PLACE IN HISTORY

On St. Patrick's day, with tender heart and moist eye, we set before ourselves the far form of Ireland, garlanded with the deeds of the past, and bedecked with the colors of bygone days. The pages of Irish history are, without doubt, familiar to all. The brilliant lights and deep shadows, the intense joys and keen sorrows, the failures and triumphs which mark the annals of Erin are an old and familiar story.

Her very early history contains an air of romance, and has, running through it, a depth of color which invests it with a peculiar charm. In its primal days Druid worship held the hearts of its people and the cult of sylvan deities formed its religion. The beauty and richness of legend, in whose lap Ireland then slept, are rivaled by none perhaps, save those of classic Greece herself. Tradition supplies an endless number of crags, hillsides and valleys, which were the subjects of legendary lore, and which captivated the feelings of the Celt with an irresistible spell. The history of those times is obscured by the many myths and fables interwoven with the facts handed down to us. Amid all this vagueness, however, it is plain that, in the early stages of Ireland's career, she left upon the world the impress of a most excellent civilization and that her people possessed much merit and many virtues.

BUILDING UP TRADE

METHODS PURSUED BY THE MOST SUCCESSFUL MERCHANTS.

WORK DURING DULL SEASONS

Necessity of Advertising and Meeting Competition Given by the Large City Department Stores and Mail-Order Houses.

The mid-winter period is generally the dullest in the retail trade. Why this is so is hard to explain. Farmers find a time of rest during February and March, and a portion of April, and the weather is generally such that they like to keep by their own firesides. While the country retailers may find a lull in business, it is different with the mail order houses. The farmer's leisure time affords him a chance carefully to go over the large catalogues and other advertising matter sent out to him, and quite often he is attracted by the alluring description of goods and the supposed low prices. Thus it is that the mail order houses benefit, while the local merchant loses.

One of the faults of the average merchant is that during dull times he makes no effort to increase trade. He puts into practice a system of false economy. He generally curtails his advertising bills and lets goods remain upon his shelves, that a slight effort in the right direction would remove. The mid-winter and the months of early spring are the best months for the live merchant to arrange his campaign for the year. It is a time when the residents of the rural communities have not much else to do but to read. A little stroke of enterprise on part of local merchants at this period is more likely to accomplish good than at any other time. Well prepared circulars quoting prices so that comparisons can be made with the mail order house catalogues will result in bringing considerable trade, that otherwise would be diverted by the large catalogues.

It will pay the merchant in the small town carefully to study the methods of the large department stores and to beenfit by the work of the mail order concerns. The large houses do not lie down during the dull period. They make an extra effort to gather in trade, and these efforts generally win. The present season is an exceptional one. Universal talk of panicky times has made a great class of people more economical in their every day affairs. They are looking for opportunities to save money. Low prices attract them. The merchant realizing this condition can turn matters well to account by making the right kind of effort. This is the time when intelligent appeals to common sense and the preaching of evils of concentration of capital, and the necessity of protecting home industries, will have the most beneficial effects. The home merchant has all the advantage over the foreign institution. He has the goods to show the people before they pay their money. He should be able to give as good values as the largest concern. His expenses are not one-half according to the amount of business he transacts as are the expenses of a large city department store or the mail order houses.

The trading away from home evil is up to the local merchant. He must realize that these days the back number, the lazy man and the incompetent ones cannot well succeed in mercantile life. There is competition that must be met, and it must be met in a business way. The only great lever that the catalogue houses use is that of "publicity." It is the right use of advertising space, and of advertising methods. The principles that apply to the largest concern also apply to the smallest one. It is purely a matter of degree. The merchant who does not use printer's ink these days cannot expect to make a great success in his chosen field.

D. M. CARR.

Driven Out by Pure Food Law.

During the past half dozen years there has been a constant cry for pure food, and this clamor has caused nearly all the states, and the national government as well, to enact pure food laws. If there has been need for reform it has been in bettering the classes of foods which are intended to feed the millions as well as keep them in good health, and improving the conditions under which they are prepared.

Such frauds had grown up in foodstuffs that it was imperative that stringent measures be taken to protect the lives and the health of the people. Unprincipled persons engaged in manufacturing of baking powders, flavoring extracts, the selling of spices and coffees and teas, and their products were the vilest combinations of drugs and other materials. These goods were disposed of to dishonest grocers, but the chief way of selling them was through traveling agents, and direct by mail. Not many months ago the pure food department of a western state secured a shipment of more than a dozen different articles of food from a concern that sold its products direct to the consumer. Analysis of all the articles proved each and every one adulterated. Baking powder was composed of cheap flour, starch, tartaric acid and alum; what was labeled "pure spices" consisted of ground bark and a highly concentrated flavoring substance. So it was with all the goods. Since the pure food laws have been in effect, many of these concerns have quit business.

STORES A NECESSITY.

There are pessimists who view with alarm the revolutionary forces at work in the business world. These people of narrow views solemnly announce that within a few years there will be no place for the small retailers, that the so-called country merchant will be driven out of business, and will be supplanted by large concerns that will have the trade which is now divided among a dozen or more small stores. Some of them go so far in their doleful predictions as to predict that the business of the country will be transacted in the larger cities, and that the country town shall become a thing of the past.

These woeful prophets fail to take into consideration the force of natural law in the social and the business world. They are illogical enough not to weigh the relationship of economy to trade conditions. Trade like lightning or like water, follows the lines of least resistance. Citizens and towns exist upon economic foundations. On the virgin western plains a small colony of settlers seek homes. The wants and necessities of these settlers must be supplied. The result is the establishment of a store at a central point in the new colony. This store becomes the nucleus of a town, a city in embryo. As other settlers come in, the town grows more important, new industries are established, local government is organized, roads radiate from the place, banks and other financial institutions are established, and here we have a thriving town created.

This town exists because there is a necessity for its existence, and this necessity is the working out of economic laws. Wherever communities exist, tradesmen will exist. They are a necessary part of the social and business life. They are necessary agents in the distribution of commodities. They are the outgrowth of thousands of years of commercialism, and they cannot be supplanted by any other system. Large stores of the department kind may grow up. They are also a necessity and are revolutionary in character, but there will ever remain a place for the small store. It matters not how large the city or how small the town.

FREE PREMIUM DEAL.

Get-Rich-Quick Concern Put Out of Business by Postal Department.

Verily, fishing is good for the catchers of gudgeons and the various other kinds of suckers. They are caught of every class and kind, and so numerous are they that the post office department of the government pays out thousands of dollars monthly to protect them. But whether it is worth while to keep the brainless persons from parting with their change is the question. Yet it is one of the benign features of our government machinery to protect children, women, fools and incompetents in general, and as far as possible punish those who make any department of government the means of defrauding them. Recently a fraud order was issued against a New York city mail order concern, claiming to be "dealers in any kind of merchandise." It had been doing an extensive business, and in the possession of the New York postmaster when the order went into effect were 5,000 letters, each of which was supposed to contain 88 cents to pay packing charges on a "premium; a very valuable, beautiful silver fruit dish, gold lined, and guaranteed quadruple silver plate." These articles had cost the concern 30 cents each. The letters in the post office addressed to the company were in response to a circular which informed the "lucky" person that "you answered a premium offer some time ago, and we have just completed the list of the fortunate ones who may receive presents, and are now ready to ship them. Your name is on the list, and this notice is sent that you may claim the present." Then the gentle touch of 88 cents was made to "cover expense of packing." This is only one of hundreds of similar concerns which cause the post office department great annoyance, and the unsuspecting heavy losses.

Co-Operative Scheme.

One of the latest grafts to gather in the farmers is the co-operative store game. The field for this work is prolific; the west has had prosperity that has filled the pockets of many farmers, and it has made them greedy for more, and easy victims for the man who has a scheme that promises a field for investment and the saving of more dollars. The co-operative store is a plan that takes, and everywhere a success has been made of a co-operative elevator or similar enterprise that may be in the farmers' line the promoter of the co-operative store gets busy. If only a little stock is subscribed for, all the same, as it gives the promoter and his backers a better swing, and the jobbing houses that are behind the movement will have things their own way. The big rake-off is in the supplying of goods at from ten to fifteen per cent. more than the legitimate dealer would be required to pay, and selling at a smaller percentage of profit. The salary of the manager and the clerks takes up the big share of the "profits," but as long as a showing of earnings can be made the scheme succeeds, and the regular stores find business dull. Dozens of stores of this class have failed within the past few years.

A Tip.

Never do any worrying to-day that can be put off till to-morrow.

LEVINSKY HAD GREAT SCHEME.

Bright Idea He Thought Meant Saving of Twenty-Five Dollars.

Levinsky, despairing of his life, made an appointment with a famous specialist. He was surprised to find 15 or 20 people in the waiting-room.

After a few minutes he leaned over to a gentleman near him and whispered, "Say, mine frient, this must be a pretty good doctor, ain't he?"

Levinsky seemed to be worrying over something.

"Vell, say," he whispered again, "he must be pretty exbensive, then, ain't he? Vat does he charge?"

The stranger was annoyed by Levinsky's questions and answered rather shortly: "Fifty dollars for the first consultation and $25 for each visit thereafter."

"Mine Gott!" gasped Levinsky, "$50 tollars the first time and $25 tollars each time afterwards!"

For several minutes he seemed undecided whether to go or to wait. "Und $25 each time afterwards," he kept muttering. Finally, just as he was called into the office, he was seized with a brilliant inspiration. He rushed toward the doctor with outstretched hands.

"Hello, doctor," he said effusively. "Vell, here I am again."—Everybody's Magazine.

Tarantula Not So Bad.

The terrible tarantula is said to be more abused than abusive. It is not aggressive upon man nor is it often intrusive even, although every old miner and prospector has shaken one out of his boots or blankets in the morning, and always the size of a saucer, it avoids the hot sunshine and remains well down in its burrow under the ground. About sundown it sallies forth and lies in waiting just below the opening of the burrow. It assumes this position whether it desires food or wishes only to get a bit of fresh air. It does not travel about in quest of food, even when hungry, but remains quietly in the attitude described often for hours at a time. At the near approach of a caterpillar, grasshopper, beetle or almost any creature of like size, other than its enemy, the wasp, it rushes out and seizes it, but rarely goes farther than a few inches from the opening. One fair-sized insect a week is sufficient to satisfy its hunger because of its inactive existence, while it can live several months without food, even when most active, provided it has water. In autumn the spider closes the entrance with a crudely-spun web. It is then ready to pass the winter in a semi-lethargic state, partaking of no food. In the spring it digs its way out.

A Jefferson Davis Speech.

On August 2, 1870, a party of young men engaged a band and serenaded Jefferson Davis. After the band had played "Dixie" and "My Maryland," Mr. Davis spoke these words:

"My friends, I thank you for this cordial greeting. Thrown like a wave on a restive ocean, it is something to receive this good old Virginia welcome. As long as my heart continues to beat it must be still responsive to the warm and cordial feeling of Virginians, which I have experienced in some of the contingencies of my life. This manifestation of your good feeling towards me comes from your generosity, and not from any merit of my own. May God in his infinite mercy preserve you from every ill, and may your prosperity and happiness be as wide as your borders—may your homes be peaceful, is the earnest prayer of one who has no more to say to you on this occasion."—Eugene L. Didier in Spare Moments.

Durability of Glass.

It does not seem odd to find inscriptions written ages ago still visible on the Tower of London, or on the steeple of some cathedral, but one would hardly look on a fragile panel of glass in a common window for characters 200 years old.

A notable case in point is that of the old house in London wherein the notorious Jack Sheppard once lived as a carpenter's apprentice. One of the window panes still bears an inscription cut in it by a glazier's diamond, recording the name and address of a man who preceded Jack's master in that house.

That was nine years before the coming to the house of the famous Jack Sheppard, and over 200 years ago.—Sunday Magazine.

Not a Bad Idea.

"Did you write to Flippany's," said Mrs. Nuvoe Reeshe, "for samples of all the latest style visiting cards?"

"Yes, madam," replied the secretary. "About 100 came—all sorts and sizes."

"What names were on them?" Mrs. Nuvoe Reeshe inquired eagerly.

"The very first families of the city, madam."

The matron smiled contentedly.

"Then dump 'em all," she said, "in the gold card receiver on the parlor table."

Severely Practical.

"Oh, promise me that some day you and I will take our love together to that sky—' sang one of the boarders in our boarding house, sentimentally, Sunday evening in the parlor.

"You'll have to buy an airship, Mr. Pipes, won't you?" asked little Tommie Smith in all seriousness.

ODD WEDDING RITES

MANY STRANGE AND CURIOUS CUSTOMS OBSERVED.

Unique Assyrian Marriage Ceremony Takes Place in Milwaukee—Bride Must Be Silent for Three Days After Wedding.

For three days Lizzie Herra, an Assyrian bride, surrounded by hundreds of relatives and friends, has not spoken a word, says the Milwaukee Journal.

The wedding, one of the few Assyrian weddings that has ever been held in Milwaukee, has been in progress for one week at the bride's home on Fifth street, between Wells and Cedar. All the strange customs of the mother country have been observed. Assyrians from Chicago, Escanaba, Marinette and other cities came to Milwaukee for the ceremony. Over 200 guests were present.

The bridegroom is Richard Frenn. The wedding ceremony, lasting three-quarters of an hour, was performed Sunday at two. Half an hour formed by an Assyrian Catholic priest from Chicago. For three days before the ceremony the women of the wedding party, with the bride, stayed in one house, smoking, dancing, talking.

In another house were the men, also smoking and dancing. According to the Assyrian custom, they must not mingle. In each house there was feasting and merrymaking.

The wedding ceremony was performed Sunday at two. Half an hour before it the wedding guests were allowed to enter the same house together. But the women remained in one room, the men in another. As the bride entered the house of the bridegroom, she was showered with strange flowers and confetti.

Then came the weird Assyrian custom of the handkerchief throwing. Before she could be married Lizzie Herra, the bride, must throw her handkerchief, filled with flowers, to the ceiling. And she must continue throwing it until it clings to the ceiling of the room. And all this time the guests were showering her with flowers, rice and confetti.

Again and again and again she threw the bit of linen, only to see it flutter to the floor. When it finally did remain fluttering from the ceiling the bride quietly fainted from the exertion and anxiety. But she was soon revived, and the ceremony went on.

Following the wedding there was a wedding banquet, at which only foreign dishes were served. There were chicken and rice, cooked after the fashion of the country, and eggplant, hollowed out, stuffed with mutton, the chopped meat of the eggplant and other vegetables, and baked, but no bread, cakes or sweets, as these are forbidden at wedding dinners. No knives, forks, spoons or plates were used.

Oriental pipes, with their long tubes and queer mouthpieces, were smoked, and only the purest Assyrian leaf tobacco was used. After the wedding supper came the dancing, but the women danced alone in one room, the men in another.

Platform Inspector's Theft.

Court dresses, hams, costumes, cigars, cameras and cheese were among some of the articles alleged to have been stolen by William F. Eggleston, a Great Northern railway platform inspector, who was remanded at Retford, England.

Is Willing to Rest.

Mrs. Sophia Crotto, 105, lives in old Quebec. Her voice and appetite are good, but otherwise her faculties have failed. She says she daily prays to "le bon Dieu" to take her.

SENATOR PROCTOR IS DEAD

VERMONT LEGISLATOR PASSES AWAY AT WASHINGTON.

Both Houses of Congress Adjourn as Mark of Respect—May Be Succeeded by Son.

Washington.—United States Senator Redfield Proctor of Vermont died late Wednesday afternoon after an illness of one week. His ailment was diagnosed as the grippe, which developed into pleurisy with pneumonic complications affecting the heart. He was 76 years old.

After appointing a committee to escort the body of the late Senator Proctor to Vermont and adopting a resolution of regret for his death, the senate Thursday, as a further mark of respect, adjourned for the day after a session of seven minutes. The committee appointed consists of Senators Dillingham, Daniel, Gallinger, Perkins, Tallafero, Overman and Hemenway.

Notice of the death was officially conveyed to the house by one of the clerks of the senate. Resolutions of regret were unanimously adopted and the speaker announced the following committee to represent the house at the funeral: Messrs. Foster and Haskins, Vermont; Parker, New Jersey; Littlefield, Maine; Lamb, Virginia, and Slayden, Texas. As a further mark of respect the house at 12:33 p. m. adjourned.

Senator Proctor was born in Proctorsville, Vt., June 1, 1831. He was graduated from Dartmouth college and the Albany Law school. He became a colonel in the civil war. After the war he entered the marble business and controlled the largest marble interests in the world. He recently acquired the celebrated Carrara marble quarries of Italy at a cost of $10,000,000. He was governor of Vermont from 1878 to 1880 and secretary of war under President Harrison.

Gov. Proctor is mentioned is a probable successor.

Proctor, Vt.—The funeral of the late Senator Redfield Proctor was held in the Proctor Union church here Friday, immediately after the arrival of the two special trains that brought the funeral party from Washington.

KING LEOPOLD GIVES UP.

Consideration for Surrendering Domain is $21,000,000.

Brussels.—The text of the new Congo annexation treaty was submitted to parliament Thursday by Premier Schollaert and, on his motion, was sent to committee without debate.

According to the terms of the new treaty, King Leopold agrees to abandon the crown domain and the crown foundation to Belgium. Belgium, on its part, shall not only assume all the Congo obligations, amounting to $21,000,000, but undertake also to continue the king's part in the Congo revenues during his lifetime, Belgium is specifically required to respect the concessions granted to two American companies in 1906, in which Thomas F. Ryan is interested.

Millions Involved in Action.

Portland, Me.—The American Trust company of Boston, trustees under the mortgage of the Consolidated Steam Lines of Maine and the Metropolitan Steamship company, filed bills in equity Wednesday in the United States circuit court for foreclosure of the respective mortgages. The Consolidated lines of Maine is involved to the extent of $60,000,000 and the Metropolitan company, $2,500,000.

Receiver for Company.

Laporte, Ind.—Judge C. Richter, in Laporte circuit court, on application of stockholders representing 2,000 shares of the stock of the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line company, Wednesday evening appointed George F. Mull of Indianapolis receiver for the company, for the Co-Operative Construction company and for the Goshen, South Bend & Chicago Railway company.

Musician a Suicide.

Waterbury, Conn.—Monetti Montrezza, a well-known local musician and his young son, William, died Friday as a result of taking carbolic acid and a six-year-old daughter was found nearly dead from the same cause.

Twenty Die In Gale.

London.—A violent gale swept the coasts of the British Isles Friday. There have been numerous wrecks of small craft. Most of them were on the east coast of Ireland. Altogether about 20 lives have been lost.

ECONOMY CARRIED TOO FAR.

Old Man's Thrift That Led Him Into Ridiculous Action.

President J. G. Schurman of Cornell was discussing elective college courses, of which in the freshman and sophomore years, he disapproves.

"A freshman of 16 or 17," said President Schurman, "is too young to choose for himself the courses best for him. His mind is not mature enough. It will make mistakes.

"In its immaturity, its proneness to error, it is like the mind of an old man in my native Freetown. He, though old, was mentally undeveloped, and saw nothing wrong or ridiculous in a piece of economy that he put in practice in the cemetery.

"The old man had lost four wives, and desired to erect for each a headstone, with an inscription commemorative of her wifely virtues.

"But inscriptions, he found, were very expensive. He economized in this way:

"He had the Christian name of each wife cut on a small stone above her grave—'Emma,' 'Mary,' 'Hester,' 'Edith.' Under each name a hand pointed to a large stone in the center of the lot, and under each hand were the words:

"'For epitaph see large stone.'"

THREE CURES OF ECZEMA.

Woman Tells of Her Brother's Terrible Suffering—Two Babies Also Cured —Cuticura Invaluable.

"My brother had eczema three different summers. Each summer it came out between his shoulders and down his back, and he said his suffering was terrible. When it came on the third summer, he bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and gave it a faithful trial. Soon he began to feel better and he cured himself entirely of eczema with Cuticura. A lady in Indiana heard of how my daughter, Mrs. Miller, had cured her little son of terrible eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. This lady's little one had the eczema so badly that they thought they would lose it. She used Cuticura Remedies and they cured her child entirely, and the disease never came back. Mrs. Sarah E. Lusk, Coldwater, Mich., Aug. 15 and Sept. 2, 1907."

HER SUSPICION.

"Does your husband ever admit that he was wrong?"

"Yes, frequently, but I don't suppose he ever really believes it."

Kleptomania.

It has been announced on the highest medical authority that kleptomania is more prevalent among women than among men. Be that as it may, the newest and most unique plea in this connection was that advanced by a negro in a Lynchburg (Va.) court. After listening to a long explanation from his counsel, the darky thought to impress the judge by adding his mite. So he broke in with:

"Yessah, dat's it! Jedge, yo' honah, dat's it! De chickens done hypnotize me, jedge, an' den de kleptomania come on!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

A Little Too Soon.

Sam Jackson's wife was to be buried this afternoon and the bereaved colored man was shaking with grief over the coffin, when a comely young darkey maiden stepped over to his side and said, tenderly:

"Don't, Mistah Jackson; yo' mus' try an' bear up. Let me help yo' to fo'get!"

"Oh, Miss Johnson!" uttered the weeping man, between sobs, "it am berry kind in yo' t' offah such consolation, but ah mus' wait till aftah de fun'ral befo' ah engages in marriage talk!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

THE DOCTOR'S GIFT.

Food Worth Its Weight in Gold.

We usually expect the doctor to put us on some kind of penance and give us bitter medicines.

A Penn. doctor brought a patient something entirely different and the results are truly interesting.

"Two years ago," writes this patient, "I was a frequent victim of acute indigestion and biliousness, being allowed to eat very few things. One day our family doctor brought me a small package, saying he had found something for me to eat, at last.

"He said it was a food called Grape-Nuts, and even as its golden color might suggest, it was worth its weight in gold. I was sick and tired, trying one thing after another to no avail, but at last consented to try this new food.

"Well! it surpassed my doctor's fondest anticipation and every day since then I have blessed the good doctor and the inventor of Grape-Nuts.

"I noticed improvement at once and in a month's time my former spells of indigestion had disappeared. In two months I felt like a new man. My brain was much clearer and keener, my body took on the vitality of youth, and this condition has continued."

Splendid Crops on the Former Ranching Plains of Canadian West.

That portion of the country in Western Canada formerly recognized as ranching country has developed into one of the best winter wheat districts in the continent. Yields are quoted running from 30 to 60 bushels to the acre, and giving a return to the farmer of from $25 to $50 per acre. These lands are now selling at from $12 to $20 per acre, and pay well at that figure. H. Howes of Magrath, Alberta, Western Canada, had 50 acres of land in wheat, which averaged 45 bushels to the acre; his yield of oats was 35 bushels. The value to him per acre of wheat was $35.00. J. F. Haycock of the same place, says: "I had 65 acres of wheat, 35 acres of oats and four acres of barley. My average yield of oats to the acre was 80 bushels; wheat—winter—60 bushels and red fyfe, 33 bushels, and barley, 50 bushels. The value to me per acre was, wheat, $28.00; oats, $32.00, and barley, $24.00." J. F. Bradshaw of Magrath, had 1,030 acres of wheat in crop that averaged 39½ bushels to the acre, his oats, 32 bushels; barley, 53 bushels. He threshed 31,000 bushels of wheat from 640 acres. He also had 250 tons of sugar beets from [illegible] acres worth $5.62½ per ton. W. S. Sherod, of Lethbridge, says: "I came to Lethbridge from Souris, North Dakota, in April, 1907, having purchased 900 acres of land in this district last fall. I had 128 acres of Alberta Red winter wheat which was put in on breaking in the fall of 1906, which yielded 41½ bushels to the acre, for which I received 87½ cents per bushel, which paid me $36.30 per acre. I had 190 acres "stubbled in" that is disced in on the stubble, which yielded 22 bushels to the acre at 87½ cents per bushel, which paid me $19.25 to the acre. I also had 350 acres of strictly volunteer crop, which it was intended to prepare in the summer; but when it was seen that it was a good looking crop, it was allowed to go. From this we threshed 15 bushels to the acre, which paid us at the rate of 87½ cents per bushel or $13.12 per acre. Our total crop yielded us 14,742 bushels of first-class wheat. Taking it as a whole, I consider that I had a first-class crop all through; and, taking into consideration the fact of part of the crop having been "stubbled in," and part strictly volunteer (which was never touched at all until the binder was put into it), I consider I had a heavy crop. I might say that I was in North Dakota five years, and I never grew as heavy a crop during that time. This is the 25th day of November, and my teams are still ploughing, and, from the appearance of the weather, will be for some time yet." R. W. Bradshaw of Magrath, says: "I had this year 400 acres in crop, viz.: 200 acres of wheat and 200 acres in oats. My average yield of oats to the acre was 50 bushels, and wheat, 22½ bushels. The value to me per acre for wheat was $18.00, and oats, $17.00. The highest price obtained by me this year or offered me for my grain was for wheat 82 cents per bushel, and $1.05 per hundred for oats. I also had 100 tons of hay worth $12.00 per ton, and will say my wheat was all volunteer this year. Lots of wheat is averaging from 50 to 60 bushels per acre on summer fallow, and on new breaking, when the breaking was done early in the spring." Writing from Spring Coulee, Alberta, W. L. Thompson says: "I had this year 3,000 acres in crop, viz.: 2,000 acres of wheat and 1,000 acres of oats. My average yield of oats to the acre was 30 bushels and of wheat 35 bushels. The value to me per acre for wheat was $27.00 and for oats $15.00."

The Son of Ham.

"During a revival in Texas," said Philip R. Bangs of Toledo, O., his turn for a story having come, "a negro was reputed to have had visions about Heaven and hell. His boss called him up and interrogated him as to what he saw in both places, and first as to what the white men and darkies were doing in Heaven. 'Lord, boss, the white men was all a-tilting back in their chairs, with their heels on the banisters, a-smoking cigars, and the niggers was down on their knees a-shining up their golden slippers.' Then as to what was going on at the other place. 'Ef you believe me, boss, every single white man had nigger in his hands a-holdin' him up between him and the flames.'"—Washington Herald.

The urine was discolored and though I used one remedy after another, I was not helped until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, and I was so bad then that the first box made only a slight change. What Did He Mean?

For a number of years a bitter feud had existed between the Browns and Perkinses, next door neighbors. The trouble had originated through the depredations of Brown's cat, and had grown so fixed an affair that neither party ever dreamt of "making up." One day, however, Brown sent his servant next door with a peace-making note for Mr. Perkins, which read:

Perkins' written reply was bitter:

"Mr. Perkins is sorry to hear of Mr. Brown's trouble, but he had not heard that Mrs. Brown was ill."—Harper's Weekly.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. The Walton Masonic lodge had a great meeting last Friday night, the 6th inst., when a class of five were raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. About 50 members were present, representing various lodges. D. B. Stallard presided as Master on two candidates, and then by request James A. Huey, as King Solomon; A. H. Norman as Hiram, King of Tyre, and Joseph A. Huey as Senior Deacon, the last three of Boone Union lodge, conferred the degree on the other three candidates. Their work was particularly praiseworthy and about the best witnessed here in many a day. The candidates were Walter Wolfe, of Richwood; Dr J. G. Slater, Ralph Edwards, R. F. DeMoisey and Charles Ransler, five splendid young men and valuable acquisitions to the fraternity. At the conclusion of the work D. B. Wallace, presented in a few chosen words, a handsome gold Masonic pin to Bro. De moisey, a gift for the latter's wife, and a fine Masonic apron from his uncle, S. L. Edwards; and to Ralph Edwards, a pretty gold pin from his mother and a beautiful apron from his father; and to Bro. Wolfe a neat gold pin from Bro. Raymond Byland. The brethren then adjourned to Edwards' Opera House, where a well prepared lunch of oyster soup, sardines and coffee was served, and then cigars were passed and a truly fraternal time was enjoyed by all until after the midnight hour. Among the out of town visitors beside those already mentioned were Wm. O'Neal, of Owen county; J. W. Williams and Samuel Hicks, of Union; Charles [illegible] of Hebron; Jas. Metcalfe, of Covington, and A. J. Thomas, of Richwood, and William Marshall, of Bracht. The supper was deliciously prepared by Mrs. Susie Watson, Mrs. John Stamler and Miss Graham Roberts.

Bloomington, Illinois, has recently passed through a remarkable season of revival in religious affairs. In December all the Protestant churches of the city joined in a Union Revival led by Rev. W. A. Sunday and his helpers. The campaign lasted six weeks and resulted in over 4,000 people making public confession of their faith, the majority of this number being men. Immediately after the Union Meeting, revival services were begun in nearly all the churches. At the First Christian church, the pastor, who is well known in Boone county [illegible] Edgar D. Joues, continued special services for over two weeks, resulting in 488 additions to his congregation, of which number 50 per cent are grown men and boys from 12 to 18 years of age. The First Christian church, of Bloomington, has now a resident membership of over 1600 and the congregation is so large that it has become necessary to provide the minister, Rev. Mr. Jones, with an associate pastor as well as a pastorial helper.

The appearance of the court room is greatly improved by the changes made there since the last term. The old ceiling is replaced by one of steel, tastefully tiuted; the pillars within the room have been removed and the walls bear a dull red color in harmony with the surroundings. The general effect is pleasing. Ohio county's temple of justice has probably never looked as well before.—Rising Sun Local.

L. S. Beemon received a letter from M. T. Garnett a few days ago. Mr. Garnett has been moving about considerably in Florida, this winter. He says the weather there has been the coolest he ever saw, being fine on the oranges but hard on the vegetables. He thinks it may be as late as June before he returns home. He has disposed of his old orange grove.

Charlotte Walton and Jessie Taylor have each sued the Bullittsville and Dry Creek Turnpike Co., for the sum of $2,000, damages as the result of the horse attached to their buggy backing them off the road and throwing them out of their vehicle, inflicting injuries that laid each of them up for several weeks.

FAITH IN ECLIPSE

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the author, W. E. Biederwolf.)

Scripture Authority.—1 Kings, Chapter 19.

SERMONETTE.

Elijah is not the only servant of God who has gone from glorious victory on the mountain top down into the valley of discouragement and doubt.

Here we find exemplified that which is more than apt to be characteristic of every Christian—the extremes of experience. The exaltation of the mountain top with its victories through faith, and the discouragement of the valley with its ignominious flight.

There is great contrast between the heroic figure of the prophet fearlessly facing the 950 prophets of Baal, and the fear-stricken prophet fleeing from the angry threat of a wicked woman. And yet the only difference was that in the one case faith reckoned him with God, and in the other doubt shut out the vision of God and made him forget his power.

Faith as it finds place in the life makes all the difference in the world as to the manner of expression of that life. Faith is needed in the times of great service and testing when the eyes of the people are upon us, and it is needed in the quiet moments when we have not the stimulus of active service to buoy us up.

The really weak moments of the servant of God nearly always come in the time of reaction, after the successful service has been rendered and nerves and heart and brain no longer feel the high tension.

It is in such moments of weakness that evil comes to put us to flight and makes us forget that the God who sustained on the mountain top of service is able to guard and keep during the seasons of rest and retirement.

What encouragement there is in this story of Elijah for the Christian who fails. How patiently and lovingly God dealt with him, and how loving and patient God is with his failing children. "Like as a father pitieth his children so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust."

"The flesh is weak," as God knows. We fall as did Elijah even while our hearts desire better things. But in such moments God does not cast us off. Nay, rather, he sends ministering angels to succor us and to lead us to the mountain of his presence where with the still small voice he may speak to our souls and erstore us to his fellowship and service.

THE STORY.

IT IS marvelous how quickly nature recovers from the dry, scorching period of the drought when the refreshing rain comes. We have all seen grass and leaf and flower brown and withered and dry and have judged that it was past reviving, when behold the rain has kissed its withered surface, washing away the choking dust, and the refreshing water has trickled down to the rootlets and given them drink so that they could pour new life and beauty into the plant above, and we see the face of nature transformed and beaming forth with new life and beauty.

So it was in the land of Samaria. The drought of the three years had been ended by that wonderful downpour of rain and where before there was nothing but dry, brown grass and curled, withered leaves the sun rose upon a scene of reviving green. Throughout the land there rested a subdued consciousness that it was the God of Israel who had wrought this change. If the tragic events on Mount Carmel had made the people tremble and fear before the majesty and power of God, the blessing of the rain had revived their faltering and wayward spirits and brought a new consciousness of God.

"Even Jezebel, who heretofore hath murdered the servants of the Lord, must know that the God of Israel is the one God and that Baal is no god at all," exclaimed the prophet Elijah as he walked forth the morning after his coming to Jezreel. How glad he felt that his long period of exile was over. How good to see the smiling face of nature as she struggled back to her verdinal green.

"God hath wrought mightily. Now will the people listen to the voice of God's servant and be led from the worship of Baal to the worship of the true God. The land hath been purged with the blood of the false prophets and surely now the people will throw down the high places and altars erected to these steange gods and will return to the Worship of God. I am glad that God hath permitted me to live to see this day."

And the prophet sat down beneath the shade of a friendly tree which stood in his pathway and gave himself up to the contemplation of the reforms which he hoped he would be able to bring to pass in Israel. He felt he could count on the help of the people and even of King Ahab. The shout of the people as they had seen the unswering fire of God's power descending and consuming the sacrifice, still sounded in his ears: "The Lord, he is the God; the Lord, he is the God."

"Yes," echoed the prophet, "he is the God. The people and Ahab have so declared, and even Jezebel, I verily believe, will yet give up her idols and serve the living God."

Approaching footsteps interrupted his reverie, and he looked up to see a man approaching whom he recognized as a messenger from the king by his distinguished garb.

"Perchance the king hath sent for me to consider matters of reform," was the first thought of the prophet and rising he took a step eagerly forward and then stopped as the messenger threw himself at his feet and cried:

"Evil hath been spoken against thee, and Jezebel hath sent me to say that ere to-morrow's sun hath set she will have made thee as one of the prophets whom thou didst slay at the brook Kishon."

Such a revulsion of feeling as swept over the prophet only those who have been suddenly plunged from the highest aspirations to the lowest depths of disappointment and despair can understand. The elation and hope which had been his but a moment before died within him and in its place came a sense of unutterable loneliness and weakness.

"But Ahab is not consenting to this?" he exclaimed at last.

"He raised no protest when Jezebel sent me."

"But it cannot be that he will so soon forget the experience on Mount Carmel and his acknowledgment of the true God before all the people," protested Elijah, clinging desperately to the hope that Ahab would certainly stand between him and the threat which Jezebel had made.

"Yea, perhaps he would desire to save thee, but thou little knowest the awful fury of this woman Jezebel," said the messenger, lowering his voice and stepping near the prophet as though he feared some one might overhear his words.

Sick at heart, the prophet turned. He had no heart to ask more questions or to make further protest. Silently he retraced his steps to the place where he and his servant had spent the night, and at every step the panic of fear and discouragement grew upon him. He looked with suspicion upon everyone he met, fearing they might be the avenger sent from Jezebel to fall upon him and slay him. He made a wide detour to escape a man he saw coming in the distance, and when the man called to him and proclaimed himself a messenger from the king with important tidings for him, he bade him stand at a distance and deliver his message.

"It hath been told thee what Jezebel hath sworn she would do to thee," cried the messenger. "Now, therefore, the king hath sent saying: Flee for thy life ere the queen find some hand to do her bidding and strike thee down. Make haste! Flee!"

Poor Elijah! With one cry of anguish and despair he turned and sped toward his lodgings and paused only long enough to bid his servant follow him, and then taking the road southward towards Beersheba, he fled with desperate haste, looking ever and anon behind him to make certain that he was not being pursued. On and on he went, resting neither day nor night until he had come to Beersheba, where he left his servant and then pushed on into the wilderness and at last fell from sheer exhaustion under the shade of a juniper tree.

"It is enough," he exclaimed, in anguish of spirit. "Now, O Lord, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers."

And then unconsciousness came to relieve him of the anguish and sorrow which filled his soul.

And while the prophet slept with the angels to guard him, what of the woman Jezebel back in Jezreel? In the frenzy of her mad passion she sought hither and thither for one who would carry out her threat against the prophet's life, not knowing that he had fled. All the prophets of Baal were dead and the awe and fear which came at Mount Carmel still rested upon the people, so that there was no one who dared undertake the desperate commission. In vain she searched everywhere for one who would obey her commands and then in the wild frenzy of her wicked heart she declared she would do the deed alone if there was one who would bring the prophet before her. But to her queries as to the whereabouts of the prophet there came the answer that he had gone and no one knew whither.

Worthy of Ananias.

Henry Hellenwig, a farmer of Clinton, N. J., recently gave his daughter a zither. She played the instrument about the house continuously, mastering "Old Black Joe" and "Home, Sweet Home." One afternoon Hellenwig, stretched on a lounge, looked up to the mantel where an old clock had lain tickless and backless for years. A big mouse sat within, drumming out chords with his fore-feet upon the loose coil of wire on which the hammer used to strike the hours. Three smaller mice appeared, and, each strumming on a separate wire of the coil, played "Home, Sweet Home" and "Old Black Joe." Hellenwig was lured back into slumber, from which he did not again awake until his family returned home, after dark.

HURT HOME TRADE

WHAT GREEDY, SHORT-SIGHTED PEOPLE DO.

WAYS THAT KILL CUSTOM

Fair Treatment by Tradesmen Assists in Building Up Towns and Increases Business for All.

One of the troubles in small towns seems to be that petty jealousies keep the business men from working in harmony. There is just so much business to be had, and it either goes to the home stores, the mail order houses, the department stores or some nearby city, or perhaps is let go to a more progressive neighboring town. It should be the aim of every town to make its trade territory as large as possible. It is the attitude of the business men that counts. One good, live man in business in a small town is a benefit to the whole place. He brings trade to all. People are swayed to and fro by opinions that are formed sometimes without careful reasoning. It is the best policy to treat each and every one fairly and honestly.

Let the average farmer think that he has been given the worst end of a bargain, and he will ponder over the matter for years. It is not a good idea for a merchant to have a scale of prices for different customers. Charge John Jones $12 for a suit of clothes, and sell the same suit to his neighbor, Jim Smith, for $11, and Jones will find it out and feel that he has been treated unfairly, and Jones is right about it, too. There is one town, a county seat, in a western state, a place of nearly 3,000 population. Its trade territory extends for a dozen miles in each direction. The country has a large foreign population. They are the best classes of customers, liberal buyers and not quibblers over prices. Still, they desire just treatment. A few years ago thousands of dollars in trade was diverted from the town through a dealer in agricultural implements being a poor business man. A wealthy German purchased from him several hundred dollars' worth of agricultural machinery, wagons and other goods. The farmer wanted a harrow. A price was made—$33. A few days later the farmer was at a town where there were but two stores and an elevator. He saw the same kind of harrow and was told that $28.50 would buy it. He visited the county seat a few days later, called on the man from whom he purchased his implements and again asked the price of the harrow, and was told the same as before. He then stated that the same make and kind of harrow had been offered him for $4.50 less. After some talk he was told that he could have the piece of machinery for the same price. He did not take it, but secured the one offered him by the man in the smaller town. He did not like the style of the dealer in the larger town. In fact, he concluded that the other storekeepers of the place were of the same caliber. He quit trading, and not alone was his trade lost to the county seat town, but the trade of a score of his neighbors, and even they changed their post office addresses to the smaller place. The trade of this one farmer lost to the county seat was the means of building up a healthy trade in the smaller town and bringing to it other business places. D. M. CARR.

Nonprogressive People.

A commercial club, a business men's association or whatever it may be called, that is useful in furthering the interests of any city or town is a highly useful organization. The field for work is unlimited. Its extent is only limited to the power of the members to act and accomplish. One of the chief aims of all such associations should be to advance the varied interests of the towns in which they are started. Sometimes these organizations fail in their purpose because they are not started rightly. Some person who has nothing to do but collect rent, pay his money for supplies to some mail order house, and collect interest from the bank, or the ones whose property is mortgaged to him, is made the president, or given a place on the executive board. What is the result? The club goes under. Its usefulness has been destroyed even before its organization. The only successful clubs are the ones that are under the control of the live business men of the towns, who have made their money by their business connections and who depend upon the growth of the town for their continued success. Keep the knocker out of the commercial club. He is sure to be a disturbing factor. His place in the club affords him a place to further his own selfish interests, which in ninety-nine cases out of the hundred is in keeping back every enterprise that will possibly increase his taxes.

Giving Bonuses.

The giving of a bonus to gain trade is prima facie evidence that the dealer is selling goods at a price which affords the giving away of a portion of his profits. Would it not be better to reduce the price, and with the saving to the customer he could buy whatever he wants? But the people want something for nothing, and think that they are getting it when they pay ten or fifteen per cent more than they should for goods, and in recognition of their deals receive a coupon or ticket for some article valued at about half the extra money they paid the dealer. As long as people figure this way, it seems that their wants must be satisfied.

PRICES OF COMMODITIES.

"Labor Should Reap Its Reward" Is the Key-Note of Commerce.

The matter of prices and profit is always interesting, not alone to retailers of merchandise, but to consumers as well. There has been nothing that has been so troublesome to every class as the matter of prices. It is all easy, there is no great problem to solve, and it all rests in the little phrase, "labor should reap its reward." Cost is an all important thing in every product. There is the raw material, the expense of putting the manufactured article in mercantile form. It matters not what the product is, it is the expense of preparing it for the consumer, the price of the raw material, cost of manufacture and distribution that counts. Allowance must be made for an equitable compensation to all having a part in the production of any article of commerce. We hear of cut prices, of cheapness in this or that staple, but when it is given consideration, where is the cheapness? Every article has or should have a standard value. There is no good reason why the worker in the shop should not have fair and equitable compensation for his labor. The manufacturer who has thousands of capital invested should have interest and pay for his time; the man who places the product in the hands of the retailer is entitled to pay according to his ability as a salesman, and the retailer should have equitable interest on the capital he has invested and compensation for his time and labor. Here you have all in a nutshell. The elimination of the middleman destroys one of the established customs and industries. When any article of commerce is placed on the market at a lower price than cost of manufacture and the expense of placing it before the consumer, somebody is the loser. Here is food for reflection, and it behooves the merchants and consumers to think the matter over.

THE OLD HITCHING POST.

It May Be Useful, but Is Unsightly and Generally a Town Nuisance.

That good old hitching post! What a familiar object to all of us who had the good fortune to be reared near a country town. Still, while tender memories hang around the old post, there is much about it at times worthy of condemnation. There is nothing that makes a main street of a small town look so shabby and thoroughly countrified and back-woodish as a row of rickety old hitching posts on each side of the street. Constant trampling and pawing near them makes holes in the ground, unsightly mud-holes in damp weather and ill-smelling and offensive in numerous respects. It may appear a bit of enterprise on the part of the merchant to erect a number of posts in front of his store, but does he gain business by it? How often do you see Farmer Shortcross drive in, tie his team to the post in front of Smith's store and go over to Green's to do his trading? As long as hitching posts are allowed to occupy places in front of stores on main streets it will be impossible to keep the streets in the neat and good condition that they should be in. Far better to have on some unoccupied street within easy reach of the business sections posts where the farmers can hitch their teams. Every town which has the power to control its own affairs should make regulations that will keep the hitching post from "ornamenting" the main streets.

Merit vs. Prizes.

Premium schemes and prize offerings held out as bait to the people to get them to use certain brands of goods should be very carefully considered. The most common plan is the certificate deal, by which is promised some article represented to be worth the total amount paid for goods, if only a certain number be saved. Common business sense assures that when such a proposition is made the goods must be of an inferior quality, or that there is a catch somewhere. Goods of merit do not have to carry a prize in order that they be in demand. People are quick to buy goods of merit, particularly in the staple line, if they know of them. Of the standard brands of foodstuffs, of cigars, of thread, of different other things, how many are giving prizes? This is not the case with numerous classes of goods that are sold with a premium attachment. Most of them are of inferior quality and the price paid for them more than covers the cost of the premium given. It is the old glimmer of getting something for nothing, and the women who want trading stamps, or a prize with their purchases, pay pretty dearly "for their whistles."

Unwise Competition.

There cannot be a doubt but that competition stimulates trade; but trade is the natural outgrowth of civilization and found its origin when intelligent man discovered that he had a few wants, and that they could be supplied by commodities others possessed and which he did not have himself, and that he had a surplus of things that he could trade for articles others had and which he needed. Thus it can be seen that want, demand, supply, all go to make up that which is the life of trade. Competition is merely an indication of a man's ambition to excel his neighbor, to gain more in barter and trade than what would in ordinary channels come to him. It is merely to seek, to reach out after things desired. From the fact that 90 per cent of those who engage in the mercantile business fail, it seems more appropriate to say that competition, unhealthy and not directed by sound judgment, instead of being the life of trade, is one of its fatal diseases.

PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. 2.

Dr. Hartman has claimed for many years that Peruna is an EXCELLENT CATARRH REMEDY. Some of the doctor's critics have disputed the doctor's claim as to the efficacy of Peruna.

Since the ingredients of Peruna are no longer a secret, what do the medical authorities say concerning the remedies of which Peruna is composed?

Take, for instance, the ingredient HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS, OR GOLDEN SEAL. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrhal jaundice (catarrh of the liver), and in diseased mucous membranes of the pelvic organs. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, CORYDALIS FORMOSA, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic.

CEDRON SEEDS is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. THE SEEDS ARE TO BE FOUND IN VERY FEW DRUG STORES. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE.

OIL OF COPAIBA, another ingredient of Peruna, is classed by the United States Dispensatory as a mild stimulant and diuretic. It acts on the stomach and intestinal tract. It acts as a stimulant on the genito-urinary membranes. Useful in chronic cystitis, gastro-enteritis, entery and diarrhea, and some chronic diseases of the liver and kidneys.

Our Peruna Tablet Is Peruna With Fluid Removed.

These opinions as to the ingredients of Peruna are held by all writers on the subject, including Bartholow and Scudder.

OF HYDRASTIS, BARTHOLOW SAYS it is applicable to stomatitis (catarrh of the mucous surfaces of the mouth), follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), chronic coryza (catarrh of the head). This writer classes hydrastis as a stomachic tonic, useful in atonic dyspepsia (chronic gastric catarrh), catarrh of the duodenum, catarrh of the gall duct, catarrh of the intestines, catarrh of the kidneys (chronic Bright's disease), catarrh of the bladder, and catarrh of other pelvic organs.

BARTHOLOW REGARDS COPAIBA as an excellent remedy for chronic catarrh of the bladder, chronic bronchitis (catarrh of the bronchial tubes).

BARTHOLOW STATES THAT CUBEB, an ingredient of Peruna, promotes the appetite and digestion, increases the circulation of the blood. Useful in chronic nasal catarrh, follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), increasing the tonicity of the mucous membranes of the throat. It also relieves hoarseness. Useful in atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), and in chronic catarrh of the colon and rectum, catarrh of the bladder, prostatorrhea, and chronic bronchial affections.

MILLSPAUGH, MEDICINAL PLANTS, one of the most authoritative works on medicinal herbs in the English language, in commenting upon COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, says that it acts on the pneumogastric and vaso motor nerves. It increases the secretions of the mucous membranes in general. In the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Carolina, collinsonia canadensis is considered a panacea for many disorders, including headache, colic, cramp, dropsy and indigestion. DR. SCUDDER regards it highly as a remedy in chronic diseases of the lungs, heart disease and asthma.

These citations ought to be sufficient to show to any candid mind that Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Surely, such herbal remedies, that command the enthusiastic confidence of the highest authorities obtainable, brought together in proper combination, ought to make a catarrh remedy of the highest efficacy.

This is our claim, and we are able to substantiate this claim by ample quotations from the HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

A New Woman's Marriage.

Mrs. Elinor Glyn, the English novelist, who attempts, in her little books, to shock in the French manner, derided the "new woman" at a dinner in New York.

"These new women, with their clubs and their fierce chins," she said, "make me think of a conversation I heard once at a dance.

"'So your sister, the senior wrangler,' one girl said to another, 'is very happily married, I hear?'

"'Indeed she is,' the other girl answered. 'She is most happily married. Her husband daren't open his mouth in her presence.'"

WRITERS' HARD FATE

LITERARY MEN WHO HAVE DIED IN DESTITUTION.

Long List of Talented Poets, Historians and Other Masters of the Pen Whose Last Days Were Full of Misery.

That Ouida should have died as she did in poverty and loneliness, an exile, though a voluntary one, from the land of her birth, was an undoubtedly pitiful ending to an exceptionally brilliant career. Equally sad has been the fate reserved for some literary geniuses in the past.

For instance, Richard Savage, the gifted poet, died in a debtor's prison at Bristol, after enduring the pangs of semi-starvation for years. Chatterton, driven desperate through hunger, poisoned himself at the age of 18. Swift died mad, as he had all along predicted he would.

Dr. Dodd, whose "Beauties of Shakespeare" is well known, was hanged for forgery. George Gissing, after suffering hardships that embittered his whole existence, died just as fame was beginning to be assured to him.

Stow, the famous antiquarian, author of the "Survey of London," became in his old age a licensed beggar, asking alms from door to door "through 36 counties." Wycherley, from being the spoiled idol of society, fell to the lowest depths of destitution, and was eventually consigned to the Fleet prison for debt, where he remained seven years. Cotton also spent many years in a debtor's prison, and eventually died there by his own hand.

Robert Burns, writing only 14 days before his death, implored his friend Cunningham to use his influence with the commissioners of excise in order got his salary raised from £35 a year to £50, "otherwise, if I die not of disease, I must perish with hunger."

Llorente, the learned and talented historiographer of the inquisition, was glad during the close of his brilliant but unfortunate career to hire himself out for a few sous a night to keep watch over the dead bodies at the Paris morgue, and died eventually of starvation. Camoens begged his bread from door to door until compelled to take refuge in an almshouse, where he died.

It is told of Ben Jonson that when in his last illness King Charles sent him a small sum of money he returned it. "He sends me so miserable a donation," cried the dying poet, "because I am poor and live in an alley. Go and tell him his soul lives in an alley."

Very sad was the fate of Ulrich von Hutten, one of the greatest writers Germany has ever produced. Unable to earn a living, he was reduced to tramping through the country, begging food and shelter from the peasants. One bitter winter's night he was refused both, and next morning was found frozen stiff and cold in the drifting snow outside the village. "The only thing he died possessed of besides the rags he wore," says his biographer, Zuinglius, "was a pen."

Saint-Simon, the celebrated French author, who wrote "The Reorganization of European Society," was twice driven by want to attempt his own life, and although he died a natural death in the end it was among the most lamentable surroundings. "For 15 days," he says, "I have lived upon bread and water, without a fire; I have even sold my clothes."

Scintillations of Two Great Men.

John R. Dockefeller and John Bendrick Kangs were about to board the steamer for a trip on the ocean.

"I presume, Mr. Dockefeller," remarked Mr. Kangs, "you are pretty well heeled for this journey?"

"By my sole, yes!" solemnly answered Mr. Dockefeller. "That sort of knocks the socks off you, doesn't it?"

"That," said Mr. Dockefeller, with a humorous gleam in his eye, reminds me of a yarn—"

"Spin it!" tittered Mr. Kangs.

"I can't remember it," laughed Mr. Dockefeller.

"Then forget it!" chuckled Mr. Kangs.

Timid teh laughter and applause of the bystanders the vigilant correspondents hastened to the telegraph office and sent verbatim reports of this conversation, with its unexpected turns of humor and its sparkling repartee, to all the papers in the country.

The Mares of Mahomet.

In bygone days there was no more enthusiastic breeder of horses than the prophet Mahomet. In the course of time he became the owner of a vast number of mares, and the point was how to arrive at a selection of the very best. At last he hit upon the following scheme:

For three days and nights the mares were kept without water, then they were loosed, and as might have been expected, tore madly off to their usual watering place. Just as they were on the very brink of the water the trumpeter blew the war signal or assembly. Maddened with the thirst, the mares forgot their training, all save five, who, forgetting their own urgent need, galloped at once to seek their masters.

These five mares were set apart by Mahomet as representing the pick of his stud, and from them, we are told, descended the best and noblest breed of horses.—Country Life.

DRAMA IN LONELY INN.

One evening an old man, who seemed to be unwell, made his appearance at the inn and asked for accommodation. Avignon invited him in, and left the stranger alone with his little nephew while he went on with his work.

When he reentered the room, the boy, childlike, observed that there would be no need to salt the potatoes, as the old man had put salt into the saucepan in which they were boiling during Avignon's absence.

If Avignon had any suspicions he concealed them, but when they sat down to supper, and the old man refused to take any of the potatoes, the innkeeper acted in a way that must have astonished the guest. Avignon took down his gun, and, covering the stranger with it, commanded him to partake of the vegetables; and despite the protests and excuses of the old man he was obliged to eat. No sooner had he done so than he fell to the ground in great agony, and soon after expired.

Avignon searched him, and found in his pockets, besides a revolver and a knife, a whistle. The latter suggested an idea to the innkeeper. With the gun still ready for emergencies, he blew the whistle, and on two men running towards the inn, he fired. Neither appeared to be hit, but the unexpected nature of their reception caused them to turn tail, heedless of the fate of their accomplice.

The plot, thus frustrated by the observation of the little boy, seems to have been aimed at the savings which Avignon is generally credited with having. Having poisoned Avignon, his sister and his nephews, they could have possessed themselves of whatever there was worth taking in the inn and have got quietly away.

"There was an Argyllshire elder," said Dr. Aked, "whom I asked, one day in London, how his kirk was getting along.

"'Aweel,' said he, 'we had 400 members. Then we had a division, and there were only 200 left. Then came a disruption, and only ten remained. Then we had a heresy trial, and now there's only me and ma brither Dugald left, and I have great doots of Dugald's orthodoxy.'"

Million Labels a Day.

Messrs. Bass & Co., the brewers, have recently placed what is probably the largest contract that the world has known for labels. The order is for the supply of the well-known red-triangle label which is supplied by Messrs. Bass to the bottlers who handle their pale ale. The order works out at rather more than 1,000,000 labels a day for each of the working days of the year. It is handled by a staff of some 80 workpeople, who devote their whole time to this one contract.

IN MANY LINES OF BUSINESS.

Witness Evidently Was a Man of Unusual Qualifications.

S. T. Jocelyn of Wichita was court stenographer for Judge Pancoast of Oklahoma for several years. One time a case was being tried before Judge Pancoast and they were endeavoring to find out through a witness whether there had been any liquor sold.

"What is your business?" asked the lawyer. "My business?" repeated the witness inconically. "Oh, I have lots of business." "Answer the question," said the lawyer. "What is your business?" "Must I tell all my business?" insisted the witness again. "Answer the question," interposed the judge severely.

"Well," responded he cheerfully, "I'm deputy sheriff and city marshal for Guiner, janitor of the church and bartender of the El Paso saloon."—Kansas City Times.

EYESIGHT WAS IN DANGER

From Terrible Eczema—Baby's Head a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores —Disease Cured by Cuticura.

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a newborn baby. She has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Budke, LeSueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 2, '07."

His Choice.

A country clergyman on his round of visits interviewed a youngster as to his acquaintance with Bible stories.

"My lad," he said, "you have, of course, heard of the parables?"

"Yes, sir," shyly answered the boy, whose mother had inducted him in sacred history. "Yes, sir."

"Good!" said the clergyman. "Now which of them do you like the best of all?"

The boy squirmed, but at last, heeding his mother's frowns, he replied.

"I guess I like that one where somebody loafs and fishes."

LUMBAGO

This is really Rheumatism of the Muscles of the Loins and is characterized by a severe, at times, agonizing pain in the small of the back, allowing the sufferer scarcely a moment's rest, while the ailment is at its worst. It can come from cold, exposure to draft, from getting wet feet or wearing wet or damp clothing. It causes acute suffering, and if allowed to become chronic it may permanently disable the sufferer. The way to secure quickest relief is to redden the skin over the painful part by rubbing with a flesh brush or piece of flannel rag, and then apply ST. JACOBS OIL by gentle friction with the hand.

CLIMATE IS IDEAL

GREAT WEALTH ACQUIRED IN GROWING GRAIN.

Writing from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, W. H. Ellwanger, who was formerly a resident of Green Mountain, Iowa, says: "The climate in summer is ideal for growing grain. Long, clear days of sunshine, no bad storms. We never need to guard against cyclones; I never saw a better climate in my life. We made more money during the season of 1906 than any previous five years in central Iowa—one of the best districts in the state." But Mr. Ellwanger was a resident of the town, and it might be more interesting to read what a farmer has to say about Western Canada. From hundreds of letters all filled with words of praise, recounting success in Western Canada there has been one selected. It is as follows:

Paynton, Sask., Canada,
Dec. 10th, 1907.

To Whom This May Concern:

I moved to this address February 3, 1907, from Montgomery, Iowa, and took a homestead 35 miles north of Paynton. It was cold when I moved here but it did not stay cold long; it broke up the 8th of February, and was not so cold after that but the spring was late on account of the heavy snow fall, but in spite of the late spring I saw better grain than I ever saw in the states, raised this year. I helped a man finish sowing oats the 4th of July and they made fair oats. In a good year oats will go 100 bushels to the acre and wheat 25 to 50; all root crops do well here. I saw turnips weigh 7 and 8 pounds. I raised potatoes this year that measured 11¼ inches one way and 18½ the other in circumference. This is a fine stock country; hay in abundance, good water, plenty of fuel, free and plenty of building material—the government gives us timber to saw into lumber and we can get it sawed for about $6.00 per thousand. All small fruit grows wild here, then there are ducks, geese, grouse, pheasants, deer, moose, elk and fish in abundance. I was over to Turtle Lake yesterday where there is lots of fishing being done this winter. I saw about a carload of white fish in one pile. I gave 25 cents for 86 pounds of fish. What do you think of that, Brother Yankee? I think this is a fine place both to make money and to live. There was an old man up here visiting his brother-in-law. Now this man owns land close to Des Moines, Iowa, and is in good circumstances, but he took a homestead and says he will be contented if he can only put in the rest of his days in Canada. He would get up in the morn and look out of the door and say: "Well, who wouldn't live in Canada?" Now I have been in 13 different states in the United States, and I never saw the chance that there is here for a man that has a little muscle and a little brains. Three cheers for Canada! (Signed.)

W. A. SPICE."

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. "The emigration from the neighboring State," says the Lawrenceburg Press, "to our fair State goes on continuously. The clerk of the steamer Hattie Brown reports having crossed over within the past month twenty-five families to Indiana soil. This is only what might be said of every boat that plies the Ohio in the passenger trade. Most of these emigrants are tenants, but they have the making of good citizens and are here for the same reasons our fathers crossed the Atlantic—to better their condition. They are industrious, law abiding and are anxious to improve their surroundings and give their families the benefit of the better educational facilities this state affords. It is a case of history repeating itself. Throughout southern and central western Indiana a considerable part of the population are descendants of Kentuckians who came over to this state when it was new."

With two candidates in the field the campaign for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district is fairly under way, with the prospects of several Richmonds entering the field of contest in the next few weeks. The manner in which the nomination will be made will have some weight with some of the prospective candidates in making up their minds as to whether they will announce. The district committee will be called together in a few weeks for the purpose of deciding, the time, place and manner of selecting the nominee, and it is hoped its action will be wholly in the interest of the party, regardless of what candidate or candidates chances may be benefitted or injured thereby. The welfare of the party is of far more importance than the man.

In his speech at the banquet given in his honor at Frankfort, last Thursday night, Ex-Governor Beckham announced his determination never to run for public office again and to devote his life to the practice of law. He bitterly denounced the seven Democratic members of the General Assembly who refused to vote for him for Senator, assailed the Courier-Journal, its editor and representatives; demanded a reorganization of the Democratic party by reading out of its councils those who opposed him, and called on the Democrats of the State to unite in establishing a party organ in Louisville. He charged that the whisky interests had spent large sums of money in bringing about his defeat and that every man who did not vote for him was directly or indirectly connected with the whisky business.

The Interior-Journal concludes a long editorial, in which it attempts to read the Courier-Journal out of the Democratic party, as follows:

> We do not care what wing of the party the delegates may have trained with when we had factions in the party; what we want now is a State convention made up of real Democrats; they will do the rest.

So say all. But when did the Democrats in Kentucky hold a convention of that kind? For years they have been dominated by those to whom the Democratic party's interest was only secondary, and therein lies the party's present troubles.

Col. Clifford Nadaud, candidate for Congress, spoke at Williamstown on the 9th inst. In opening his address he said: "I do not presume to be a leader or a dictator, but simply a plain, private soldier in the ranks of Democracy, realizing that I have no more right or no more claim to a seat in the Federal Congress than any one of you. I hope to win your support by deserving it." And in closing said. "You are to consider me and my candidacy only if to do so will, in your judgment, tend to the benefit of Democracy. If I should be nominated and elected I will do my duty. I would not promise less; I could not promise more."

Ollie M. James, Kentucky's big congressman is being pushed to the front as the future leader of the Democratic hosts in Kentucky. Mr. James has never made himself obnoxious to any of the factions with which the party is afflicted, nor has he been pushing himself to the front. The people recognize his real worth as a public man, and his party is willing to trust its affairs to him for straightening out.

Following is Governor Beckham's political program as laid out by some of his closest friends: Chairman of the coming Democratic State convention; delegate-at-large to the National Democratic convention; instructed for Vice-President by the State convention; a candidate for Governor in 1911; a candidate for United States Senator in 1912. Is there anything else that the Governor may want?

An Illinois farmer has discovered that a better quality of ice than the ice man can make in the summer, or than nature makes in the winter, can be made out of snow. In an ordinary hay press he experimented in baling snow last winter, and found it a decided success. During a recent big snow he had a force of men baling snow for next summer's use.

According to the New York Sun, Mr. Bryan is going to have Mr. Watterson's candidate as a sure enough opponent, and it predicts he will go to the convention with the delegates of several very important States instructed for him. Minnesota has led off for Gov. Johnson.

The General Assembly that adjourned yesterday did about as little harm as any of its predecessors in many years. It did one thing, however, it created a doubt as to the birth place of Abraham Lincoln, Washington county having set up a claim to that distinction.

The Boyle county Democrats held an indignation meeting at which they were not at all backwards in an expression of their opinion of Representative Lillard, who betrayed them and voted for Ex-Governor Bradley for U. S. Senator.

The General Assembly has provided that the head of each family shall have one dog free of tax, and that all other dogs shall be taxed fifty cents per head for the purpose of providing a fund with which to pay for sheep killed by dogs.

The Verona Local took very appropriate action in regard to the recent attempt to burn J. C. Hume's tobacco. Such action on the part of all the locals would lessen the tension considerably.

The sale by the Society of Equity of one thousand hogsheads of tobacco to the American Tobacco Company has the appearance of an entering wedge of considerable proportions.

The time has come again when many of the federal office holders can be found at their offices only on pay day. A President and Congressmen are to be elected this fall. See?

The political fat friers will soon be in the land again. They are a terror to those who hold office by appointment, and not particularly admired by many others.

Indications are that about one half of Grant county's Democratic male population will be candidates for county offices at the next general election.

The Legislature adjourned yesterday.

CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES

What never leak? Exactly; never leak, never needs repairs of any kind, and last as long as the building itself. Neither melting snow, nor the worst driving rain can possibly reach the interior of the building that's covered with Cortright Metal Shingles. Pretty good recommendation isn't it? In addition we might add they're fire-proof and lightning proof too. Think of it! and they are not as expensive as other forms of roofing. Step in and we'll show them to you.

Livestock was taken through the winter just now closing with about as little labor and expense to the farmer as could be expected in this latitude. There has been no real, severe weather, only a few days when cattle and other stock could not graze, consequently the minimum amount of food has been required, while the work looking after and caring for animals has been light,

Bills for the 1908 season of the great German Coach Horse, Wymann, No. 4077, owned by the Verona German Coach Horse Company, were printed at this office, last week. The company owning this great horse is composed of several of the enterprising citizens of Verona neighborhood, who have made a considerable investment in this horse in order that the horses in that part of the county may be brought up to a higher standard of excellency. Wymann has to be seen to be appreciated.

A little girl of Walter Rector, of Locust Grove neighborhood, came very near losing her life from eating poison, one day last week. The little tot succeeded in getting hold of some arsenic that had been put in a safe, and ate so much that it made her vomit very freely, resulting in the saving of her life. The child's mother was in the room and discovered what it had done, and summoned a doctor, who lost [illegible] time in responding, but his efforts would have been fruitless had the child not eaten so much of the poison as to contract its effects.

Prof. A. M. Yealey, of Florence, was a caller at this office, last Saturday. Prof. Yealey, in the matter of service, is one of the oldest teachers in the county. He has wielded the rod so successfully in the Florence school for the seven years last past, that the patrons of that school could not be induced to dispense with his services. He is so popular with his people that no other teacher ever thinks of applying for the school at Florence, and no sooner does he complete a term of school than the patrons have another school made for him. Mr. Yealy is evidently a fixture at Florence.

"Onnie" Rouse, who lives about three miles south of Burlington, has been experimenting with a considerable stretch of dirt road for several weeks, and the result has been eminently satisfactory, the road that was given attention being in good condition all the time while the remainder of it was very bad. All he has done was to use a good drag on the road immediately following every rain. The drag filled all the holes, leaving no place in which the water could accumulate and afterwards cause the dirt to form mud. The rural mail carriers would like to have all the roads over which they travel given the Rouse treatment.

Mr. John Gilligan who moved to Greenup county some time since, writes from Letitia: "Friends, this leaves us all well. We have lots of winter, and snow is all the go here. I like this county very much. It is a number one country for corn and potatoes. There is not much fruit here. We have a good market at Portsmouth, Ohio. We have good schools and pretty fair roads. We are only five miles from the C. & O. Railroad. We have two good fairs, one at Portsmouth, the other at Vanceburg. They work nothing but mules and cattle here. There is a great deal of fine timber in this section. Fox hunters have a good time here chasing foxes and wild cats. In summer we have to fight rattlesnakes."

A very large crowd attended the Aylor sale at Hebron on the 11th inst., and everything brought good prices. Corn, 70 cents a bushel; sheep, $8 60 a head; horses from $150 to $175. J. B Crigler was the auctioneer. A good sale lunch was served at noon.

Dr. W. O. Rouse, who, with his wife, is spending the winter at St. Petersburg, Florida, writes Jailer Sammie Adams that he has been having a fine time on the gulf with a fishing party, and that he is enjoying various kinds of vegetables grown in his own garden.

This season of the year horses are liable to have scratches if they are used on the dirt roads and their legs are neglected. Nothing that is not more serious annoys a horse as scratches do, and they can be avoided by giving the animal proper attention after it has been on the dirt roads.

Uncle Sam's Vast Resources.

Our vast ascendency not only in acquired wealth, but in the resources through which new wealth can be created, enables us to command the world's co-operation in every exigency. The United States stands first in the production of many staple commodities, and beats all the rest of the world combined in the yield of mineral oil, copper, cotton and corn. In an age of electricity, copper is an article of prime and constantly increasing necessity, and the world will have to come to us for most of its supply. It is coming to us, and it will come to us for more of it in 1908 than it got here in 1907. In a period in which cotton, as an agent of civilization, is pushing its conquering march round the globe, we are producing three-fourths of the world's cotton, and we could readily double our present output of it. The copper, the cotton, the wheat, the oil, the corn, the meats and the other staples which we are exporting to Europe, Asia and Africa in immense quantities these days, says Circle Magazine, are creating for us the credits abroad which have been bringing to us streams of gold beyond the dreams of Midas. Those were magnificent tributes to the United States' command over the world's prizes of fortune which the Imperial Bank of Germany and the Bank of England paid us when they advanced their rates of discount two or three times recently, with the vain hope of checking the current of gold which was flowing to us.

A Chicago woman in an effort to keep her husband home at night played that she had been bound to the bedpost by burglars, who tossed things about the house in a very promiscuous manner. It has been a problem from time immemorial how to keep hubby at home. Women have tried various methods, such as putting on their most attractive gowns, having a box of cigars on the table and plenty of good things to eat, but without marked success. They have shifted to tears, reproaches, reading aloud passages from old love letters and veiled threats that they would go home to mother. But even these have had no great effect. About the only reliable, sure-to-work way is to marry a man so crippled up with rheumatism that he can't get out. Thus his loving wife occasionally may have the pleasure of his society.

Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, for many years physical director of Harvard university, and all his life concerned in the physical training of young men and young women, has found by observation and measurement that high scholarship men and women as a class are physically defective. Pale faces, sunken eyes, flat chests, round shoulders and small, flabby muscles are characteristic of them, he declares. On the other hand, the leaders in athletics too often have flabby intellectual muscles. The conditions form a strong argument for making physical training a part of the regular college curriculum. This is already the practice in some colleges for men and in most colleges for women. It might well be in all.

The establishment of a national bureau of health is regarded as one of the things which may be accomplished by the present congress. A committee of 100 men of science has consulted with the president in regard to it, and he has appointed a committee to advise with him. The purpose is to establish a bureau which will have power to deal with interstate and international questions of quarantine and health, and will have a wide range for the collection of information and general dissemination of knowledge among the people. One of the first steps will be a redistribution of the scientific bureaus of the government, in order that they may work more efficiently.

The merchant tailors, in convention assembled, have now considered the subject of the proper style of dress for men in the coming season, and have issued their edict on the subject. The particularly gratifying thing about the prescribed rules and regulations for masculine garments is that they are not rigidly obligatory, and men can abide by them, or not, as they please. That is wherein the tailors lack the advantage enjoyed by the dressmakers. The tyranny of the tailors is not so complete.

It is to be noted that the members of the "Women's Proposal club" of Los Angeles do not agree to marry the men who may accept their proposals of marriage. Becoming engaged and marrying are two different matters.

Siberia contains one-ninth of all the land on the globe. Great Britain and all Europe, except Russia, together with the whole of the United States, could be inclosed within its boundaries.

IS ONLY ONE CURE

TARIFF REVISION ALONE CAN CURB THE TRUSTS.

Congressman Rainey Exposes the Insincerity of the President and Other Republican Leaders in Standard Oil Case.

On February 13 Mr. Rainey of Illinois made an excellent speech on the tariff. Mr. Rainey is the man who so vigorously attacked the watch trust in the last congress. His recent speech, however, dealt with the Standard Oil trust and the president's attitude towards it. It was made in support of his bill to exempt from duty petroleum and its products.

Mr. Rainey is not one of those Democrats who applaud every adcaptandum trick of Mr. Roosevelt. "The effort is made by the president," said he, "to prove that he is engaged in a terrific warfare against the Standard Oil. As a matter of fact, the Standard Oil has not paid the fine of $29,000,000 recently assessed against it, and no effort has been made to collect it. Like the revision of the tariff, the collection of a fine has been postponed until after election. When the elections have been held the friends of the tariff and the Standard Oil will, as they hope, postpone both the revision of the tariff and the collection of the fine."

Furthermore, he showed that the Standard Oil was making 60 per cent. profit on its capital; that its product was protected to the extent of 15 cents per gallon, though ostensibly on the free list; that it sold its products abroad much cheaper than at home; and that the tirades against it by the president were not sincere, because the president was opposed to any reduction of the tariff before the coming election. "At the present time," said he, "a new method has been devised to postpone the revision of the tariff. It is a tariff commission which is to be composed of Republican tariff experts. The Republican idea of a tariff expert is a man who is either in favor of maintaining the schedules just as they are, or of revising them upward."

Mr. Rainey's speech was perhaps the severest arraignment of the Dingley tariff law that has been made this session. In this connection it may be well to remember that on March 31, 1897, when that bill was under consideration in the house of representatives, the Democrats voted solidly for, and the Republicans solidly against, a motion to recommit the bill, with instructions to report the same back to the house with amendments placing upon the free list all articles manufactured, purchased or controlled by any combination or organization of persons, formed in the United States for the purpose of limiting, regulating or controlling the supply or price of any such article. Record, Vol. 30, p. 557. If this motion had prevailed, the instructions been carried out and a bill in conformity with them enacted, there would not have been to-day a single trust in the United States. But the motion was defeated by a solid Republican vote, and hence the president's buncombe tirades against trusts are but so many indictments of himself and his own party. The cure for trusts is not vulgar billingsgate and false pretense, but tariff revision along the lines proposed by the Democrats in 1897.

Is Our Navy Inefficient?

We have all been proud of our navy and it seems strange, after lavishing so many millions upon it, that it should be thought necessary by Admiral Converse to defend it from the attack of those who declare it is not equal in efficiency to the navies of other countries. The admiral declares "our ships are not inferior to those in foreign services." We should hope not. But why are our battleships not superior? Why vote millions every year to build ships that are not superior? President Roosevelt is an ardent advocate of a greater navy, but it would seem to be a waste of money to build more battleships until we know that the type is superior to those being turned out by other countries. Before making any appropriations for more battleships there should be an investigation why there is any need to defend the efficiency of those ships already in commission. It is alleged by some that the committees on naval affairs of both houses of congress are influenced by lobbyists of rival constructors and that we are being swindled both as to cost and efficiency.

Congressman Lloyd's resignation of the position of Democratic "whip" of the house means only that he is getting ready to tackle the larger job of whipping the Republicans in the fight for control of the house in the November election.

Former Gov. Pennypacker, the great and good Quay experiment in Pennsylvania Republican politics, finds himself mixed up in the state house graft scandal by having attempted to whitewash those who engineered the steal.

Mr. Harriman to be a presidential delegate? Possibly. He acted in that capacity four short years ago, and whooped for Roosevelt, under an apparent misapprehension.

The Pittsburg stock exchange has at last been opened again, but the Pittsburg financiers are not as flush as they once were, and speculative business lags.

SEES DANGER IN POLICIES.

Senator Rayner's Effective Criticism of the President.

The recent utterances of Senator Rayner in regard to the president's policies are highly important. Senator Rayner gives the president credit for sincerity, but regards the remedies suggested by him for existing abuses as either unconstitutional or impracticable, and, therefore, utterly futile or utterly vicious—futile whenever impracticable and vicious whenever unconstitutional. Like Jefferson and Madison, he views the powers of the federal government as resulting solely from the compact to which the states are parties, and as limited by the plain sense and intention of the instrument constituting that compact. He regards those powers as being no further valid than they are authorized by the grants enumerated in that compact, and deplores the deliberate, palpable and dangerous attempts on the part of the president to exercise, himself, and to induce congress to exercise, other powers which are either not granted or expressly prohibited by that compact. He points out instances in which the president has manifested a disposition, if not actual determination, to enlarge the federal powers by forced construction of the constitutional charter which defines those powers, the obvious tendency and inevitable result of which would be to transform the present republican system of the United States into an absolute or, at best, a mixed monarchy.

Senator Rayner did not like certain features of the Aldrich currency bill, and objected especially to the commingling of the taxing power with the power to coin money and regulate its value. "I do not for a moment favor the artificial method of taxation that is to force the currency back and contract expansion when money is no longer needed," said he; "I would force contraction, not taxation, but by increasing the reserves."

To prevent the taxing power, as the Aldrich bill proposes to do, by amalgamating it with a distinct and wholly different power would be an outrage. But the president favors this unconstitutional proposition.

Senator Rayner also charged the president with having "unconsciously contributed to the misfortunes that have overtaken us;" with having terrified every manufacturing industry in the land; with having impressed the public mind with the idea that "every man engaged in a large business transaction is a malefactor."

After enumerating several remedies suggested by the president, which he declared to be "utterly impossible of accomplishment by the federal government," Senator Rayner added: "I am, as I have often asserted in this chamber, against him whenever he proposes to subvert the rights of the states and invoke the federal authority."

Hungry Men.

The New York American lately had a picture of a long line of hungry men lined up at the "American wagon" awaiting their turn to receive coffee and sandwiches, of which Mr. Hearst is the kindly donor. At 12 o'clock every day in the same city a similar dole is extended to another long line of hungry men by a city institution. In Seattle, in the state of Washington, it is stated that 12,000 men are out of work and hungry. Soup kitchens are being organized to keep body and soul together of those who have hunted in vain for a job, and similar conditions prevail elsewhere. There is surely something wrong with the boasted Republican prosperity, or these things would not be. Whether it is the tariff and the trusts, or financial imbecility, the times are out of joint, and our Republican managers do not seem to know how to mend them. Reforms are surely necessary to abolish monopoly which has brought this sudden breakdown of prosperity and the question will naturally occur to the voters if it is not due time to dispense with the services of the Republican managers who have brought these appalling conditions about.

Ship Subsidy Again.

The new ship subsidy bill provides that the postmaster general shall pay for ocean mail service in vessels of the second class on routes to South America, the Philippines, Japan, China and Australia, at the rate of $4 per outward mile, which is the rate now paid to vessels of the first class. Thus a steamship of less than 5,000 tons for a voyage to Hong Kong, China, would receive a subsidy of $29,360, for the distance from San Francisco to Hong Kong is 7,340 miles. It requires 21 days to Hong Kong, or about 50 days for the round trip, including the time occupied in loading. Thus such a steamship can make six of such voyages and would receive a subsidy each year of $176,160, which would be large interest on the money invested above the profit from freight and passengers.

Why is Uncle Sam to add to the profits of steamship companies which are undoubtedly paying well or would discontinue the business? Why do the Republican politicians push this bill to pay ship subsidies unless they are directly interested by contributions from the steamship combine for their campaign expenses?

It is grammatically and otherwise erroneous to say that it is nobody's business where an American fleet goes. The people who pay for and own the fleet are not nobodies, and hence it is grammatically somebody's business.

BANDIT BOARDED MAIL CAR

OVERPOWERED THE CLERKS AND RIFLED POUCHES.

He Stayed on Train For Five Hours, Jumping Off Two Miles East of Spokane.

Spokane, Wash., March 16.—A lone bandit boarded the mail car on the westbound Oriental limited, the fast trans-continental train of the Great Northern railway, at Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, before daylight Sunday morning, bound the two mail clerks and robbed the mail and express cars.

The robbery was not discovered until the train reached Spokane at 9:20 a. m., more than five hours after the bandit boarded the train.

The train carried the through trans-continental mail, and a good part of it is registered matter. The amount stolen will not be known until the registered mail has been checked up by the postal authorities.

When the train arrived here at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning the mail car was closed. Employes at the station opened the car and found one of the mail clerks lying, bound, on the mail sacks. The other clerk was locked in a closet.

As soon as the men were released they said that a bandit boarded the car at Bonner's Ferry, a division point of 250 people, about 100 miles east of Spokane, where the train arrived at 4:04 a. m. The bandit, the clerks declared, held them up, bound them and went through the registered mail. He then said he would work the regular mail and proceeded to do so.

According to the clerks, the robber at all the regular stops threw off the mail and took on the outgoing sacks, though at some of the smaller places where the train does not stop he did not throw off the mail.

He stayed on the train for nearly five hours, jumping off at Oregon railroad and Navigation junction, two miles east of Spokane. He did not put off the locked pouch at Newport, Wash., and did not exchange mails at Priest river, Idaho.

As soon as the robbery was discovered the postal authorities here and also the local police were notified and the work of checking up the mail began, the train being held here 30 minutes for the purpose.

It was discovered that all the mail had been badly mixed.

The robber is described as being a man six feet in height, wearing a red sweater and overalls, and had a three or four days' growth of beard.

SHOT HIS PARENT.

Who Insisted That He Secure Employment or Leave Home.

Wilmington, Del., March 16.—Following a quarrel which resulted when his father reproved him for not going to work, Alexander Krielewsky, aged 17, shot and instantly killed his parent, Louis Krielewsky, at their home, and then gave himself up to the police.

For some time the boy has been a dime-novel fiend and resisted all efforts of his parents to have him go to work. Recently he purchased a revolver, which his father attempted to take from him.

Sunday his father followed him to his room and told him that if he did not secure employment by Monday he would force him to leave home. Members of the family in another part of the house heard sounds of a struggle, then two revolver shots in quick succession.

New Code Must Be Arranged.

Washington, March 16.—The state department has been obliged to get up a new secret cipher code. The work will be done under the supervision of the chief clerk of the department. The cables Saturday told of the theft of the present code by a cook in the employment of the American office at Bucharest. Recently another American office missed its cipher code for some time and eventually it turned up in the waste basket, where it was probably returned after being copied. More care will be taken hereafter with the new code when distributed among the diplomatic officers.

Jealous Man's Crime.

San Pedro, Cal., March 16.—Gracio Elguto, a lumber handler, shot and probably fatally wounded 11-year-old Marguerite Manes, wounded 7-year-old Minnie Shackleford, through both shoulders, fired at Mrs. A. Manes and was himself killed by a policeman. Elguto was a rejected suitor of Mrs. Manes, and jealousy of her led to the shooting.

Malta's Plans.

Malta, March 16.—The announcement that the American fleet would make a round-the-world trip has been received here with great interest. Should the fleet visit Malta its reception will be in the hands of the military authorities, as the Mediterranean fleet is absent from June until October.

Shot By Son-in-Law.

Liberty, Tex., March 16.—Dr. J. A. Lovett, a wealthy banker of Liberty, who was also president of the bank at Smyley, Tex., was shot and seriously wounded at Smyley by J. G. Beavers his son-in-law, who was until recently cashier of the Smyley bank.

Bomb Exploded In Market Place.

Barcelona, March 16.—A bomb exploded in the Central Market place here, severely injuring a woman. An other bomb was found near by. It was conveyed to a laboratory for analysis.

HOW TO KNOW PURE PAINT.

A Way in Which It May Be Identified Before Using.

After a building has been painted long enough for a weather test, it is easy to tell if the paint used was made of pure White Lead or not. But such belated knowledge comes like locking the barn after the colt is stolen.

What one wants is a test that will tell the quality of the paint before it and the labor of putting it on are paid for.

Nature has provided a way in which genuine White Lead may be positively distinguished from adulterated or fake White Lead before you spend a cent on your painting.

Pure White Lead is made from metallic lead, and, under intense heat, such as is produced by a blow-pipe, pure White Lead will resolve itself back into metallic lead. If, however, it is not genuine White Lead, or if it contains the slightest trace of adulteration, the change will not take place. Therefore the "blow-pipe" test is an absolute one.

The National Lead Company are urging everyone interested in painting to make this test of paint before using it, and they guarantee that the pure White Lead sold under their "Dutch Boy Painter" trade-mark will always prove absolutely pure under the "blow-pipe" or any other test. To make it easy for you to perform the experiment they will send you free upon request a blow-pipe and everything necessary for you to make the test, together with a valuable booklet on paint. Address, National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City.

Oh, Pshaw!

"The present shah will never be the equal of his predecessor. What a character the late shah was. He never opened his mouth without saying something worth repeating.

"Lady Drummond Wolfe once got permission to visit the shah's harem. She took a friend with her, a Miss Blank, who was about to be married. The two English women wandered over the splendid palace, among the hundreds of beautiful girls, and presently the shah encountered them.

"'Come here,' he said to Miss Blank, in his crude French.

"She approached. He looked closely at her.

"'You are about to be married?' he said.

"'Yes, your highness.'

"'It's late!'"

Leisure to Burn.

"My dear," asked the overworked business manager of his wife, as he tried to write a check for her, answer the telephone, receipt the expressman, and give instructions to a floor-walker, at one and the same time: "My dear, in that 'Great Beyond,' do you suppose any of the elegant leisure, of which the preacher tells us, will fall to my lot?"

"Sure, John," answered his wife, sweetly, "you will doubtless have leisure to burn."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Out to Be Some Special Place.

On the way across the Styx a dispute as to precedence arose.

MUSIC STUDENTS

Should Have Steady Nerves.

The nervous system of the musician is often very sensitive and any habit like coffee drinking may so upset the nerves as to make regular and necessary daily practise next to impossible.

"I practise from seven to eight hours a day and study Harmony two hours," writes a Mich. music student. "Last September I was so nervous I could only practise a few minutes at a time, and mother said I would have to drop my music for a year.

"This was terribly discouraging as I couldn't bear the thought of losing a whole year of study. Becoming convinced that my nervousness was caused largely by coffee, and seeing Postum so highly spoken of, I decided I would test it for a while.

"Mother followed the directions carefully and I thought I had never tasted such a delicious drink. We drank Postum every morning instead of coffee, and by November I felt more like myself than for years, and was ready to resume my music.

"I now practise as usual, do my studying and when my day's work is finished I am not any more nervous than when I began.

"I cannot too highly recommend Postum to musicians who practise half a day. My father is a physician and recommends Postum to his patients. Words cannot express my appreciation for this most valuable health beverage, and experience has proven its superiority over all others." "There's a Reason."

north and Redondo point on the south and dropped anchors behind the high peninsula's promontory which stretched a protecting arm down from the main land and makes Man-o'-War cove the most sheltered harbor of the lower Pacific coast, the history making naval cruise of more than 13,000 miles begun at Hampton roads less than three months ago, practically came to an end. Magdalena is the present naval base of the Pacific for American target work and battle practice drills, and by right of temporary ownership through government lease, the vessels, if not the men of the fleet, may feel that they are again in home waters. There remains to be made the trip from Magdalena bay to San Francisco, the destination originally announced, and a matter of some 1,100 miles, but it will not be begun until after target practice is concluded and fleet drills are done. This last stage of the journey will be a tour of holiday making, with stops at San Diego, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Santa Cruz, where reception committees are planning all manner of entertainments for officers and men. The California committees announce that the uniforms of the enlisted men far from being a bar to any place of amusement, as has sometimes been known to be the case in other places, will be a mark of hospitality and welcome all along the Pacific coast.

MAY RELATE THAW ORGIES

ESCAPADES OF WHITE'S SLAYER UNEARTHED BY EVELYN.

Will Be Unfolded if Family Persists in Fighting Satisfactory Settlement.

New York. — Astounding revelations of orgies attributed to Harry K. Thaw, now at Matteawan insane asylum may be uncovered by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who is seeking a divorce from her husband on grounds of insanity.

Strangest of all the disclosures made since Evelyn began suit in New York for the annulment of her marriage to Thaw is the declaration that within a month after her wedding she discovered that he was insane. At that time she announced her intention of applying for a divorce on the ground that he was crazy before the ceremony and that all members of the Thaw family knew it when they allowed her to wed him.

Evelyn, of course, knew nothing about these escapades at the time, but immediately after her marriage Thaw now and then dropped a remark that opened her eyes. She concluded that no man in his right mind could think of such affairs, much less actually participate in them; hence, her conclusion that Harry was insane.

Matteawan, N. Y. — Papers in the suit of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw for the annulment of her marriage with Harry K. Thaw was served upon Thaw at the insane asylum Thursday night. At the same time a copy of the summons and complaint was delivered to Superintendent Lamb of the asylum, who is the legal guardian of the defendant.

New York.—Denying the charge of insanity and praying for dismissal of the suit, Harry K. Thaw, through his counsel Friday night, made answer to Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's suit for divorce. The case is to be heard before the Supreme court at an early date.

SENATOR KILLED IN DUEL.

Louisiana Solon, D. S. Kemp, Slain by a Political Leader.

Amite, La.—Democratic State Senator-Elect D. S. Kemp was Tuesday night shot and killed by C. F. Hyde, a political and business leader in the community.

The men quarreled over the recent Democratic state primary election, Hyde charging Kemp with untruthfulness. Later Kemp, revolver in hand, met Hyde and slapped his face. The men then agreed to a duel, which took place almost immediately. Hyde was not injured.

The shooting followed a quarrel over the charges made in New Orleans that 9,000 fraudulent votes were cast in the recent state primary to bring about the defeat of J. J. Bailey for the nomination of lieutenant governor. Mr. Bailey was defeated by Paul Lambremont by a margin of less than 2,000 votes. Several shots were fired and Kemp fell dead, a bullet piercing his heart. Hyde was not wounded and surrendered to the sheriff.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Late Friday night the jury in the capitol graft case returned a verdict of guilty as to all defendants in the capitol trial. Motions for re-trials were made for Sanderson, Snyder, Mathues and Shumaker at once. The four men were convicted of defrauding the state in furnishing the new capitol, which cost the state about $13,000,000, instead of $4,000,000, the figure at which the contract was estimated. The present case constituted one of the longest jury trials in the history of Pennsylvania courts, and it attracted much attention throughout the country.

SPRING (HAT) MUSINGS.

Some Fits and Misfits.

FIVE YEARS FOR J. R. WALSH

FORMER CHICAGO BANKER REFUSED A NEW TRIAL.

Stay Order on Appeal—All Points Raised by Attorneys for Financier Are Overruled.

Chicago.—John R. Walsh was denied a new trial by Judge A. B. Anderson in the federal court Friday and was sentenced to five years in the government prison at Fort Leavenworth. The sentence was five years on each count on which the president of the old Chicago National bank was convicted, but it is to run concurrently. All the points raised by the attorneys for the defense in their plea for a new trial were overruled by the court, who, in his opinion, reviewed at some length the events during the trial and after the return of the verdict. An appeal to the upper court is expected to stay the execution of the sentence he now faces. In making his ruling Judge Anderson first took up the Palmer incident when that juror hesitated before replying to the poll of the jury. Judge Anderson recited in detail what occurred and said that counsel for the defendant had not objected at the time and that it was clear that Juror Palmer assented to the verdict. This finding was directly against the argument in support of the motion for a new trial.

The Walsh case involved large sums of money and presented many questions of banking and financial methods rarely called to the attention of a court.

The main contention of the government in the prosecution of the case was that Mr. Walsh in his capacity of president of the Chicago National bank had misapplied certain amounts from the funds of the bank by investing them in railroad and other enterprises with which he was connected.

Little time was lost by Attorney Miller in presenting the assignment or errors, already drawn up, to Judge Grosscup, as a judge of the United States circuit court of appeals. The stay order was entered without question by Judge Grosscup and the bond was fixed at $50,000. The appeal is expected to be taken up at the October term of court and at least until then Mr. Walsh will be free from the necessity of attending court or serving sentence behind barred doors.

LUNATIC TRIES TO ROB BANK.

Demands Money and Threatens Official with Death.

Omaha, Neb.—A bold attempt was made Tuesday to rob the Merchants' bank at Thirteenth and Farnam streets by a man who, although at first thought to be a desperate criminal, is now believed by the police to be a lunatic.

The man gave his name as L. L. Fee, formerly of Rockford, Ill.. He walked into the bank soon after it opened and menacing Vice-President Luther Drake with a bottle which he said contained nitro-glycerin, demanded $5,000 cash. Mr. Drake, though believing for the moment that his life and those of his fellow officials and employes of the bank might be in imminent danger, conferred calmly with the would-be robber until other officials called the police and the man was taken into custody. Tests by the police seem to show that the contents of the bottle were harmless.

ASSASSIN ALIA MUST DIE.

Murderer of Denver Priest Is Sentenced to Death.

Denver, Col.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death. Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death to Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this waif from Italy, an alleged, but not proven anarchist, heard his doom. There was absolutely no demonstration in the courtroom when the verdict was read by Foreman D. S. Johnson, a mining engineer. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

MAY AMEND TRUST LAW.

Important Conference Is Held at the White House.

Washington.—An important conference was held at the White House respecting amendments to the Sherman anti-trust law. The changes in the law, it is expected, will be proposed along the lines suggested by the conference of the civic federation held in Chicago a few weeks ago. No concrete results were reached, and it is likely that further conferences will be held. The president, it is understood, is desirous that a bill embodying the conclusions of the conference if any be reached, be submitted to congress for passage at this session.

Tries to Slay King.

Christiania.—A Swede, apparently insane, fusilladed the royal castle here with a Remington rifle at noon Tuesday. He fired altogether a dozen bullets, several of which crashed through the windows and embedded themselves in the interior walls of the castle.

The man was promptly seized by the police and disarmed. At the police station he declared that it was his intention to kill King Haakon. He still had 40 or 50 cartridges in his pockets.

MUST PAY LOSSES.

Judge Gordon Rules Against Insurance Companies in "Raid" Cases.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Circuit Judge Gordon handed down a far-reaching decision in a suit against several insurance companies filed by the Imperial Tobacco Co. to force payment of policies on $40,000 worth of tobacco destroyed by night riders in the Princeton raid.

Judge Gordon's decision makes null and void the riot clause, under which the insurance companies refused to settle the claims on the grounds they were not liable for property destroyed by mob or riot. Judge Gordon declares that organized incendiaries are neither.

If the appellate court sustains the decision the insurance companies must pay all their losses in Kentucky occasioned by "night rider" raids. The agents claim that this would be followed by a cancellation of all tobacco risks in Kentucky.

DEFEATED IN THE HOUSE

Is the Bill To Raise Pay of Circuit Judges.

Frankfort, Ky.—Circuit judges in Kentucky will not get an increase in salary, at least during the next two years, as the bill to increase their salaries from $3,500 to $4,000, which passed the senate, was defeated in the house by a vote of 25 to 58.

Representatives Porter, Rice and W. J. Jackson spoke against the bill, while Harry Schoberth, Eugene Graves, Cleves Kinkead, Gus Richardson and Shanks spoke for the bill. Representative Porter said that the increase proposed would mean an outlay of $15,000 annually out of the treasury. Mr. Shanks urged the passage of the bill on the grounds that better men would run for the office.

Sheriff Gets Injunction.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Attorneys for Sheriff David Smith, whose office was declared vacant by County Judge Prowse, were granted an injunction preventing the newly appointed sheriff from taking the office. The case will be tried in the circuit court March 21, and at that time it will either be dissolved and Renshaw will go into office, or it will be made perpetual and Mr. Smith will retain the office until his term expires.

Frankfort, Ky.—In the house, house bill 76, providing that if a majority of the citizens of a second, third or fourth-class city vote to annex their city to one of the second class the city proposing to annex shall, after the result is officially declared, by ordinance declare such annexation effective, was passed. The bill refers only to second-class cities adjoining, and refers especially to Covington and Newport.

Louisville, Ky.—Seated in his chair in the watchman's tower at Spring street and the Louisville & Nashville railroad crossing, gazing out upon the tracks which he had guarded for 20 years, Michael J. Creed, 52 years old, was found by section hands. He was dead. The gates at the crossing were up and it is believed that several trains passed after death overtook the guardian of the crossing.

Senate Passes Dog Bill.

Frankfort, Ky.—The house of representatives passed the amended dog tax bill after a lively fight. It changes the tax from $1 to 50 cents, gives each family the right to harbor one dog free of tax, allows the assessor three cents for each dog assessed, and provides that after all sheep killed are paid for the fiscal court shall expend the residue on public roads or public schools.

Covington, Ky.—Lieut. Maddux Bruce and his company, of the Kentucky National Guard, will not go to Brooksville to suppress the night riders. The members of the company—40 strong—who had been assembled at the armory for 24 hours, were permitted to return to their homes.

M'CHORD BILL KILLED.

Senate Adopts Substitute Offered By Senator Burnam.

Frankfort, Ky.—Although it was backed by the entire strength of organized tobacco growers of Kentucky the state senate killed the McChord tobacco bill, adopting a substitute offered by Senator A. R. Burnam, of Richmond.

All the republicans but three voted for the substitute.

The bill as amended by the Burnam substitute passed by a vote of 21 to 10.

Mr. Burnam's substitute for the McChord bill, which is Senate Bill 251, relates to the following:

"Any [illegible] prohibit trusts, pools, combinations or agreements for the purpose of, or that have the effect of, depreciating below its real value any article of trade, commerce or merchandise or enhancing the cost of any article of trade above its real value."

CUT PHONE WIRES

And Burned Two Tobacco Warehouses, Then Raiders Galloped Away.

New Liberty, Ky.—"Night riders" burned two large tobacco warehouses, that of John Garvey, near here, and that of Davis Snell, at the outskirts of Owenton. The Garvey building contained 10,000 and that of Snell 25,000 pounds of tobacco, all belonging to independent buyers. Telephone wires leading from the warehouses and other buildings in the vicinity were cut.

The raiders had sent a warning to Owenton that they would "visit" warehouses there, but the threat was not executed. They swept out of New Liberty at a gallop.

A special grand jury to probe the outrages has been impaneled.

Powers' Counsel To Act.

Lexington, Ky.—S. M. Wilson, of this city, and Judge J. C. Sims, of Bowling Green, of Caleb Powers' counsel, decided at Powers' request to appeal to Gov. Willson at once to examine the petitions for Powers' pardon and pass on them. It is understood a hundred thousand persons have signed the petitions. Powers' idea in wanting the petitions passed on now is said to be that if he is to be pardoned he wants to know it, so he can advance his candidacy for congress in the Eleventh district, where the convention is set for June 6.

Jackson, Ky.—The Breathitt circuit court, after a full four weeks' session, adjourned. The entire term was consumed in the trial of criminal cases, leaving on the docket undisposed of indictments charging 32 people with murder. The fair and impartial rulings of former Commonwealth's Attorney J. P. Adams, in his first sitting as judge, are looked upon as beginning a new era of law and order.

Rev. L. L. Picket, of Wilmore, Jessamine county, who was the Prohibition candidate for Governor of Kentucky, at the last election, arrived Tuesday evening to assist in the protracted meeting in progress at the Methodist church.

Mrs. Jane E. Johnson has sold 4.65 acres of land on the outskirts of Walton to Bradberry C. Bedinger for $465, possession to be given at once. There are no buildings on the land, and it is presumed that Mr. Bedinger bought it for speculation.

Mrs. Finnell Blackwell, of Covington, spent Sunday here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Franks. Miss Margaret Franks, who has been enjoying a pleasant visit of several weeks to her sister, Mrs. Blackwell, returned home here Saturday.

Judge John M. Lassing, the able judge of the court of appeals, spent Saturday and Sunday here with homefolks, and returned to Frankfort, Monday. Judge Lassing has been indisposed from an attack of asthma, but he has now about recovered.

Rev. M. C. Frazer, of Orange county, Virginia, was a visitor here last Monday. Rev. Frazer is a student at the Baptist Theological College in Louisville, and supplied the place of Rev. J. P. Stewart at the Union Baptist church Sunday, Rev. Stewart holding services at the Walton Baptist church.

Rev. J. T. Betts, the Baptist Evangelist, who resides here, has been invited to preach at the Baptist church at Warsaw, and may be called as the pastor of that church and Ten Mile church at Napoleon, as the present pastor Rev. W. L. Shearer has been called to take charge of a church at Louisville and may accept.

Henry Rusche, of Covington, spent Monday here looking over the new plant for making pressed brick. The machinery has arrived and it is expected the works will be in operation inside of the next month. Mr. Rusche is an experienced brick maker of many years standing and will have charge of the brick machine department.

Edwards & Best have a nice string of horses in training for the coming fairs. Besides the fine horse High Vine they have a three year old saddle gelding that is attracting considerable favorable attention because of his splendid qualities and handsome [illegible]. They have several other good ones with which they expect to land some of the money.

Geo. P. Nicholson, our enterprising contractor and builder, contracted with the Oak Island Baptist church, last week, to build a neat, $3,000 edifice as soon as the weather will permit the work to begin. Mr. Nicholson also contracted with Samuel J. Adams, of the same neighborhood, to erect a nice residence at a cost of about $2,000. Mr. Nicholson has a prospect for a lot of good contracts.

Pat Code, who recently purchased the Watson farm from Nicholas Blau and moved back here from Lewisville, Indiana, spent Saturday here on business. The farm contains 87 acres, and the purchase price was $6,500. Mr. Blau bought the Stanley Crouch farm near Petersburg, and has moved there. Everybody welcomes Mr Code and family back to the old Kentucky home, as they are excellent people.

'Squire John Watson had an exciting trial in his court, Monday, in an action between C. E. Lipscomb and Mrs. Henrietta Powers over a mare which Mr. Lipscomb alleged he loaned Mrs. Powers for work purposes, and which she declined to return, alleging that he owned her. J. G. Tomlin represented Lipscomb and B. F. Menefee, of Crittenden, was attorney for Mrs. Powers. The Court returned a verdict in favor of Lipscomb returning him the horse.

Hon. J. Grant Tomlin, who has been presiding over the circuit court at Owenton, returned home here Thursday evening. He disposed of a lot of business before the court, but the cases of the officials regarding the tax collections in Owen county, were deferred until next fall when Judge Tomlin will return to Owenton and preside in the cases. The people at Owenton are very much pleased with the manner in which Judge Tomlin dispatched the business.

Cleveland Scott Chambers, who has been attending embalming school in Cincinnati, graduated last Friday, and has applied for a State license, which the State law requires in order to conduct an undertaking establishment in Kentucky. Mr. Chambers passed a very satisfactory examination with an average of 97 per cent. B. B. Allphin, who recently sold his interest in the undertaking establishment of Chambers & Allphin, did the embalming heretofore for the firm.

Hon. Clifford E. Nadaud, who came back from Egypt and the Holly Land to again make the race for the democratic nominationfor Congress in this the Sixth Kentucky district, addressed a good sized audience here Monday night at the opera house. He has quite a number of friends here. He was at Jerusalem for some time, bottling the water of the Sacred River Jordan and shipping it to this country for baptismal purposes, but the ambition of his life is to go to Congress, and he is now for the third time trying to reach the prize.

This community was very much shocked by the receipt of the news of the death of Miss Alice A. Platt, who died at the home of her brother Asail Platt at Paynes Depot, Scott county, March 6th. The deceased was a native of Boone county and formerly resided at Walton. The remains were brought to Richwood for interment, and the following accompanied the remains to their last resting place: Rev. Wm. Thompson, of the Presbyterian church; Dr. Gus Platt, of Lexington; Miss Hattie Platt and Robt. Platt, of Paynes Depot; Samuel Mastin, of Donerail; Mrs. Logan and Robert Bedinger, of Virginia.

Rev. Jos. B. Harris, of Wilmore, Jessamine county, began a protracted meeting at the Walton Methodist Church, last Sunday, being assisted in the work by the pastor Rev. John B. Harris. The meeting has been well attended the house being filled to overflowing every night, and the congregations appear to be delighted with Rev. Harris' presentation of the gospel truths which he does in a most pleasing and entertaining manner, but with great impressiveness. Rev. Harris is an evangelist and held a great meeting at Falmouth before coming here. He held a very successful meeting at Walton, last year, and his efforts on the present occasion promises very fruitful results. He goes from here to Illinois, being constantly engaged in revival work. Rev. Harris is a polished gentleman of most pleasing personality, and makes a fine impression.

The Northern Kentucky Medical Society had a very entertaining session at Walton, last Thursday, at which quite a number of the medical profession and guests were present to enjoy a very instructive and entertaining lecture on "The Relation Existing Between the Nose and its Accessory Cavities," delivered by Dr. John W. Murphy, of Cincinnati, who with sections of a human head demonstrated the sallent points he advanced. It was a very learned presentation of an important part of that which means much to the health of a person, and the rapt attention with which Dr. Murphy's remarks were received indicated clearly that his auditors were deeply interested.

The session was held in the offices of The Equitable Bank and Trust Co., and the following were in attendance of the medical profession: Drs. J. W. Murphy, Cincinnati; J. M. Chambers, Independence; J. Marshall Crittenden; O. E. Senour, Secretary, of Union; P. E. Blackerby, Erlanger; D. M. Bagby, A. N. Jones, J. G. Slater, S. M. Adams, and the President, B. K. Menefee, of Walton.

Dr. and Mrs. B. K. Menefee entertained in a delightful manner with a six o'clock dinner, Thursday, March 12th, in honor of their guest, Dr. John W. Murphy, of Cincinnati, whom it was a pleasure to meet. After the social greeting the guests were invited to a delicious supper prepared in a most appetizing manner, and presided over by Mrs. B. K. Menefee and her charming daughters Misses Cecil and Marie, who, in every way, endeavored to disseminate that hearty, good cheer, which always makes an occasion of this kind so enjoyable. The guests were Dr. J. W. Murphy, Cincinnati; Dr. and Mrs. B. M. Baggy, Dr. and Mrs. A. N. Jones, Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Slater, Mrs. Judge J. M. Lassing, Mr. and Mrs. W. [illegible]nes; Dr. P. E. Blackerby, Erlanger; Dr. O. E. Senior, Union; and D. B. Wallace. Following a lengthy session at the table, an adjournment was taken to the parlor, where the two Misses Menefee charmingly entertained with recitations and music. An interesting game of euchre followed and a most enjoyable evening was spent until almost the midnight hour.

The Verona Local Union met, and, by an unanimous vote, adopted the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, a tobacco barn belonging to J. C. Rouse, an independent buyer, was fired one morning last week; and, whereas, night riders are destroying property in other parts of the State, therefore, be it resolved,

1st. That the Verona Local opposes the destruction of property and is a violation of law.

2nd. That we believe such conduct engenders strife and provokes wrath among neighbors.

3d. That we believe it wrong for either Equity or non-Equity people to say or do anything that will cause trouble, and, thereby, destroy Equity, Justice and Right.

4th. That we believe the intention of the A. S. of E. is to do no harm, but to help every farmer and all others interested in their welfare, and to maintain order as far as possible. We kindly ask non-Equity people to help us fight this great battle if they will, if they wont help us, pray don't help the other fellow.

5th. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our records, also a copy be sent to the Boone County Recorder for publication.

Done by order of the Verona Local.

Helps to Form Reading Habit.

The county paper should be found in every home. The children should grow up in ignorance who can be taught to appreciate the home paper. It is said to be the stepping stone of intelligence in all those matters not to be found in books. Give your children a foreign paper which contains not a word about any person, place or thing, which they saw or perhaps ever heard of, and how could you expect them to be interested? But let them have the home paper and read of people whom they meet and of places of which they are familiar and soon an interest is awakened which increases with every arrival of the local paper. Thus a reading habit is formed and those children will read the papers all their lives and become intelligent men and women, a credit to their ancestors, strong in the knowledge of the world as it is today.

ANOTHER GOOD THING.

The Recorder has another good thing for those who wish to take advantage of it. It will furnish them The Cincinnati Daily Times-Star one year (price $3.00); a map of Kentucky, the United States and of the World (price $1.50); Hartman's Stock Breeding Guide (price 50 cents), and the Boone County Recorder one year (price $1.50) all for $3.00 This offer applies only to new subscribers and those who renew their subscription to the Recorder after this date, October 2d, 1907.

A telephone message over the farmers lines was received in Burlington about 6:30 o'clock, last Monday evening, by way of Waterloo, announcing that the residence of Leslie McMullen on Gunpowder creek, two miles south of town was being destroyed by fire. The message was followed in a few minutes by another which stated that Mr. McMullen's residence was not burning, that the fire that caused the alarm was only a burning brush pile in the vicinity of the residence.

Good for Everybody.

Mr. Norman R. Coulter, a prominent architect, in the Delbert Building, San Francisco, says: "I fully endorse all that has been said of Electric Bitters as a tonic medicine. It is for everybody. It regulates stomach, liver and kidney disorders in a prompt and efficient manner and builds up the system." Electric Bitters is the best spring medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter; as a blood purifier it is unequaled. 50c at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger.

No Use to Die.

"I have found out there is no use to die of lung trouble as long as you can get Dr. King's New Discovery," says Mrs. J. P. White, of Rushboro, Pa. "I would not be alive today only for that wonderful medicine. It loosens up a cough quicker than anything else, and cures lung diseases even after the case is pronounced hopeless." This most reliable remedy for coughs and colds, lagrippe, asthma, bronhitis and hoarseness, is sold under guarantee at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger. 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free.

The old residence in Burlington, owned and occupied by the late Jas. Calvert, is being razed. It is one of the eldest buildings in the town, and the lumber used in its construction is of the best quality. There is none such these days.

TO THE GROWERS OF TOBACCO.

Editor Lexington Leader:—The public, though not directly interested in either the growing or the manufacture of tobacco, is yet a third party to the struggle between the Burley Tobacco Growers Society and the Independent growers, and as such can not afford to look complacently on while the momentous issues of the good name and the well being of Kentucky are decided in trial by combat.

The crisis is near at hand. This fact is emphasized by a card from Mr. W. B. Hawkins in Monday's Herald. As this community knows Mr. Hawkins is an elder in the Broadway Christian church; his record hitherto as a good citizen has not been challenged; for years he has been honored with the chairmanship of the Democratic organization of the county of Fayette.

However much one may differ with him, it is evident that he speaks from profound conviction. Must this issue be pushed to open violence? Can not the Blue Grass distinguish itself for honor and disgrace that have come to other sections of the State? To one looking on from the outside the case appears as follows:

The American Tobacco Company has been doing business in Kentucky in direct open violation of the statutes. Everyone has affirmed and no one has denied that it did establish and maintain a ruinously low price for tobacco, and that during the most prosperous years ever known in the country, when all other farm products were high, they kept tobacco down.

The necessity for an organized movement to protect the growers from the greed of the manufacturers seems undeniable. The Burley Growers' Society was organized to meet the situation. The members of the society pooled their 1906 crop, now more than a year ago. The Trust by adulterations and the curtailing of their business thirty per cent managed to get on without the 1906 pooled tobacco but the unpooled tobacco sold for an advanced price.

When the 1907 unpooled crop was ready for market the Trust took it instead of the pooled tobacco, paying in some instances more than pooled prices. The members of the pool have 170,000,000 pounds of tobacco on hand that will have the same experience in 1908 that the 1906 crop had in 1907 if a crop is planted in 1908. The Trust will buy the unpooled tobacco and leave the tobacco in the pool, or else the pooled tobacco will be turned loose and the price run down to starvation rates again.

The Burley Society sees no way out of the situation save to cut out the 1908 crop. They ask the growers who have sold their 1906 and 1907 crops at good prices to recognize the necessities of the growers in the pool and to join them in cutting out the crop. This request looks to one on the outside as reasonable. Suppose the 1908 crop is cut out entirely. The growers outside the pool have to their credit the returns from two crops at good prices.

They are asked to make this one year of sacrifice for the present good of the growers in the pool and the ultimate and permanent good of all growers. It will entail upon them some privations and inconvenience without doubt, but it will show that they do consider the condition of their fellow growers and that they are willing to make a personal sacrifice for the general good. Cutting out the crop will insure the sale of the pooled tobacco and relieve the burden and strain that the members of the pool have bravely borne for two years.

In many instances landowners have not only done without returns for their half of the crops, but they have carried their tenants to the extent of furnishing them with every dollar they have spent these two years.

What if the crop is not cut out? Then all the sacrifice and effort made will be of no avail. They will suffer heavy loss, in some instances ruin, and in the end be as much and more in the power of the trust as they were before the Society was formed. The two years of suffering on the part of many poor and the strain on all will be without effect. Certainly no one, independent or outsider, wants to see the growers forced to surrender to the trust, and that, too, by the failure of their fellow to give them even passive aid. Certainly the independent growers can not ask the members of the Society to cut out their crops while the growers outside the pool plant a crop. That is to impose an impossible strain.

Will the growers outside the pool insist upon a legal right to the hurt and injury of their neighbors, and thus betray the whole number of growers into the hands of the trust? It is difficult to anticipate another's experience or to say what one would do in a position in which he had never been placed. We may condemn resort to violence or coercion on the part of the members of the pool, but we have not been placed in their shoes. And can the independent growers feel on good terms with themselves and the community at large when they provoke or precipitate strife?

One good man is worth more to a community than one year's crop of tobacco. The harmony, peace, good will, mutual esteem of the neighborhood is worth more than a crop of tobacco. Will really generous, kind, open-minded men push their legal rights to the point of inviting violence from those who are thus overstrained? If the members of the pool have lived two years without money for their tobacco, can not the growers out of the pool live one year?

We do not want the State, the neighborhood, the church torn with dissension. Give the man in the pool a chance, and by so doing put the whole tobacco-growing fraternity in a position of equal advantage with the trust. The women and children need to be considered.

Think of the tense nerves of the women on both sides, and what they must suffer from having the men of their households either engaged in scraping plant beds or in defending their beds from being scraped. How much tobacco would it take to compensate one of them for the loss of a husband, son, father or brother? Unless you are in actual need you can not afford to precipitate civil war for the profit on a crop of tobacco; and if you are in such extremes the community would rather take care of you than to have the harmony of the neighborhood destroyed.

HEBRON.

The death angel has again visited and taken from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Corrie Hoshal, nee Hankins, whose death occurred the 18th inst. at the home of her sister, Mrs. Belle Clore, at Hebron. Mrs. Hoshal was born June 8th, 1855, consequently she was 52 years, 9 months and 10 days old. She was united in marriage to John M. Hoshal, Jr., Nov. 3, 1880. To t... two sons were born, H. Earl and J. Ralph. Her health began failing about two years ago and her physician advised her to go to the country. She gave up her home in Cincinnati and came to Hebron with the hope that her health might be restored, but for some wise purpose the Master saw fit to take her to realms above. Mrs. Hoshal was a kind and unassuming lady, always ready to help the destitute and s...ays had a kind word for all with whom she came in contact. She possessed all the characteristics of a devoted, christian lady, and through her kind and generous disposition won for herself a host of friends who would join me in saying, to know her is to love her. In her departure the husband loses a devoted companion, and the boys a kind and affectionate mother. Besides the husband and two sons, three sisters, Mrs. Alice Beall, Mrs. Belle Clore and Mrs. Florence Floyd, and one brother, J. C. Hankins, survive her. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. J. Sebastian, pastor of Camp Washington Christian church, after which the remains were placed in the Hebron vault in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and sympathizing friends.

ERLANGER.

Special to the Recorder.

Society turned out enmasse, Friday night, in honor of the comedy, "Whats Next?" presented by the younger set. The village hall was crowded to the walls and repeated encores testified an appreciative audience. Too much credit can not be given Miss Elizabeth Bedinger, reader and instructress, for her masterly training, and she was amply repaid by the really fine work done. Miss Sarah Madge Taliaferro, in the dual role of Polly Poke, a conundrum, and Mary Ann Fogarty, of Emeral Isle, brought down the house. Miss Nida Dickey, beautiful and fascinating as Rose Madder, victim of the Green Eyed Monster. Gertie Gush, on the hunt for a husband, was delightfully portrayed by Miss Helen Gurney. The attractive widow, Mrs. Wallace, showed what Miss Marie Buchanan will do when she gets a chance. The men, too, came in for their share of success. Paul J. Carter, in the part of Dr. C. Chintzer, who takes what turns up, was far above the average, while Tom Buchanan as Moses Madder, schemer and celebrated artist, acquitted himself with great credit. Fred Bentler, in the difficult role of Phineas Poke, maker of Poke's Pine Potion, showed real dramatic ability and was one of the gems of the entertainment. The Texas Rancher, Tim Frenwith, impersonated by Philip Taliaferro, was very realistic and well done. Morris Thomas, as "Willy Nilly," a dudelet from Gotham, came in for his full share of deserved applause. Dave Carter was simply fine as Zeph Somers, crazed by Indian tales. John Q. Taylor, Jr., as one of the kids in the school room scene, was great, and his Michael McGilp, "one as the Foinest," was well executed. This company will give an entertainment in the near future in Boone county.

Cuba Progressing.

Cuba is making slow progress toward self-government. The first time the United States intervened in the behalf of order it had to remain in control of affairs more than three years. Then a Cuban congress and a Cuban president assumed power. Everything went smoothly until the election of a new president, when the opponents of the administration were kept from the polls in so many districts that an insurrection soon started. The United States had to intervene the second time, in September, 1906. It has been busy since then straightening out the tangle into which President Palma involved the island. President Roosevelt announced to congress the other day that our work would be completed on February 1, 1909. This will be in less than two years and a half from the appointment of the American provisional governor. As the election of a new president and congress is to be under the supervision of the American officers in Cuba, it is likely that there will be fair play. The next test of Cuban ability will come in four years more, when the Cubans try again to choose a new president. If it should happen that the United States has to be called in a third time there are many persons who believe that it should not retire so quickly, but should remain long enough to assure the country against insurrection every four years.

The most northerly point of land known is Cape Morris Jesup on an island north of Greenland. It was discovered by Commander Peary in 1900, and named after the president of the Peary Arctic club, Morris K. Jesup, who has lately died. Mr. Jesup was one of the most liberal patrons of science, art and exploration of his time. He not only gave generously to the cause of arctic exploration, but provided the money for many scientific expeditions organized to study antiquities in various parts of the world. He will be known for these things to a limited number for a few years, but every schoolboy will pronounce his name for no one knows how long when asked to name the most northern cape in the world. Only the latest geographies show it on their maps now, but they will all have it in a few years.

New York city, which hysterical imaginations are fain to compare with Nineveh, Tyre, Babylon, Sodom and what Mr. Dooley calls other ancient "metropuppuses," is not an unhealthy place, as great cities go. Last year the births exceeded the deaths by 40,000. This is a greater gain than appears for the same time in London, Berlin or St. Petersburg, and in Paris the death-rate is much greater than the birth-rate. New York is a healthy young child and the nation will succeed in bringing it up yet.

Mr. Edison has sent Count Leo Tolstoy a phonograph of the latest and most improved pattern, and in return will receive a cylinder registering Tolstoy's voice as he gives his interpretation of certain Bible texts. The time will come probably when the voices of all prominent personages will be thus preserved for the edification of later generations. For that matter, the voices of private individuals will doubtless be kept in the same way for the benefit of their families, just as universally as photographs are now.

Over 25 years ago London Truth established a doll competition. This year it was held in Albert hall, December 18 and 19. There were 26,000 toys and 4,000 dolls and 11,000 sixpences, all to be given to children in London hospitals, workhouses and infirmaries. For years a great friend of the poor children, Sir Francis Barry, gave the 11,000 sixpences; he died a year ago, but friends and relatives arranged that the pile of sixpences should be given just the same to the expectant children.

The American style of benevolence seems to be contagious. Other countries are feeling the effect. The will of Mrs. Ryland, widow of a wealthy cotton manufacturer of Manchester, England, leaves $2,365,000 to various charities, including $1,000,000 to a library on which she spent $7,500,000 during her life. This is suggestive of some of the princely gifts to philanthropy made in the United States, although the American record is as yet ahead of all others.

Dr. Lyman Abbott puts it thus neatly and pungently: "There is only one argument in favor of race track gambling, namely, that it improves the breed of horses. The answer to that argument is conclusive—it deteriorates the race of men."

Mr. Rockefeller's income is said to be over $7,000,000 a month. Perhaps he considers that he deserves a rather large salary for standing for the disagreeable things that are continually said of him.

ELIJAH AND ELISHA

A Mission Ended and a Mission Begun.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Scripture Authority—1 Kings Chapter 19.

SERMONETTE.

Greatness and goodness are marred by self-consciousness of the possession of such qualities.

When a man comes to feel that the success of the cause of righteousness centers wholly within himself his practical usefulness has ceased.

No work of reform ever depends wholly upon one man's efforts.

The more a man realizes that he is not absolutely essential to the success of any good work, the more effective will his efforts be.

The mission that is not bigger than its leader is not of God.

The discouraged leader of a reform always fails to see the "seven thousand" who are still loyal to God.

God always has some one ready to take up his work which another one lays down.

"What doest thou here?" is a searching question, when God asks it.

When a man gets ready to listen to the "still small voice" of God he is in a condition to understand himself better and to know that loyalty to God is as possible in another as in himself.

To see only the wickedness in the world is poor preparation to the carrying on of God's work.

One may be so busy looking for the workers of iniquity as to wholly miss those who stand for righteousness and truth.

No Christian ever has any business being a pessimist.

It is the busy people whom God calls into his service.

In the field of busy toil is the most likely place of meeting God's prophets and catching the inspiration of their message.

No work is ever so urgent or important that it cannot be promptly abandoned for a higher commission from God.

There must be an abandonment of the temporal things before God can fill with the spiritual.

THE STORY.

TO THE conscientious person there often comes the perplexing necessity of choosing between two courses of conduct both of which seem right. Sometimes it is merely a choice between two lines of conduct which pertain wholly to human needs and obligations, and then again it is apparently a choice between duty to man and duty to God. In the latter case there is singular distress to the devout, conscientious heart, for it is hard to think that the plain duty of life runs counter to the expression of real devotion to God, and it is unreasonable to think that God would require a service which would in any way lead to a violation or neglect of real duty to friends or loved ones. It is certainly a safe principle to lay down that obligation to God never brings violation of duty to man, but sometimes there do come circumstances which are perplexing and make one hesitate in doubt as to which pathway is the right one. At such times one needs to pause and strive earnestly to clearly know the mind of God and to see plainly the conditions confronting one and one's obligations thereto.

It was to such a perplexing period that Elisha had come. He was at Bethel attending the school of the prophets when word came from his home at Abel-Meholah that they were short-handed and needed his help in the farm work. At the same time had come the startling news that Elijah, the prophet, had suddenly disappeared, and the students of the school had promptly organized to go in search of him.

Thus Elisha found himself wrestling with the question as to which pathway of conduct he should follow. Should he bury himself in the drudgery of the farm life or should he, be among those who should go upon that ministry of search for the mighty prophet Elijah?

When he had left home it had been with the understanding that he was to finish his course at the Bethel school, and he felt very ill-natured and impatient when the unexpected conditions had arisen which seemed to require his help at home. Was it his duty to go? As student at the Bethel school, did he not owe it to himself and the others to do his utmost to try and find Elijah? It seemed specially unfortunate just when the school was reopening that Elijah should have been forced to flee, nobody knew whither, and now it seemed imperative that Elijha should lend his efforts to discovering the whereabouts of the prophet.

He recalled the thrilling events of the past few weeks of Elijah's sudden appearance after an absence of three years, of the mighty test on Mount Carmel in which the prophets of Baal had been defeated and then slain, and then of the coming of the reviving, refreshing rain.

The nation had been profoundly stirred by the remarkable events, and in the face of the popular approval of the prophet Elijah the threat of Jezebel was as the mere idle boasting of a silly child, for there was no one who would have dared carry out her decree of death against the prophet, even though they had been so inclined. And because of this the disappearance of the prophet was all the more disconcerting, and it seemed as though the welfare of the school depended upon his being found.

All through the long period of famine which had been marked by the fierce persecution of the prophets of God, the school had been closed, but with the revival which had come with Elijah's return the school had reopened and the students had returned, among them being Elisha. And now scarcely a week had elapsed after he had resumed his studies before the circumstances had arisen which brought him face to face with the question as to what was his duty.

There was the strong desire to be among those who should go in search of the prophet, and it was not difficult for him to argue that such mission was larger and more important than any demand which the farm could make upon him. But Elisha realized that his own strong inclinations were not altogether a safe guide, and his deep purpose to do God's will and not his own led him at last to see clearly that the highest service to God sometimes led through the homely humdrum duties of life rather than into the more conspicuous and distinctive religious activity.

Thus it came to pass that when the searching party started forth Elisha turned his face resolutely homeward, determined to do his part there and to be ready when the school should again begin work. So the days passed. And while Elisha wondered what success attended the efforts of the searchers, he strove to stay his impatience and forget his disappointment by earnestly plunging into the work of the farm. He could not help but envy those who should find the prophet, and pictured to himself the students gathered about him and listening to his teachings. How he wished he might be with them at such time. What a yearning there was in his heart to know God better. How much he felt he was losing by being shut away upon the farm.

"Oh, God," he groaned one day, his chastened spirit crying out, not in rebellion, but in fervent longing after the privileges he felt he was being denied, "Oh, God, help me to prove worthy of thy blessing by faithfulness to the present duty."

And as he breathed the prayer he took fresh hold upon the plow handles and sent his oxen at a smart pace around the field, turning as true a furrow as was ever turned on a Judean hillside.

So intent was he upon the task in hand that he did not observe the solitary figure approaching in the distance. In fact he was well around the field on his second turn when he observed that those working with him had stopped and were looking at something intently. A rebuke rose to his lips at this seeming neglect of duty, his own zealous spirit being always impatient with anything which loked like the slighting of one's work, but it rested there unspoken as he felt something fall softly upon his shoulders and turned to see—ELIJAH!

For a full minute Elisha stood as though rooted to the spot while a flood of thoughts rushed in upon him—wonder and exultation, joy and gratitude struggling for expression. Could it all be real? He raised his hand to feel the mantle which had been cast upon him and then his eyes followed the retreating figure of Elijah. He knew that he had been called to follow Elijah; he knew what the presence of the mantle upon his shoulders betokened, and with a glad cry he sped after the prophet.

God is full of compassion to the sinner, whose worst of sin he knows. It is not pity merely that comes from him; but sympathy; and how wide the difference between these the struggling heart understands. Our comfort does not begin in forgetting our sins, but in remembering them, and in bringing them all under the view of his mercy, which is as wide and wakeful as his omniscience.—Ker.

Believe under a cloud and wait for him when there is no moonlight or starlight. Let faith live and breathe, and lay hold of the sure salvation of God, when clouds and darkness are about you. Who dreameth that a promise of God can fail, fall aswoon, or die? When we are pleased to seek a plea with Christ, let us plead that we hope in him.—Rutherford.

The promises are the food of faith and the soul of faith. As faith is the life of a Christian, so the promises are the life of faith. As the promises are of no use without faith to apply them, so faith is of no use without a promise to lay hold on.—Calamy.

The doctrine of Divine Providence becomes a delusion when it is regarded as an escape from everyday duty.

The best way to have a lawabiding community is to abide by the laws yourself.

FRATERNITY OUT $75,000

SECRETARY OF MICHIGAN CONCERN IS ARRESTED.

Port Huron Man Peculates Funds of United Home Protectors, Using Them in Speculation.

Port Huron, Mich.—An investigation into the affairs of the United Home Protectors' fraternity of this city, ordered by the state banking commissioner, ended Thursday with the announcement that Supreme Secretary W. L. Wilson of this city is short a sum in excess of $75,000, and his arrest in the afternoon on the charge of embezzlement.

State Banking Commissioner Zimmerman, who took charge of the affairs of the fraternity Thursday, states that Secretary Wilson had been investing heavily in electric railroad promotion and in oil and mining stocks. He says that Wilson's peculations were committed by means of continuing on the books [illegible] nity, which operated a building and loan business, as live assets mortgages and certificates of the association which had been paid. Mr. Zimmerman says that the fraternity is hopelessly insolvent and that he will apply for a receiver.

"Secretary Wilson, when confronted with the facts discovered, admitted appropriating the funds of the association to his private use for many years," says Mr. Zimmerman.

"The amount of his shortage is uncertain, but as far as the investigation has proceeded it looks as though the shortage will net a larger amount than $75,000."

The United Home Protectors' fraternity was organized 14 years ago under a special act of the legislature, and conducted a building and loan business in the form of a fraternity, doing business only among its own members. There are about 100 subordinate lodges scattered throughout both the upper and lower peninsulas of Michigan, with a total membership of about 2,500.

Port Huron, Mich. — William L. Wilson, supreme secretary of the United Home Protectors fraternity, was arraigned Friday afternoon on the charge of embezzling $75,000 of the fraternity's funds. He refused to plead and Justice Benedict directed that a plea of not guilty be entered. Wilson waived the reading of the information and his examination was set for March 24. He was sent to jail with bail fixed at $50,000.

SENATOR W. P. WHYTE DEAD.

Famous Maryland Statesman Passes Away In Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—United States Senator William Pinckney Whyte died at his home in this city Tuesday night.

Senator Whyte was taken ill while in Washington last Thursday and returned as soon as possible. Erysipelas developed and his condition became worse. The end was peaceful.

Mr. Whyte was born in this city August 9, 1824, and was the son of Joseph Whyte and grandson of Dr. John Campbell Whyte. His maternal grandfather was the famous lawyer and orator, William Pinckney. His political career may be said to have begun with his election to the house of delegates of the Maryland legislature of 1847-8, since which time he has held nearly every office in the gift of the people of his state.

GLAD TO HAVE HIM GO.

Toll-Gate Keeper Thought He Had Visit from His Satanic Majesty.

This is not the only age in which motor cars have created excitement and disturbance. In 1802 such apparitions were few and far between; at present they are too frequent to attract attention. Mr. Joseph Hatton, in "Old Lamps and New," tells of the fright caused by one of Trevithick's steam locomotives, made to run on unrailed roads in the early part of the last century.

Now and then one of these extraordinary vehicles would be encountered, snorting and puffing on the highway. The countrymen regarded them as the evil one in disguise.

One of the cars, coming to a toll-gate, stopped for the gate to be opened. The toll-man came hurrying out. He flung the gate open with trembling hands, and teeth which chattered audibly.

The driver asked him how much toll there was to pay.

"O, nothing, dear Mr. Satan, nothing!" hastily assured the man. "Go on as fast as you like; there's nothing to pay."—Youth's Companion.

SO RUDE OF HIM.

"Why won't you see Herr Schmidt to-day, Erna?"

"O, mamma, I can't endure him any more! Only think, the last time he called he waved his handkerchief to me after leaving, and then—"

"Well, and then?"

"Then he sneezed into it!"

DEEP CRACKS FROM ECZEMA

Could Lay Slate-Pencil in One—Hands in Dreadful State—Permanent Cure in Cuticura.

"I had eczema on my hands for about seven years and during that time I had used several so-called remedies, together with physicians' and druggists' prescriptions. The disease was so bad on my hands that I could lay a slate-pencil in one of the cracks and a rule placed across the hand would not touch the pencil. I kept using remedy after remedy, and while some gave partial relief, none relieved as much as did the first box of Cuticura Ointment. I made a purchase of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and my hands were perfectly cured after two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap were used. W. H. Dean, Newark, Del., Mar. 28, 1907."

Said the business man with a grouch against the telephone central:

"I said, 'Get me fourteen-hundred so-and-so.' And the girl asked, 'One-four-oh-oh so-and-so.'"

On the Judges.

A celebrated Scottish lawyer had to address the Caledonian equivalent of our supreme court. His "pleading" occupied an entire day. After seven hours of almost continuous oratory he went home, at supper and was asked to conduct family worship. As he was exhausted his devotions were brief.

"I am ashamed of ye," said the old mother. "To think ye could talk for seeven hoors up at the court and dismiss your Maker in seeven minutes."

"Ay, verra true," was the reply, "but ye maun mind that the Lord isna sae dull in the uptak as thae judgebodies."

Answered Truthfully.

During the late financial flurry a St. Louis business man was called to serve on a jury. "What is your name?" asked the attorney. "John Smith," the business man replied. "Your color?" the attorney continued. "White," said John Smith. "Your age?" "Forty-eight," quoth Mr. Smith." "Your business?" "Rotten," said John Smith.

FLEET TO VISIT JAPAN

EMPEROR'S CORDIAL INVITATION TO ISLAND ACCEPTED.

CHINA MAY COME NEXT

Any Other Bids Probably Will Be Declined—New Itinerary Is Being Arranged in Washington.

Washington.—The American battleship fleet is to visit Japan. The desire of the emperor of the island kingdom to play host to the "big sixteen" was laid before Secretary Root Thursday by Baron Takahira, the Japanese ambassador.

The invitation which was couched in most cordial terms, was made the subject of extended consideration by President Roosevelt and his entire cabinet Friday. Secretary Root was directed to accept the invitation and the acceptance was laid before the Japanese ambassador late in the day.

It is regarded in official circles here as more than likely that China will be next to bid for a look at the fleet, and that should this be the case the invitation would be accepted.

New Itinerary Being Planned.

Secretary Metcalf and Admiral Pillsbury, chief of navigation, are arranging the details of the new itinerary. With the exception of China, it is believed to have been determined that all other invitations, should any be received, will be declined, for at best the fleet will not now be able to reach the Atlantic seaboard before the first of next March.

Emperor of Japan.

The itinerary which seems to be the most direct includes stops at the Hawaiian islands, Samoa, Melbourne, Sydney, Manila, Yokohama—should that port be selected as the stopping place in Japan—possibly a Chinese port, back to the Philippines, and then home by way of the Suez canal, with only such stops as are necessary for coaling.

Japanese Ministers Pleased.

Tokyo. — The American government's acceptance of Japan's official invitation to the battleship fleet to visit Japanese ports was received with every evidence of gratification when communicated to the foreign office and the naval department by the Associated Press Friday morning. Foreign Minister Hayashi said:

"It affords me and the whole people of Japan intense satisfaction to know that our invitation has been accepted so promptly. I believe that the visit of the fleet will afford opportunity to demonstrate the sincerity of Japan's friendship for America, and her appreciation of the courtesy of the attitude of the administration and congress. A full reception program will be prepared later."

The news of the acceptance of the invitation by telephone was communicated to Baron Saito, minister of marine, at his country residence. He was equally pleased at the intelligence.

RUSSIANS IN DEADLY DUEL.

Gen. Smirnoff Probably Fatally Wounded by Gen. Fock.

St. Petersburg.— Lieut. Gen. Smirnoff was probably fatally wounded in a duel fought here Wednesday with Lieut. Gen. Fock. The men met in the riding school of the Chevalier Guard regiment and fought with pistols, a distance of 20 paces separating them when the shots were exchanged. The duel was caused by the memorandum written by Gen. Smirnoff on the siege of Port Arthur in which he questioned the courage of Gen. Fock. The latter considered that his honor and reputation were involved and challenged the author of the memorandum.

Cruel Hoax May Be Fatal.

St. Louis.—When C. H. Hartman, in response to a hogus telegram received in Cincinnati stating his wife was dead, stepped from a train at the Union station Thursday and was met by his wife and daughter smilingly, the shock resulting from nervous tension and grief caused him to collapse and he was taken to his home in a serious condition.

RESPONDS TO REAPER'S CALL

WILLIAM J. BRYAN, OF THE EVERGLADE STATE,

Passes Away at Hospital in Washington—Was Youngest Member of the Upper House.

Washington, March 23.—William James Bryan, jr., United States senator from Florida, died in the the Providence hospital soon after 8 o'clock Sunday morning. Senator Bryan had been seriously ill for five weeks of typhoid fever, and on several occasions his life has been despaired of, but each time he rallied in a manner which won the admiration of all who knew him and led his relatives to hope that he would recover.

Senator Bryan was only 31 years of age, and with the exception of Henry Clay was the youngest man ever sent to the senate. He was appointed on December 26, last year, by Gov. Broward, of Florida, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Mallory, and took his seat January 9 last. He is the seventh senator to pass away since the adjournment of the fifty-ninth congress, and is the fifth to die since congress convened, on December 3. Of these seven six were from southern states, Senator Proctor, Vermont, being the exception.

Senator Bryan's body will be taken to his late home in Jacksonville early Monday, accompanied by a committee of senators and his widow. His death will be announced formally as soon as the senate convenes Monday by Senator Clay, of Georgia, and an adjournment will be taken at once.

Particular attention is attracted to the death of Senator Bryan in view of the fact that, as the youngest senator, he died within a few days after the death of Senator William Pinckney Whyte, of Maryland, the oldest member of the senate. Further, Senator Whyte's death last Tuesday night made it necessary for Senator LaFollette to delay the completion of his speech against the Aldrich emergency currency bill over one day, and as Senator LaFollette was to have finished his speech Monday he will be compelled to delay another day, because of Senator Bryan's death.

TELEGRAM SENT BY DRUGGIST

Caught Brady Just in Time To Save His Life.

Utica, N. Y., March 23.—William Brady, a passenger traveling over the Mohawk and Malone division of the New York Central from Montreal to New York city, was stopped barely in time from taking a poison given through mistake by a Montreal druggist. Brady has the telegraph to thank for escaping death.

Shortly before the train left Montreal Brady entered a drug store and requested that a prescription he had be compounded in a hurry, as he was about to leave the city. Soon after Brady had left the store with his medicine the druggist discovered that he had by mistake used a deadly drug in compounding the mixture. The druggist, thoroughly frightened, rushed to the Bonaventure station, and not knowing Brady's destination, or the train he left on, sent messages to several stations on the Grand Trunk and other roads, informing the man of the mistake which had been made.

One of these messages was sent to Tupper Lake, in the Adirondacks, and as the train stopped at that station the telegraph operator jumped on board and called Brady's name. Brady was at that moment standing at the water tank preparing to take the medicine. The mistake was explained and the medicine thrown away.

Awful Toll Paid By Fishermen.

Boston, March 23.—A review of the marine casualties of the coast of New England and British North America during the fall and winter season just ended shows that about 350 lives were lost. Of this number 251 persons perished in the wrecks of 10 vessels belonging to the French fishing fleet, of St. Pierre, Miquelon, last fall. These vessels foundered in heavy gales, which swept the Grand Banks. About 25 Newfoundland fishermen were also lost in these storms.

LOVES ANOTHER; KILLS WIFE

MILWAUKEE MAN CHLOROFORMS AND SHOOTS HIS SPOUSE.

Badly Wounds Himself—Tells Police Story of Twenty Years of Domestic Unhappiness.

Milwaukee. — Oc[illegible] Willoughby, manager of the Jewett & Sherman company, coffee and spice millers, early Friday morning chloroformed and then shot and killed his wife, Florence Willoughby, at their home on Prospect avenue. After the murder Willoughby fired two shots over his heart. Physicians believe he will recover as he has a vigorous constitution.

Willoughby made a full confession to the police, in substance as follows:

"I married my wife 20 years ago. I did not love her, but married her mostly out of sympathy, she being a poor woman. We frequently quarreled, Mrs. Willoughby was insanely jealous of me. She continually accused me of not being true to her and on the whole we both lived a miserable existence. Matters went on this way for years. Four years ago while I was on my way to New York I met a woman on the train. Our acquaintance ripened into love. Then for the first time I realized I had met a woman I truly loved. This woman also was living an unhappy life. Her husband was cruel to her, and soon after I met her he deserted her and her two small children. I then began to support her. We became intimate, and have been so for several years. Two years ago she obtained a divorce, and since that time I have been providing for her and her children. She is living in Chicago.

"My domestic affairs did not improve, and a long time ago I decided that I would end it all. I began to collect chloroform. I bought it in small lots, and began to keep it until I had a bottle of the drug. Friday, after my wife had fallen asleep, I obtained the chloroform and then I shot her. I then fired two shots into my breast, intending to shoot myself in the heart, but I failed. I did not have any more cartridges."

HEAVY DAMAGE AT PITTSBURG.

Flood, However, Is Not So Serious as Had Been Expected.

Pittsburg, Pa.—A feeling of relief swept over Pittsburg and vicinity early Thursday night when officials of the United States weather bureau announced that conditions had suddenly changed and that the flood which came upon the city with unusual suddenness in the morning would not be as serious as they had expected.

However, the flood will be attended by enormous loss, much of which has already been inflicted. The rise came with such suddenness that there was not time to remove goods and take other precautions such as saved property of enormous value a few weeks ago. Many families are prisoners in their homes and are being furnished food and other necessities by the flood patrol. Railroads are delayed and crippled and heavy losers of property. River craft have suffered severely.

THOMAS TO SUCCEED EVANS.

Rear Admiral Sperry Will Bring Battleships Home.

Washington.—At Admiral Evans' personal request he will be relieved of the command of the battleship fleet on reaching San Francisco. Rear Admiral Thomas, the next in seniority, will succeed Admiral Evans in command of the fleet.

Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry will bring the battleship fleet from San Francisco to the Atlantic coast by way of the Suez canal. This detail was announced by Secretary Metcalf late Tuesday.

Admiral Evans will retain command of the fleet until after the grand naval review to be held at San Francisco May 8. The admiral retires in August. It is expected he will return at once to Washington. Secretary Metcalf said, however, that he had no special duty in mind for the admiral between his relinquishment of command and the date of his retirement. Rear Admiral Thomas, who will succeed Admiral Evans in command until the homeward journey begins, is scheduled to retire in October. When he relinquishes the command to Admiral Sperry it is expected that he also will return to Washington. The vacancies caused by the retirement of Admirals Evans and Thomas will be filled by the promotion to that rank of Capts. Seaton, Schroeder and Richard Wainwright, each of whom now commands a battleship in the fleet.

NEW LIABILITY ACT ASSURED.

Speaker Cannon Tells Labor Delegation Bill Will Pass.

Washington.—Speaker Cannon and Vice-President Fairbanks Thursday announced their belief that the present congress will pass an employers' liability act which will meet and overcome the unconstitutionalities of the present law pointed out by the supreme court of the United States in a recent decision.

These statements were made unreservedly by Speaker Cannon, and guardedly by the vice-president to a delegation, led by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, from 87 national and international trade and labor organizations and farmers' organizations assembled in a national conference in this city. The delegation called on the speaker to lay before the house of representatives, through him, a memorial entitled "Labor's Protest to Congress."

ASKS MERCY FOR ORCHARD.

Judge Pronounces Death Sentence But Recommends Commutation.

Caldwell, Idaho.—Harry Orchard was sentenced to death Wednesday for the series of murders the confession of which shocked the world. But after all he may not pay the penalty which since his conversion in prison he has not turned a hand to escape.

Stating that he believed Orchard in his testimony in the trials of William D. Haywood and George A. Pettibone for the murder of ex-Gov. Frank Steunenberg told the exact truth, attempting to conceal nothing, Judge Wood recommended that the state board of pardons commute Orchard's sentence of death to imprisonment in the penitentiary. The sentence of death was pronounced in accordance with the plea of guilty entered by Orchard Tuesday of last week, when he was arraigned.

Round About the State

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

KENTUCKY GIRL

Flees From School and Again Is Found In Male Attire.

Louisville, Ky.—Dressed to a suspender button in the very clothes she wore as "cabin boy" on a river boat four weeks ago, Birdie Helms, aged 16 years, was arrested in the local post office. Juvenile court officers sent her to school three weeks ago attired in her proper vestments as a girl, and rejoicing outwardly in rustling taffetas and shiny-heeled shoes. Whence or how she came from the girls' school to which she was sent the strange little girl will not say.

It is believed that the girls at the school learned her pitiful story and chaffed her so that she ran away. Where she got her old clothing is a mystery. The girl has always dressed in man's attire in her positions as assistant barkeeper, porter and cabin boy.

GROWERS DISSATISFIED

Over the Failure of Measures in Which They Were Interested.

Louisville, Ky.—Clarence Lebus, president of the Burley Branch of the American Society of Equity, in discussing the work of the general assembly from the viewpoint of the tobacco growers of the state, said:

"We did not get all we wanted. We worked hard for the passage of the McChord bill, which would have added us a great deal, but we are thankful for the passage of the Crecilius bill, which is now a law."

Lebus says the fight of the burley men has been won and will be made complete by the absence of a crop this year. He says the organized growers in the burley district number over 20,000, and they are standing together with a determination to win.

Anti-Poolroom Bill Passed.

Frankfort, Ky.—With passage of the Wilhelmi anti-poolroom bill, which provides heavy penalties for operating poolrooms, except bookmaking on race courses during race meetings, the 1908 session of the Kentucky legislature came to an end. Only by most heroic methods were friends of the bill able to bring it out to a vote. The precedent of years was overthrown when an unfavorable committee on rules was ousted from control of the floor and by a two-thirds vote the bill was put on passage. The bill passed by a vote of 58 to 4.

Against Extra Session.

Lexington, Ky.—Representative William Klair returned from Frankfort. On the question of an extra session of the legislature he said: "I do not regard an extra session as a possibility. There is no occasion for it. All imperative legislation was disposed of and all important appropriation bills were passed."

Mullins Captured.

Jackson, Ky.—Ed Mullins, whose bond was forfeited here because of his nonappearance at the last term of the Breathitt circuit court, was arrested at Lexington. Mullins is wanted for the murder of "Tricky" Tom Tharp. His bondsman, G. T. Strong, had offered a reward of $150 for his apprehension.

Driven To Death.

Louisville, Ky.—In attempting to obey the police, H. Cohen was cut in two by an L. & N. freight here. He was riding the bumpers with another young man and a policeman saw him. "Get off!" shouted the policeman. Cohen jumped, but he landed under the wheels and was cut in two.

Indefinitely Postponed.

Louisville, Ky.—Charles Hamilton Musgrove, a local newspaper man, has received information from Secretary-Treasurer Judd Mortimer Lewis, of the American Press Humorists' association, that their annual convention has been indefinitely postponed.

Quits Grocery Business.

Louisville, Ky.—H. Wedekind, one of the founders of the wholesale grocery firm of H. Wedekind & Co., has disposed of his share in the business to Fred, Henry and Ernest Brockman. The firm is a large one, doing a business of $3,000,000 annually.

Cut Just the Same.

Louisville, Ky.—The Southern has paid no heed to the recent plea of its clerks that no reductions be made in the cases of those who draw less than $50 a month. The checks received show the reduction has been made on the usual 10 per cent basis.

Will Be Wound Up.

Lexington, Ky.—The Licking Valley Oil and Gas Co., which was organized in 1901 for the purpose of operating in the Bath and Wayne county fields, will cease to be after March 24, on which date the stockholders will wind up the business of the company.

Swept Over a Dam.

Lexington, Ky.—During a heavy storm the steamer Shamrock was swept from her moorings in the Kentucky river here, and she was carried over the dam. The Shamrock was a big boat belonging to the Kentucky River Poplar Co.

Fairbanks Declines.

Louisville, Ky.—Vice President Fairbanks will be unable to speak at the annual dinner of the Kentucky Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, April 19. He wrote that he never leaves Washington during congress.

POWERS DENIES

That He Was or Is a Candidate For Congressional Honors.

Georgetown, Ky.—From his cell in the penitentiary Caleb Powers, alleged arch-conspirator in the assassination of Gov. William Goebel, issued the following statement:

"To the Public: I have said, neither publicly nor privately, by letter or otherwise, that I was a candidate for congress in the Eleventh district. I have never been a candidate, and I am not now a candidate. It is true that I wrote the members of the congressional committee asking that no nomination be made earlier than September 15, in the hope that by that time I would be in a situation to become a candidate. A majority of the committee, many of whom Congressman Edwards has appointed to positions, and who are under obligations to him, called a primary election for June 6.

"I have not the physical strength to prosecute a canvass for congress, even if I were in the situation to do it, which I am not. I will therefore not be a candidate for congress before said primary under any state of case. If I ever regain my freedom I will first seek health, not office."

FEARING A RAID

Jailer Bridges Put a Sign "No Tobacco" on His Lettuce Bed.

Hamilton, Ky.—Fearing that the night riders would burn the jail and courthouse, Jailer Bridges, of this city, who planted a lettuce bed in the back yard of the courthouse, posted a conspicuous sign saying: "No tobacco bed; a lettuce bed."

While Bridges had not been waited on by the "visiting committee," every farmer who came to the capitol called at the courthouse yard and viewed the ominous looking white canvas which covered the bed, and the tip got out that Bridges was trying to steal a march on the growers. He was questioned closely when he purchased the canvas, and it is believed the merchants are threatened with a boycott if they sell the cloth for use on tobacco beds.

Senate Bill Passed.

Frankfort, Ky.—The senate bill appropriating $460,000 for the completion of the state capitol was passed after amendments providing $16,000 for a custodian's force and $28,000 for paying an architect and providing that F. M. Andrews be retained at the commission's pleasure.

In State of Terror.

Lexington, Ky.—Reports from Nicholas county are that tobacco growers are tearing up their plant beds by the wholesale, fearing "night riders" will destroy their property. One farmer has posted a great sign on a side of his barn, saying: "I will raise no tobacco this year."

After Bad Foods.

Louisville, Ky.—Impure foods are being smelled out by the health officials here. Practically they are after the dealer who sells a mixture of bayseed and coal tar for strawberry preserves, of chicory for coffee and of filled oleo cakes and cheese for butter.

At a Ripe Old Age.

Russellville, Ky.—Osmond Roberts, 92, one of the oldest men in Kentucky, died here. He had been in excellent health until three days ago, when he contracted a slight cold. He had lived here all his life and remembered many of the historical happenings.

Veterans Will Walk.

Lexington, Ky.—As a means towards increasing the John Hunt Morgan statue fund, 10 confederate veterans signed article for a walking match. The distance is to be one mile, and the date March 30. The contest will take place in the Coliseum.

Declared Insane.

Elizabethtown, Ky.—Claud D. Brandear, of Cloverport, was tried in the circuit court here on the charge of insanity. He attempted to kill his uncle, C. P. McClothland, of West Point, this county, who is cashier of the Kentucky and Indiana bank.

LOCAL MATTERS

W. Tolin is having a tin shingle roof put on his house that has been on fire so often, recently.

Arthur Alloway, of Petersburg, has signed for the coming season as umpire for the Western League.

The boys have brought forth their marbles, an occurrence that is a never failing sign of the approach of spring.

Don't forget the lunch that will be served at the Boone House by the local Mite Society on first Monday in April.

Among the increase of pensions recently secured by Congressman Rhinock is that of R. K. McManama, of Big Bone, raised to $20 a month.

Weather like that of yesterday and the day before will dry the roads out soon, and it may advance the fruit buds until the crop is in joepardy.

The sun crossed the line, last Sunday, on its journey northward, and from that day spring is said to date, consequently spring doings are in order.

M. L. Souther, of Idlewild, dropped in yesterday afternoon and had his subscription pushed up a notch. He is going to keep out of the danger zone.

About all the unpooled tobacco in this part of the county has been purchased by the local handlers, Conner and Hogan, neither of whom will redry very much, if any, of it.

The nice, spring-like weather this week has caused the farmers to become restless, and many of them have shed their coats and been running over themselves for a day or two.

A CARD OF THANKS.—We desire to thank our many friends and neighbors and Dr. Senior for their goodness and kindness shown me and my son during our serious illness of measles. MRS. ALICE GADD & SON.

Good for Everybody.

Mr. Norman R. Coulter, a prominent architect, in the Delbert Building, San Francisco, says: "I fully endorse all that has been said of Electric Bitters as a tonic medicine. It is for everybody. It corrects stomach, liver and kidney disorders in a prompt and efficient manner and builds up the system." Electric Bitters is the best spring medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter; as a blood purifier it is unequaled. 50c at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger.

One day last week a gentleman from Indiana accompanied by his best girl, called on county clerk Adams and asked for a marriage license, but the clerk long since vowing he would not issue a license to nonresidents, declined to comply with the request, and the disappointed parties returned in the direction from whence they came. Only the day before the clerk balked while issuing a license, when he asked the age of the would-be bride and the answer, "17," came. The parties went to Covington next day where the license was issued, but in the mean time the bride had discovered that her age was 21.

Last Saturday Dr. Paul, of Cincinnati, Dr. Peddicord, of Burlington, and Dr. Sayre, of Hebron, operated on Elmer Garnett, the 13 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Garnett, for appendicitis, at their home on the road about half way between Limaburg and Hebron. The little fellow survived until some time Sunday night. It is said that the appendix was in a very bad condition, and the doctors feared the result from the time they discovered its condition, but an operation was the only hope. Elmer was a very bright little boy, and the bereaved family has the sympathy of all in their grief.

A work horse for Alvin Johnnie Hogan had refused $235 dollars died Monday night. It was late at night when R. S. Cowen, who does not live far from the stable in which the team was kept, heard the horse, when he went and called its owner, but it was dead when they got to the stable. It is supposed that the disease was spasmodic colic. The team had been to Cincinnati and back that day, having taken in three hogsheads of tobacco, returning with a back load. The horse appeared to be alright when put in the stable, and took its food as usual. LATER—After the above was put in type Otto Crisler held a postmortem and found that the horse was a victim of bots.

The great saddle horse, High Vine, No. 2733, owned by a stock company at Walton, will be on exhibition at Burlington county court day, Monday, April 6th, and those who admire a fine horse should see him. High Vine was bought by some enterprising citizens, who desired to keep the breeding of good saddle horses up to the highest standard, and purchased the horse from parties at Georgetown for $1,500 cash. High Vine was a prize winner at many of the fairs last fall, winning first in the sweepstakes saddle and harness ring at Erlanger, and defeating the great Chancellor gelding at Sanders. He is a chestnut, coming four years old, and is 16 hands high. W. L. Gaines is the president of the livestock company that owns High Vine, and the horse will be managed by Edwards & Best, at Walton.

No Use to Die.

"I have found out there is no use to die of lung trouble as long as you can get Dr. King's New Discovery," says Mrs. J. P. White, of Rushboro, Pa. "I would not be alive today only for that wonderful medicine. It loosens up a cough quicker than anything else, and cures lung diseases even after the case is pronounced hopeless." This most reliable remedy for coughs and colds, lagrippe, asthma, bronchitis and hoarseness, is sold under guarantee at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger. 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free.

The Madison Courier, dated Feb. 17, 1862, says the cannonading at Fort Donelson Feb. 14th, 1862, was heard distinctly at that place. Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, head of the government bureau of chemistry, and a native of Kent, Jefferson county, in an address before the Daughters of Indiana at the Astor House, New York city, mentioned having heard the cannonading while working with his father in a sugar camp near Kent. It was also distinctly heard two miles back of Vevay by a party of school children crossing the meadows enroute home from school that same evening. The time was a few minutes after Commodore Foote with his fleet of gunboats engaged at close quarters the water batteries at the fort. Some of the guns in the water batteries were 128 pounders and the noise and concussion was something terrific.—Lawrenceburg Press.

J. Campbell Cantrill, president of the Burley Tobacco Association, is out in a lengthy statement denouncing the "night riders" and calling upon the members of the Society of Equity to do all in their power to suppress those violators of the law. He says if the depredations of these lawless men are continued that the tobocco movement is doomed. It is a great pity that Mr. Cantrill had not issued this card immediately upon the appearance of the Hawkins card of a few weeks since, as no doubt it would have offset, in a very great measure, the evil effects of Hawkin's ill timed statements.

The cruel murder of Hiram Hedges, of Nicholas county, by the "night riders," one night last week is the severest jolt Kentucky has received in many years. Every person who has the least respect for law and order, loves the institutions of his county and recognizes that others have rights that are entitled to respect under the laws of both God and man, can not help hanging his head in shame when he thinks of that diabolical crime, if he is a Kentuckian.

The engineers in charge of the Ohio river improvements have recommended that four locks and dams be built between Cincinnati and Louisville: No. 37, now under way at Fernbank; No. 38, at Rising Sun; No. 39, between Florence and Markland, and No. 40, about two miles above Madison.

In this issue appears the announcement of Hon. R. H. Ellis-ton, of Williamstown, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress. The RECORDER will tell you something about him next week.

Oscar Vest, of Owenton, has been appointed Sargeant-at-Arms for the Democratic national convention to be held in Denver. It pays ten dollars a day and all expenses.

Being backed by the President and the federal officeholders makes about certain the nomination of Secretary Taft for the Presidency.

What never leak? Exactly; never leak, never needs repairs of any kind, and last as long as the building itself. Neither melting snow, nor the worst driving rain can possibly reach the interior of the building that's covered with Cortright Metal Shingles. Pretty good recommendation isn't it? In addition we might add they're fire-proof and lightning proof too. Think of it! and they are not as expensive as other forms of roofing. Step in and we'll show them to you.

It seems that the 1907 effort to build a turnpike out the East Bend road was tucked away to sleep indefinitely, as no effort has been made in the last several months to revive an interest in the enterprise, although in some places the condition of the road has been terribly bad and a very great annoyance to those who have to use it.

The Lucky Quarter.

Is the one you pay out for a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They bring you the health that's more precious than jewels. Try them for headache, biliousness, constipation and malaria. If they disappoint you the price will be cheerfully refunded at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

B. B. Hume has been awarded the contract for carrying, for four years, beginning July 1, 1908, the mail on the Burlington—Florence—Erlanger route. The amount he is to receive for his services is considerably in excess of the bid under which he is now working. There were two good reasons for the increase of the pay on the route: First, because the mail has been carried for several years at a price far too low. Second, the institution of the rural routes at Florence, Union and Burlington has increased very largely the volume of mail that has to be handled, to say nothing about a large number of individual boxes along the route to which he is required to deliver mail matter. The people at this end of the route are very glad that Mr. Hume landed the contract.

About ten years ago, while Tony Bentler was living at the place now owned and occupied by W. P. Sullivan, just south of town, Mrs. Bentler lost her wedding ring, a large, plain gold ring. She and Mr. Bentler thought someone had stolen it, but this supposition was proven incorrect a few days ago when Mr. Sullivan found the ring near the large gate at the entrance to the premises near the creek. Mrs. Bentler's name was engraved on the inside of the ring, which placed its identification beyond question. The ring had laid in the road there nearly a decade, and, strange to say it had not been run figured in the least. Mrs. Bentler was delighted at the recovery of the ring and its return to her at her home in Covington. This is another instance which shows how easily it is for a person to be mistaken in the cause of the disappearance of their property.

Card of Thanks.

To the Patrons and Pupils of Sandrun School District No. 17:—It gives me great pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of the most beautiful "souvenir spoon" which was presented me by my pupils at close of school. Also the "china pitcher" received from Miss Lottie Brown. They are highly appreciated I assure you, and I wish to express my thanks to the pupils not only for the presents but for their kindness and ready obedience shown me during the past six months. May you continue through life as obliging and obedient and in after years when you are the rulers of our commonwealth then will I be glad to say I was once your teacher. May such friendly relations ever exist between you and your unworthy teacher.

SADIE L. RIEMAN.

The special grand jury impaneled by Judge Cammack to investigate the barn-barning and other acts of depredation by "Night Riders" near New Liberty, Owen county, last week, adjourned after a three-days' effort to bring these parties to justice. Their report says they examined many witnesses but they failed to disclose any evidence upon which to base an indictment. They recommend that the next grand jury take up the work, and that a determined effort be made to disclose the identity of those who engaged in this raid.

It is strange how the several bands of "night riders" have been able to burn, whip and shoot and not one of them be detected; and further, how they can assemble and execute with perfect precision their program of destruction and then disappear from the face of the earth as it were. To do such things so successfully requires considerable drilling and a perfect understanding on their part, besides a leader who knows his men and men who know their leader.

JAPANESE SNAPSHOTS

The Funny Things One Sees in Smiling Round the World

By MARSHALL P. WILDER

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The streets in Japan are fascinating, overflowing as they are with life and color. The children are as the [illegible] of the sea, and seven times out of ten a child has a smaller one strapped to his or her back. There is no distinction, boys playing nurse quite as frequently as girls. I contrasted their cheerfulness and evident pleasure in performing this duty with the outraged dignity of an American boy of 10 or 12 obliged to carry a baby about for a morning or afternoon.

The children are put out of the houses early in the morning, when the mothers sweep, dust and polish everything to an immaculate cleanliness, and the little nomads live and play, and apparently eat all their meals in the streets.

The shops are open to the streets, and closed at night with wooden shutters. At the back of every shop may be seen the paper covered sliding screen leading into the little home. This screen is almost invariably open, disclosing the entire family group. The hair-dresser, building up the wonderful coiffure—rolled over tiny bolsters, and greased with cocoa-oil to a shining blackness—affected by the Japanese women; shampooing, sewing, writing, reading—every occupation is in full view of the passer-by.

* * * * *

Speaking of shops and making oneself understood, I felt that after my experience in the Hawaiian tongue I was fully justified in letting the Japanese severely alone. I never got much beyond the two words, "O-hay-o" (good morning) and "sayonara" (good-by). The "good morning" is pronounced as near like Ohio as they can make it.

I suppose if they wanted to bid anyone "good night" they would say Philadelphia.

But I did try to learn something about the Japanese money and its various divisions, only I had bad luck from the start. I got hold of the wrong customer, or else he did.

I started in to buy some sandals and a hat. I know that one yen, at par, is worth almost exactly 50 cents American money, and that ten rin go to a sen, and 100 sen to a yen. But the old man who waited on me either knew no more than I did, or was exploiting some new and original methods of his own; for he held up the sandals in one hand and the hat in the other, the while he ejaculated in a low guttural: "Mon! mon!"

"Oh, yes! I gotta da mon!" I replied, pulling out my purse, and spreading some Japanese coins in my palm.

But he shook his head and held up his forefinger, saying: "Shy!"

"Oh, I'm shy one, am I? Well, take this!" and I threw the largest coin I had into the little basket before him. But this seemed to excite him. He wagged his forefinger at me and cried: "Bunkyu!" at the top of his voice.

"Bunco me? I guess not, my friend!" I replied. "I'm from New York!"

At this he threw down the hat and sandals, and, shaking his hands as though he were trying to get rid of soap-suds, cried: "Shi-mon! shi-mon!"

"Oh, I was shy one, and now I'm shy the whole business! Well, I don't think you and I will make a deal to-day!" and sweeping the coins into my purse, I was preparing to be gone.

Suddenly he leaned forward, thrust his face close to mine, and in the most indescribable manner hissed through his teeth: "Ichi-bu! ichi-bu!"

"Well, say! Did you ever play that Exotic game with a six or seven months' old infant, sayyed Kitch-a-boo? The baby lies in the cradle, or on its mother's lap, as the case may be, and you, wishing to make yourself solid with the family, lean over and, assuming a ghastly grin, teeter over toward the infant and then teeter back again, and then teeter forward, muttering: "Kitch-a-boo! Kitch-a-boo!" until it's ten to one that the kid either goes into fits or lets out a howl that makes the mother wish that murder was not a punishable offense.

If you have ever indulged in that tender little pastime, then you can have some idea of my frame of mind when the old Jap performed this strange antic. Backing away from him, I shook my head violently and thrust my purse into my pocket; when he plucked me by the sleeve, and with a whine that would have done credit to a Hester street old clothes man, said: "Kanye! Kanye!"

"No, I can't! and I'm hanged if I ever will!" and with that I turned away, and the negotiation was at an end.

Now, what do you think was the matter with the old fellow? Why, he was not only a little touched in the upper story, but he knew nothing of the cash system of his country later than the vintage of 1868. He had been left to tend the shop for a few moments, and as usual I fell a victim to the charge of [illegible]. Let it be said, that, according to Delmar, the standard formerly was, as in China, the small round iron or bronze coins with the square hole in the center which were of three denominations: First, the mon; second, the bunkyu; third, the shi-mon. The shi was an oblong silver coin, and the ichi-bu another; the latter being equal to four shi. Kan-ye means the era of coinage; but the era on the old coins does not indicate the age of the coin. For example, coins made about 1860 bear the name of the era kanye.

The manufacture of all these ceased at the beginning of the present era of Meidji, that is to say, the 25th of January, 1868, which was the year when the present emperor assumed sovereign power. The mon is now valued at one rin, and the bunkyu at one and one-half rin. The old gold coins and the oblong silver ones are only to be found in the curio shops.

When her husband dies, even though she may be young and charming, the widow's hair is cut off, and she is doomed for the rest of her life to single blessedness and a cropped head. An old-time custom, which is fortunately dying out, was to blacken a woman's teeth when she got married. So it was hard to tell which was most disfiguring—getting a husband or losing one. Every district has its own distinctive marriage ceremony, but the following is the one in general use:

No priest officiates at the marriage ceremony. An elderly couple, called the "go-betweens," conduct the courtship and assist the bride and groom to perform the rite that makes them man and wife, which consists in nine cups of wine drunk alternately by the bride and groom, who hand them to each other. This is called the "san-san-kudo," literally "three-three-nine," and means that they will share the bitter and the sweet in life's cup together.

Sometimes there are the images of an old man and woman, a couple who lived happily for a hundred years; also a bough of plum blossoms, symbol of conjugal happiness.

The bride wears white, the mourning color in Japan, to signify that her old life is ended—for marriage is too often a sort of death-in-life to the Japanese woman. She is virtually the slave of her mother-in-law, and must live only for her husband's family, who exact from her the most abject submission. She marries at 16 and begins a life of drudgery that makes her an old woman at 30 or 35, and her only gleam of hope in life lies in her having sons who will marry and place her in the envied position of mother-in-law.

large hood made of white wadding, that modestly shades her features. When the ceremony—which is never witnessed by the guests—is completed, she retires and changes her costume; for the wedding kimono once doffed, is never worn again.

When she is re-dressed, she appears at the feast to which guests are bidden. Very wealthy brides retire between each course—sometimes there are nine, sometimes seven or eleven, a regular game of craps!—and reappear in more gorgeous raiment, until you begin to think there's a corner in kimonos.

When the feasting is over, the "go-between" couple conducts them to the bridal chamber and serves them a special cup called the "bed-wine." During the marriage ceremony the bridal pair do not drink the nine cups of wine, but merely touch their lips to the cup; for the well-known potency of the sake would have them paralyzed by about the fifth cup, and they'd never get married at all.

THEORY ALL WRONG

REPUBLICAN IDEAS BASED ON FALLACIES.

Excessive Tariff Rates Have Simply Resulted in the Building Up of Enormous Fortunes for the Comparative Few.

The Republican theory of trade, both domestic and foreign, is based on fallacies. They believe that if our manufacturers are protected by tariff rates high enough to prevent or retard importations from foreign countries, the home market will consume all our factories can produce. For some little time this theory seemed to work to their satisfaction, but the manufacturers discovered that the high prices produced by this lack of foreign competition also had the effect of producing more manufacturers at home to take advantage of the large profits. This increased competition between manufacturers led to the formation of trusts and combines; so that high tariff became the "mother of trusts." These trusts combined or purchased as many of the establishments in each line of business as could be induced to sell or participate, and at once increased prices to the point just below where foreign competitors could export their products to compete with the products of the trusts. So the price of trust and tariff protected products was increased both by the limitation of competition at home and by the prohibition of competition from abroad.

Hence we have had the rise in prices since the present tariff law was in operation. The trusts and combines, however, finding their profits so large, were induced to manufacture more than the American people could consume at the high prices they charged, so they began to look for foreign markets abroad. But high prices had naturally produced increased cost of manufacture and to find customers abroad they were compelled to sell there cheaper than to our own people.

For some time the Republicans decided that American goods were sold cheaper abroad than here, but the Democrats produced evidence that proved it was being done. Then the Republicans changed their ground and declared that the tariff protected trusts were merely "dumping" some of their shop-worn and out-of-style products on the foreigners at bargain prices. Again the Democrats produced the evidence, in their campaign book of 1902, that hundreds of articles, exactly the same as those sold here, were being offered and sold by exporters for large discounts from the price in this country.

The trusts selling abroad cheaper than at home very naturally led to repisals by foreign governments, and nearly every country but England has increased its tariff rates to prevent our trusts from competing with their manufacturers. Notably, Russia, Germany and France have enacted prohibitive tariffs, and the conservative party in England was led to make the increase of the tariff an issue, but the people of England, when the election came around, stuck to the tariff for revenue, under which England has prospered and become the greatest manufacturing nation.

The tariff and trust era in this country has produced extravagance and built up enormous fortunes, by taxing the many for the benefit of the few, and although it has thus produced prosperity for the few, it has also helped to cause a panic that has shaken the foundations of the financial and business affairs of the country.

The Republicans now face a demand for tariff reform in their own ranks from the manufacturers who are not in trusts or combines who find that the steel trust, the coal trust, the paper trust, the leather trust and other trusts have so increased prices of the partly manufactured articles they produce, that those who use such in their business, like the manufacturers of steel into implements and the factories that use coal, and the newspaper publishers and shoe manufacturers, are combining for tariff reform.

The Republican program of standing pat is therefore in such danger of defeat that there is a panic in the ranks of the protectionists.

Taft Only a Politician.

If it is true as reported from Washington that Secretary Taft's friends have induced him to abandon temporarily his fight for tariff reduction on Philippine products, in order that he may not alienate the votes of the sugar states in the Chicago convention, the circumstance is not to be in credit as a people.

Public sentiment ought to be in such an aroused and healthy state that an act of courage and justice would make sure of winning more strength than it could offend. With the people in general this is always true; but of course among the politicians who choose delegates a policy of evasion and cowardice addresses a cogent appeal.

Aim of the Democratic Party.

Without injuring any industry the Democratic party is resolved to relieve the American consumer of American industrial products of the excessive tribute levied by monopolies which the Dingley tariff fosters. It is one thing to give a domestic industry a reasonable preferential tax against foreign competition and quite another to give the same industry the power to exact from all other industries profits that are unreasonable and oppressive.

QUARREL OVER THE SPOILS.

Republicans in Factional Dispute About Delegates.

The anti-Roosevelt-Taft Republicans have been denouncing the use of presidential patronage to influence the selection of delegates to the Republican convention. That only those favorable to the president's "policies" were being appointed was charged in all directions and much of the evidence seemed to confirm the charges. Now comes President Roosevelt and enters a general denial and declares that the boot is on the other leg, for those who have been violating the civil service injunctions "have been men who are not working for Mr. Taft."

Yet in spite of this denial by President Roosevelt, of the misuse of official patronage, his admission that his "interference with patronage matters in Ohio has been limited to insisting, as I should insist anywhere else, that opposition to the purposes, policies and friends of the administration sha'l not be considered as a necessary prerequisite to holding the commission of the president," would seem to admit that only Roosevelt men are placed on guard. The next day Senator Forsaker in the senate gave the evidence that convicted President Roosevelt of trying to coerce an Ohio postmaster. These Republican squabbles over the spoils of office, and the evident intention of the dominant Republican faction to perpetuate its power by all means possible, is of little interest to Democrats, except as it interferes with good government. It is quite certain that the Foraker-Knox-Cannon-Fairbanks faction would do what they are charging the president with doing, and the only Republican mentioned for president that would be at all likely to reform the abuse of patronage is Gov. Hughes. For that very reason the Republican politicians, including President Roosevelt, are opposing the ambition of Gov. Hughes, and most of those who appear to be helping him are merely doing so to defeat the Roosevelt faction.

Such is the groveling attitude of the Republican politicians, and from a patriotic standpoint it would seem that the independent voters must be heartily sick of both factions. "Turn the rascals out."

The Tariff Abroad and Here.

The consul of the United States at Chemnitz, Germany, reports that German commerce is declining and that imports and exports for October are both less than in 1906. Such a decrease is hardly to be wondered at, for tariff protection for the few at the expense of the many, which throttles commerce, is the policy in Germany as in the United States. Cartels, which we call trusts, besides an endless number of syndicates and combinations to keep up prices, are steadily reported in the press of that country. The object of tariff protection in Germany was originally to help the landowners—the aristocracy of that country—but the result has been to also build up monopoly by industrial corporations and manufacturers. The advance in the price of meat, flour and other protected agricultural products has enabled the German farmers to pay the high rents demanded by the landlords, but the increased cost of living has weighed heavily upon the workingmen. The manufacturers demanded their share of protection, and, being politically influential, the landlords were compelled to admit them to the sacred tariff protected circle. The disfranchised and unprotected artisans and laborers are rioting in the streets of Berlin and demanding work and votes. Those with limited incomes, as with us, are the worst sufferers, for they find no increase in their incomes to offset the enormous increase in the cost of living.

It will thus be seen that while our farmers are plundered by the tariff, the German farmers have been somewhat helped by it, in consequence of their aristocratic landlords forcing protection from American agricultural products. That, of course, decreases the demand for the products of our farmers, and when the new German tariff law goes into effect it will be felt with increased severity by the United States. The temporary tariff arrangement made by this country with Germany, until congress provides for a reciprocity treaty with that country, is being attacked by our standpatters, who will prevent any reduction of duties as long as they control congress. Meanwhile England, with a tariff for revenue only, is increasing her commerce and times are comparatively good there. There are no plundering trusts and the farmers and workingmen are better off than ever before. How do our standpat friends explain the good conditions in England and the lack of prosperity in Germany and the United States?

A Thieves' Quarrel.

The tin plate makers of this country are having a quarrel with the steel trust over the division of tariff spoils. A hundred thousand tons of tin plate bars have been sold by the steel trust for delivery in Wales at $21.90. Allowing $4.10 for the cost of shipping the product, the price at the mills is $17.80, while the price to American consumers is $29.

Naturally the tin plate makers view the action of the steel trust with displeasure. The tin plate makers demanded, and received, through the Dingley tariff law, special protection which they did not need at all. The steel trust organizers fared likewise. The latter have now succeeded in employing the tariff law to deliver a foul blow to one of their best patrons.

This is a case where the ancient adage touching upon the subject of honor among thieves does not apply.

BROUGHT IN MONSTER CRAB.

Japanese Fisherman Has Struggle with Ocean Leviathan.

Here is rather a startling tale of a huge crab told in the demure language of a Japanese newspaper: "In the harbor of Shimidzu a great haul of fish is daily experienced since the return of the new year, to the delight of the fishermen. Fish is sold so cheaply that there is a large crowd waiting at the seashore struggling to be the foremost to buy. Some of the eager buyers sail off to purchase fish before the fishermen's junks arrive from seaward. Among these competitive purchasers was one named Kato, who sailed out by himself in a small boat. As he was steering his way onward he espied at a distance some dark object.

"Kato did not take any notice of it at first, but as it showed the upper half of its bulk above the water he was convinced that it was a crab of really monstrous size. The man took fright and sailed toward the shore with all his might and main. The crab, however, appeared to be bent on a fight with the man and swam after the boat with incredulous rapidity. The huge crustacean soon overtook the boat and putting one of its bony arms over the side threatened to overturn it.

"Kato thought his fate was now sealed and fought gallantly with the crab, which was more than once on the point of upsetting the boat. After a long and fierce battle the crab was vanquished and captured. Kato brought it ashore and showed it to all his astonished friends. Its arms were over 12 feet in length and the size of its shell is about five feet in diameter. Its weight is 20 kan" (160 pounds).

Curious Jewish Ceremony.

In the presence of the whole Jewish population of Kolomea, Galicia, the ashes of 11 burned scrolls of the law were solemnly interred in the cemetery there. This very unusual ceremony arose from a fire which broke out in the synagogue a few days ago. A lighted candle fell against the silk curtains before the Ark of the Covenant, which began to burn, and 11 parchment scrolls of the law contained in the ark were completely destroyed.

In accordance with the Hebrew ritual, the council of the synagogue arranged a funeral with as much ceremony as for a deceased member. The ashes of each scroll were carefully collected and placed in separate earthen urns, and then all the 11 urns were inclosed in a wooden coffin, together with a black and white book of prayers. This was placed on a hearse, which, followed by a large crowd, proceeded to the cemetery, when the coffin was duly deposited in a newly-made grave.

Diabolo Not Popular Then.

A hundred and thirty-two boys and 72 girls in a Parisian school were invited to describe their preferences in the way of toys. Amongst the former 31 voted for a railway train, 23 for tin soldiers, ten for steam engines, nine for building bricks and eight each for toy typewriters and mechanical horses. Forty girls—a solid majority—declared without hesitation that a doll was superior to any other implement of recreation. The superchild seems, happily, a long way off. And as diabolo had only two boys and six girl supporters the "Devil's Disciple" may still be called an infrequent object of the playground.—The Schoolmaster.

Danger of New Service.

The Standard Oil Company has instituted barge service across the Atlantic ocean for the transportation of oil in bulk. Two large steel barges will be towed back and forth by oil-carrying steamers. The fact that the steel hawser of one of the barges has a length of 3,000 feet is cited as evidence of the danger of the new service. A gap of three-fifths of a mile between steamer and tow is wide enough to let in trouble during dark and stormy nights, especially where barges are a rarity.

CANARY CAN TALK

REMARKABLE BIRD OWNED BY BOSTON MAN.

Sound of a Broom Over the Floor Incites Little Songster to Speech—Has a Comparatively Large Vocabulary.

One day in August of last summer, as Prof. Underwood was journeying into the interior of New Brunswick on a 73-mile drive with Mrs. Underwood, the native driver who was with him told a tale of a canary who could talk, says the Boston Transcript. This amused Prof. Underwood, for he thought it another of the stories of the same nature which are found to be untrue when traced to their source.

The driver, however, was not repeating rumors that he had heard, but stating facts, for the canary he referred to was the property of his aunt. To prove the truth of what he had said he offered to show the bird.

Prof. Underwood says of his first hearing the canary talk, that it was while he was inside the house where it was owned that he heard it say: "Kiss me, sweet little Becky, dear." The bird was hanging in its cage outside the door, and for the time being Prof. Underwood had forgotten about the fact that he was to hear a talking canary. He wondered what manner of bird it was that was talking thus, and went outside to escape the noise of the sweeping which happened to be the occupation of his hostess for the moment. Of course, it dawned on him immediately that what he had heard was the canary of his driver friend.

And then it said: "Sweet bird," "Kiss me, Becky," and "Kiss me, dear," and other combinations of the words it had first used. It did not speak with the hard tone of a parrot, but in a sweetly musical way that was almost a part of its song.

The little fellow learned to talk quite by accident. He was not bred to it, and as far as anyone knows was born and raised in this country, of the usual common household variety of canary antecedents, eight years ago. It was while the woman who owned him was sweeping about her home one day that she first noticed that he could talk. She had been in the habit of speaking to him as she did her housework and probably had spoken to him more often than a city housewife would because of the isolation of the place, located as it was in the backwoods.

And because he has learned to talk with the broom swishing about the floor this little canary now refuses to talk unless some one is sweeping. All that is necessary to start him is the sound of a broom over the floor. It seems to arouse such thrills in his little heart that he just cannot help talking. And he does so even under the most trying conditions, as the following will illustrate:

The New Brunswick owner of the bird had brought him to Boston from Plaster Rock, a long, hard trip for a canary bird. Prof. Underwood met him shortly after his arrival, by accident, and invited him to visit his office in the Pierce building, Trinity place. The man accepted. A broom was secured and a vigorous sweeping commenced. Even with the paper still covering the cage and notwithstanding the fatigue of a long journey from Plaster Rock, the little fellow immediately started to talk in his musical voice.

Only one other instance of a canary which has had the power of speech is given much credence by naturalists and that bird lived so many centuries ago that the facts are shrouded in mystery. It is said that an early king of England once made a royal progress to the north of Scotland for the purpose of hearing a canary say: "Pretty Peter." It has never, however been claimed for any other canary that has been attributed with speech that it spoke more than two words, and this little fellow has a comparatively large vocabulary.

A Prisoner.

An army officer stationed at an inaccessible island post in Narragansett bay recently engaged a young woman of Hibernian extraction as a domestic. Three days after her arrival at the post she announced to the family her intention of leaving.

"What is the matter, Mary? Is the work too hard?" inquired Mrs. Blank.

"No, indade, ma'am," replied the maid; "the work is 'asy, and you're a nice family to live with."

"Then why don't you stay?"

"Faith, and it is so hard to get away from here. When you told me this place was on an island I did not understand that it was entirely surrounded by water." — Harper's Weekly.

No Come Back.

"You say your sister was permitted to ask questions of the spirit of her departed husband at the seance last night?"

"Yes, she asked the departed quite a number of questions."

"Were his replies convincing?"

"I don't know; she acted just like she used to when he was alive and didn't give him a chance to reply."—Houston Post.

A REMARKABLE MAN.

Active and Bright, Though Almost a Centenarian.

Shepard Kollock, of 44 Wallace St., Red Bank, N. J., is a remarkable man at the age of 98. For 40 years he was a victim of kidney troubles and doctors said he would never be cured. "I was trying everything," says Mr. Kollock, "but my back was lame and weak, and every exertion sent a sharp twinge through me. I had to get up several times each night and the kidney secretions contained a heavy sediment. Recently I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, with fine results. They have given me entire relief."

WHY THEY SLEEP IN CHURCH.

Hypnotism, Not Drowsiness, Declared to Be the Cause.

"Churchgoers don't sleep in church. They undergo an hypnotic trance. The soothing voices and mild music and monotonous recitative of a church service put forth powerful hypnotic influences, and that is why the pews resemble a railroad track in the abundance of their sleepers."

The speaker, a hypnotist, banged the table vehemently.

"Don't laugh," he said. "It's true. Hypnotism, not drowsiness, is what makes you sleep in church. Through your auditory nerve sound waves are passed to your brain that are as effective as though a professional hypnotist had made them. Sound, you know, is the newest and best hypnotic.

"At first, in the church service, the periodicity of the wave alterations is short. There is a little speaking, then more music. And just when you are getting properly lulled the clergyman, in a modulated, agreeable, soothing voice, speaks on and on and on—and you begin to nod. You are, hypnotically speaking, entranced.

"The average church service is a scientifically correct hypnotic instrument. No wonder, then, it puts many of us to sleep."

A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE.

Schoolmaster—Do you wish your son to learn the dead languages?

Mr. Koffin—Certainly, as I shall require him to asist in my business as an undertaker.

Giving It the Acid Test.

The clairvoyant was swaying back and forth under the severe strain of her mental connection with the realm of spirits.

"Now," she chanted, "call upon any soul you will and I will make it speak to you—yes, even visible to you." For she was up to date in the biz.

"Bring me," asked the masculine skeptic, "Brevity, the soul of Wit."

A Diplomat.

"So you gave your husband a box of cigars?"

"Yes," answered young Mrs. Torkins.

"Did he appreciate them?"

"Indeed he did. He values them so highly that he is smoking a pipe so as not to use them up too fast."

HAPPY OLD AGE

Most Likely to Follow Proper Eating.

As old age advances, we require less food to replace waste, and food that will not overtax the digestive organs, while supplying true nourishment.

Such an ideal food is found in Grape-Nuts, made of whole wheat and barley by long baking and action of diastase in the barley which changes the starch into sugar.

The phosphates also, placed up under the bran-coat of the wheat, are included in Grape-Nuts, but left out of white flour. They are necessary to the building of brain and nerve cells.

"I have used Grape-Nuts," writes an Iowa man, "for 8 years and feel as good and am stronger than I was ten years ago. I am over 74 years old, and attend to my business every day.

"Among my customers I meet a man every day who is 92 years old and attributes his good health to the use of Grape-Nuts and Postum which he has used for the last 5 years. He mixes Grape-Nuts with Postum and says they go fine together.

"For many years before I began to eat Grape-Nuts, I could not say that I enjoyed life or knew what it was to be able to say 'I am well.' I suffered greatly with constipation, now my habits are as regular as ever in my life.

"Whenever I make extra effort I depend on Grape-Nuts food and it just fills the bill. I can think and write a great deal easier."

WESTERN CANADA CROPS CANNOT BE CHECKED.

OATS YIELDED 90 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE.

The following letter written the Dominion Government Commissioner of Emigration speaks for itself. It proves the story of the Agents of the Government that on the free homesteads offered by the Government it is possible to become comfortably well off in a few years:

Regina, Sask., 23rd Nov., 1907.
Commissioner of Immigration,
Winnipeg.

Dear Sir:

It is with pleasure that I reply to your request. Some years ago I took up a homestead for myself and also one for my son. The half section which we own is situated between Rouleau and Drinkwater, adjoining the Moose Jaw creek, is [illegible] and heavy land. We put in 70 acres of wheat in stubble, which went 20 bushels to the acre, and 30 acres of summer fallow, which went 25 bushels to the acre. All the wheat we harvested this year is No. 1 hard. That means the best wheat that can be raised on the earth. We did not sell any wheat yet as we intend to keep one part for our own seed, and sell the other part to people who want first-class seed, for there is no doubt if you sow good wheat you will harvest good wheat. We also threshed 9,000 bushels of first-class oats out of 160 acres. 80 acres has been fall plowing which yielded 90 bushels per acre, and 80 acres stubble, which went 30 bushels to the acre. These oats are the best kind that can be raised. We have shipped three car loads of them, and got 53 cents per bushel clear. All our grain was cut in the last week of the month of August before any frost could touch it.

Notwithstanding the fact that we have had a late spring, and that the weather conditions this year were very adverse and unfavorable, we will make more money out of our crop this year than last.

For myself I feel compelled to say that Western Canada crops cannot be checked, even by unusual conditions.

I am, dear sir,
Yours truly,
(Signed) A. Kaltenbrunner.

Facing the Enemy.

Two veterans of the civil war were in the habit of "joliying" each other in regard to a lack of valor on the field of battle.

"Why," said the one, "at the very first engagement, when the order was given to retreat, you were so scared that you threw down your arms and ran for dear life."

"Nonsense," replied the other. "That was the time I got the three flesh wounds in the chest. If I'd been running away, as you claim, I would have been shot in the back."

"Oh, no, you wouldn't," returned his friend. "The reason you got shot in the chest was because you took to the river and were trying to get away in a rowboat."

Beyond Him.

On the occasion of the production of "Lucia" at the Metropolitan opera house last winter a well-known clubman, who had taken a cousin from a Connecticut town to hear Donizetti's great work, turned to his relative during the first intermission and asked how he liked the opera.

"Oh, pretty fair," said the visitor; "but is the whole blamed thing in Latin?"—Harper's.

A New Excuse.

"I suppose your husband is proud to contribute his share toward the support of our beautiful library?"

"Yes," answered the woman with the slightly acid expression; "only John was none too industrious in the first place and now he's tempted to put in most of his time reading novels and trying to get his money's worth."—Washington Star.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT WHITE LEAD IS?

Its Chief Use and a Method of Determining Good from Bad Explained.

White Lead is the standard paint material all over the world. It is made by corroding metallic lead into a white powder, through exposing it to the fumes of weak acetic acid and carbonic acid gas; this powder is then ground and mixed with linseed oil, making a thick paste, in which form it is packed and sold for painting purposes. The painter thins it down to the proper consistency for application by the addition of more linseed oil.

The above refers, of course, to pure, genuine White Lead only. Adulterated and fake "White Lead," of which there are many brands on the market, is generally some sort of composition containing only a percentage of white lead; sometimes no White Lead at all; in such stuff, barytes or ground rock, chalk, and similar cheap substances are used to make [illegible] imitate the appearance of pure White Lead.

There is, however, a positive test by which the purity or impurity of White Lead may be proved or exposed, before painting with it.

The blow-pipe flame will reduce pure white lead to metallic lead. If a supposed white lead be thus tested and it only partially reduces to lead, leaving a residue, it is proof that something else was there be[illegible]es white lead.

The National Lead Company guarantee all White Lead sold in packages bearing its "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark to prove absolutely pure under this blow-pipe test, and that you may make the test yourself in your own home, they will send free upon request a blow-pipe and everything else necessary to make the test, together with a valuable booklet on paint. Address, National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York.

The Philomathean Society will entertain with an open session at the school hall, Friday evening, March 27th, and the RECORDER has just issued from its press a handsome advertising program of the business interests of Walton, the advertisers paying for the advertisements and thus defraying the expenses as no admission fee to the entertainment will be charged. The following is the program: Piano Duet, Sara and Rachal Conner; Recitation—Miss Kate Penoyla—Sarah Gaines; Music, Myrtle Murphy—Sketch—"Madison Square at Eight." Miss Georgia Flyte (a Roman young lady), Mamie Haley; Dick Dash (a suitor), Ben Stansifer; Barney Gilmore (an Irish hack driver), Snyder Watts; Schwartz (a Dutch policeman), Dan Bedinger; Shifty (a tramp), Wayne Byland; Clutch (a newsboy), Wilmont Kinsley. Music, Harry Houston; Recitation—The Famine—Cecil Menifee; Delphian Oracle, Mamie Haley; Music, Mayme Northcutt. Play—"The Deestrict Skule"—the Society.

Nearly every up-to date country town has enough musical inclined people to have a band, and what the public has to endure during the periods of practice, individually and collectively, can be well imagined. But Walton is an exception to the rule, having a band that has been a pleasure to everybody from its incipiency. The boys all had an aptitude for music, and their playing from the beginning was more than could be expected, and was enjoyable because of its harmony and selection. Under the management and training of Prof. Taylor Grubbs, the band has attained a standard of excellence as to pronounce it among the best in the country, and it is able to meet every requirement and fill engagements on short notice and at very reasonable rates. It ought to have all the engagements to play in this quarter, and especially in Boone county and the country fairs. The public will be pleased with it in every way as all the members are well behaved, first-class gentlemen, and present a handsome appearance in their very neat and pretty new uniforms.

Hon. Wm. M. Gibson, a prominent attorney of San Francisco, California, was the guest of his cousin, J. J. Hudson and family, several days last week, and met quite a number of our citizens, who were very much pleased with his charming personality. Mr. Gibson is a native of Covington, and went to California with his parents in 1852, when he was about 18 months old, and has since resided in the Golden State, growing to be one of the most influential candidates of San Francisco. Mr. Gibson is an ardent Democrat, and canvassed the entire State of California for Bryan in his two campaigns. He has never lost his fealty to his mother State, and his heart's desire has been to return to the native heath for a visit at least. Being an attorney for a wealthy New Yorker, who owns 17,000 acres of land in California, he had occasion to visit him in New York City, and in his long trip across the continent from the Pacific ocean to the Atlantic, he met many Kentuckians, and he was delightfully pleased with their loyal expressions to their native State and her people, and it made him more proud than ever of being a Kentuckian, as they are more loyal to their State than anyother class. Mr. Gibson is a very polished, learned gentleman and brilliant in his general characteristics.

An enthusiastic turnpike meeting was held at Lawrence Ryan's, Bear neighborhood, last Monday, at which the proposition to pike the road that is known as the Walton and Beaver grade, one of the most important arteries of public travel in this county, and passes through a fertile territory where many of Boone's clever and most prosperous people live, was the important topic discussed. Everybody at the meeting favored the construction of the 'pike, and when the meeting adjourned nearly enough money had been subscribed to build the road when supplemented by the county's $500 a mile. Sam C. Johnson, Curtis Johnson, J. J. Hudson, and numerous others as good hustlers are behind the move, which almost insures its success.

Mrs. Nannie McAtee, of Ludlow, is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Ada Conner, and her sister, Mrs. R. B. Carver.

We desire to thank our friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy during the fatal illness of our little daughter, Bessie, who died in January; and especially do we desire to thank Bro. John Cropper for his kindness.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Ogden.

Omer Porter, 18, son of A. C. Porter of this precinct, passed the required examination in Cincinnati, yesterday, preliminary to enlisting in the United States Army. He expects to don a uniform at an early date.

The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion,

SEASON 1908.

SEASON 1908.

PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $5 discount on the two seasons—paying only $35 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $20 will be collected.

This Stallion is a Mahoghany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone County as his colts speak for themselves. A ring of this Stallion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

As the balmy spring weather approaches our creamery is increasing in the amount of milk received. Patrons will take notice of this. Sunday's will be excepted.

Joseph Southwaite, living on Frank McGlasson's farm, near Hebron, met with quite a loss in Covington, last Friday. He was up with his marketing and had left his team standing at Eighth and Bakewell streets, and while delivering some produce a crowd of school children came along, frightening the horses, causing them to run away, scattering eggs, butter and produce along the way. At Fourth and Bakewell streets, in making a turn, the animals crashed into a telephone pole, injuring one of the horses so that it had to be killed. Strange to say the wagon was unhurt.

Having recently been selected by the Agricultural Department at Washington to furnish crop reports and conditions in the latitude of Hebron, I concluded to begin my observations in the Breezyville neighborhood near the mouth of Garrison creek. I went direct to the farm occupied and operated by Add Batterson. Here I stayed over night and the next day visited the farms of Frank Bowman and Mark Keaton. I also had a splendid view of the Rice and Stevens Bros.' magnificent farms. I found Messrs. Keaton, Bowman and Batterson all affable gentlemen and up-to-date farmers of the old school, heretofore they have been extensively engaged in growing tobacco, but owing to the tobacco trouble in the State, they will substitute onions and grow them instead. This is very much of a new departure in the Northern Kentucky crops and shall note developments in our reports. These farms lie in the fruit belt of the State and the altitude is so high that the fruit crop is seldom a failure and the prospects are flattering for an abundant crop this season. In our meanderings we met with a pioneer citizen of Kentucky, now living in Lawrenceburg, Ind., Mr. John Whitaker. It appears as though time has dealt kindly with him for a man now nearly 80 years of age. I also paid my respects to Marcus Barnett, the young man who had the misfortune to have a tree fall on him several weeks ago. He is still confined to his bed, but feels hopeful that he will soon be around again.

Entrance fee $1 for each dog entered. To enter dog for this race call on or address Alfred Smith or Ray Cook, Grant, Ky. Three judges are to be selected by those who enter dogs for the race, as will also be the starting point. Three dogs have been entered thus far.

While unloading tobacco at the warehouse here, Thursday, Mr. Pond Carpenter's team, which was standing at the warehouse door, became frightened at a dog that ran under their heels and ran away, throwing Mr. Carpenter out of the wagon. The fall rendered him unconscious for a few minutes and it was thought he was seriously hurt. But he soon revived and protested that he was not hurt. The team ran madly down the street, striking Cyrus Kelly's wagon wrecking one wheel. Their flight was stopped with a crash through Mrs. Neal's yard, landing down the fence and taking a corner post, that had just been set and braced, nearly out of the ground. The tongue of the wagon and the double tree, were broken, but, by a miracle, the horses were unhurt, though they ran into an apple tree that stood in the yard. Prof. E. S. Ryle accompanied Mr. Carpenter, as it was his tobacco which he brought to the pool here.

Death Was On His Heel.

Jesse P. Morris, of Skippers, Va., had a close call in the spring of 1906. He says: "An attack of pneumonia left me so weak and with such a fearful cough that my friends declared consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It helped me immediately, and after taking two and a half bottles I was a well man again, I found out that New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and lung disease in all the world." The Chase for Titles.

At least 50 titles, more or less authentic, have been captured by American women in France. How many are real? A good proportion. Others are papal; others merely assumed. Since titles were abolished in France the "aristocracy" has increased fivefold. There are five times as many dukes, counts and all that in republican France to-day, as there were in the royal France of old. They spring up like mushrooms. There is no law against yonr butcher assuming the title of the Marquis de Tete de Veau if it so pleases him. And, therefore, comes it that many a girl does not get what she pays for—poor child! However, authentic titles—registered in the Almanach de Gotha—are going cheap these [illegible] tares Vance Thompson, in New Broadway Magazine. One of the best-known American women in Paris makes an excellent living as a marriage broker. I have seen one of her lists which was brought to the attention of a girl with money—money made, curiously enough, out of wooden toothpicks. Among the titled men offered to the wooden toothpick heiress were the Duc de Montmorency, the Count de Chateaubriand and the Prince de Lecca. She hasn't chosen yet. I recommended the Prince de Lecca. He is of the Corsican branch of the Colonnas and has been trying to marry an American girl for years and years. Of course, he has no money, but the title is a good one. He is known as the Knight of the Sorrowful Visage; and he writes verses. "Take him," I said to the heiress. "Why?" she asked. "Because he looks like a toothpick;" but she didn't like the reason.

Men Who Think.

When a man makes a serious blunder, or discovers that he has engaged in an unprofitable enterprise, his excuse is, "I didn't think." He should have reflected on his enterprise before engaging in it. It is the duty of every man to think. Thinking is the important thing in business. Every man should take from five to fifty minutes each day and divorce his mind from the strenuous activity surrounding him and devote the time to thought. The brain is like the muscle; it must have exercise, or it becomes flabby. Cultivate concentration of thought; study your sphere of usefulness; cut out the weeds that grow in your brain; get out of the mental rut you are in; stop drifting; keep your brain active. Men are paid for either what they think or what they do with their muscles, says the New York Weekly. Man's muscles have a limit; he can move just so much matter by physical force, but by thinking he has unlimited possibilities. The world offers golden prizes to the man who thinks. You can cultivate your brain; you can make it expand. The brain is like a plant. Nourish it, cultivate it, care for it, and it will grow. The man who thinks is the man who succeeds.

"There are a number of cattish men in this world. Their yowl is audible around public places frequently," remarks an editorial writer in the Washington Post, in the course of an article defending woman from the assertion that all women are cats. While placing men in the same class may not be much of a defense of the gentler sex, it is encouraging to see that there are men broad enough to espy the small failings of their own sex. After all, cattishness is only an expression of those attributes—envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness—and from their attacks the so-called stronger sex is not immune.

When the Bank of England note returns to the bank it is never re-issued. It is canceled by having the signature of the chief cashier torn off. After the signatures are torn off the notes are pricked off in the register and sorted into the dates of issue. They are then placed in boxes in the vaults, where they are kept for five years, after which they are burned in a furnace placed in a courtyard.

They hear in Paris that Germany may buy the Philippines. That Paris rumor factory is turning out a mighty poor product these days. It should get a new foreman. The raw material he is using appears to be all right. That is to say, it is raw enough to suit the most fastidious taste. The finished product, however, causes even the serious-minded to smile.

A man in Brooklyn laughed so heartily over a joke that it killed him. This is the sarcasm of fate. There are repeated cases on record of people laughing themselves to death, but whoever heard of ill-natured persons dying of a grouch? Yet the latter kind could he so much more easily spared.

Some persons are curious to know where Mrs. Hetty Green kept all those millions she had on hand to lend to needy capitalists during the financial stringency in New York city.

THE PRESIDENT GIVES OUTLINE OF LEGISLATION

In Special Message He Asks the Passage of Several Pending Bills.

WOULD AMEND TRUST LAWS

Would Prevent Both Blacklist and Boycott—Sees Need of Tariff Revision Commission and Immediate Waterway Legislation.

To the Senate and House of Representatives: I shall your attention to certain measures as to which I think there should be action by the congress before the close of the present session. There is ample time for their consideration. As regards most if not all of the matters, bills have been introduced into one or the other of the two houses, and it is not too much to hope that action will be taken one way or the other on these bills at the present session. In my message at the opening of the present session, and, indeed, in various messages to previous congresses, I have repeatedly suggested action on most of these measures.

Child labor should be prohibited throughout the nation. At least a model child-labor bill should be passed for the District of Columbia. It is unfortunate that in the one place solely dependent upon congress for its legislation there should be no law whatever to protect children by forbidding or regulating their labor.

I renew my recommendation for the immediate re-enactment of an employers' liability law, drawn to conform to the recent decision of the supreme court. Within the limits indicated by the court, the law should be made thorough and comprehensive, and the protection it affords should embrace every class of employe to which the power of the congress can extend.

In addition to a liability law protecting the employes of common carriers, the government should show its good faith by enacting a further law giving compensation to its own employes for injury or death incurred in its service. It is a reproach to us as a nation that in both federal and state legislation we have afforded less protection to public and private employes than any other industrial country of the world.

Injunction Legislation.

I also urge that action be taken along the line of the recommendations I have already made concerning injunctions in labor disputes. No temporary restraining order should be issued by any court without notice; and the petition for a permanent injunction upon which such temporary restraining order has been issued should be heard by the court issuing the same within a reasonable time—say, not to exceed a week or thereabouts from the date when the order was issued. It is worth considering whether it would not give greater popular confidence in the impartiality of sentences for contempt if it was required that the issue should be decided by another judge than the one issuing the injunction, except where the contempt is committed in the presence of the court, or in other case of urgency.

Rate Law Amendments.

I again call attention to the urgent need of amending the interstate commerce law and especially the anti-trust law along the lines indicated in my last message. The interstate commerce law should be amended so as to give railroads the right to make traffic agreements, subject to these agreements being approved by the interstate commerce commission and published in all of their details. The commission should also be given the power to make public and to pass upon the issuance of all securities hereafter issued by railroads doing an interstate commerce business.

A law should be passed providing in effect that when a federal court determines to place a common carrier or other public utility concern under the control of a receivership, the attorney general should have the right to nominate at least one of the receivers; or else in some other way the interests of the stockholders should be consulted, so that the management may not be wholly re-delivered to the man or men the failure of whose policy may have necessitated the creation of the receivership. Receiverships should be used, not to operate roads, but as speedily as possible to pay their debts, and return them to the proper owners.

Would Amend Anti-Trust Law.

In addition to the reasons I have already urged on your attention, it has now become important that there should be an amendment of the anti-trust law, because of the uncertainty as to how this law affects combinations among labor men and farmers. If the combination has any tendency to restrict interstate commerce. All of these combinations, if and while existing for and engaged in the promotion of innocent and proper purposes, should be recognized as legal. As I have repeatedly pointed out, this anti-trust law was a most unwisely drawn statute. It was perhaps inevitable that in feeling after the right remedy the first attempts to provide such should be crude; and it was absolutely imperative that some legislation should be passed to control, in the interest of the public, the business use of the enormous aggregations of corporate wealth that are so marked a feature of the modern industrial world. But the present antitrust law, in its construction and working, has exemplified only too well the kind of legislation which, under the guise of being thoroughgoing, is drawn up in such sweeping form as to become either ineffective or else mischievous.

In the modern industrial world combinations are absolutely necessary; they are necessary among business men, they are necessary among laboring men, they are becoming more and more necessary among farmers. Some of these combinations are among the most powerful of all instruments for wrongdoing. Others offer the only effective way of meeting actual business needs. It is mischievous and unwholesome to keep upon the statute books unmodified a law, like the antitrust law, which, while in practice only partially effective against vicious combinations, has nevertheless in theory been construed so as sweepingly to prohibit every combination for the transaction of modern business. Some real good has resulted from this law. But the time has come when it is imperative to modify it. Such modification is urgently needed for the sake of the business men of the country, for the sake of the wageworkers and for the sake of the farmers. The congress can not afford to leave it on the statute books in its present shape.

Remedies Advised.

It has now become uncertain how far this law may involve all labor organizations and farmers' organizations, as well as all business organizations, in conflict with the law; or, if we secure literal compliance with the law, how far it may result in the destruction of the organization necessary for the transaction of modern business, as well as of labor organizations and farmers' organizations, completely check the wise movement for securing business cooperation among farmers, and put back half a century the progress of the movement for the betterment of labor. A bill has been presented in congress to remedy this situation. Some such measure as this bill is needed in the interest of all engaged in the industries which are essential to the country's well-being. I do not pretend to say the exact shape that the bill should take, and the suggestions I have to offer are tentative; and my views would apply equally to any other measure which would achieve the desired end. Bearing this in mind, I would suggest, merely tentatively, the following changes in the law:

The substantive part of the anti-trust law should remain as at present; that is, every contract in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations should continue to be declared illegal; provided, however, that some proper governmental authority (such as the commissioner of corporations acting under the secretary of commerce and labor) be allowed to pass on any such contracts. Probably the best method of providing for this would be to enact that any contract subject to the prohibition contained in the antitrust law, into which it is desired to enter, might be filed with the bureau of corporations or other appropriate executive body. This would provide publicity. Within, say, 60 days of the filing—which period could be extended by order of the department whenever for any reason it did not give the department sufficient time for a thorough examination—the executive department having power might forbid the contract, which would then become subject to the provisions of the antitrust law, if at all in restraint of trade.

If no such prohibition was issued, the contract would then only be liable to attack on the ground that it constituted an unreasonable restraint of trade. Whenever the period of filing had passed without any such prohibition, the contracts or combinations could be disapproved or forbidden only after notice and hearing with a reasonable provision for summary review on appeal by the courts. Labor organizations, farmers' organizations, and other organizations not organized for purposes of profit, should be allowed to register under the law by giving the location of the head office, the charter and by-laws, and the names and addresses of their principal officers. In the interest of all these organizations—business, labor, and farmers' organizations alike—the present provision permitting the recovery of threefold damages should be abolished, and as a substitute therefor the right of recovery allowed for should be only the damages sustained by the plaintiff and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

The law should not affect pending suits; a short statute of limitations should be provided, so far as the past is concerned, not to exceed a year. Moreover, and even more in the interest of labor than of business combinations all such suits brought for causes of action heretofore occurred should be brought only if the contract or combination complained of was unfair or unreasonable. It may be well to remember that all of the suits hitherto brought by the government under the antitrust law have been in cases where the combination or contract was in fact unfair, unreasonable, and against the public interest

Labor Organizations.

It is important that we should encourage trade agreements between employer and employe where they are just and fair. A strike is a clumsy weapon for righting wrongs done to labor, and we should extend, so far as possible, the process of conciliation and arbitration for strikes. Moreover, violence, disorder and coercion, when committed in connection with strikes, should be as promptly and as sternly repressed as when committed in any other connection. But strikes themselves are, and should be, recognized to be entirely legal. Combinations of workingmen have a peculiar reason for their existence. The very wealthy individual employer, and still more the very wealthy corporation, stand at an enormous advantage when compared to the individual workingman; and while there are many cases where it may not be necessary [illegible] to form a union, in many other cases it is indispensable, for otherwise the thousands of small units, the thousands of individual workingmen, will be left helpless in their dealings with the big one unit, the big individual or corporate employer.

Twenty-two years ago, by the act of June 29, 1886, trades unions were recognized by law, and the right of laboring people to combine for all lawful purposes was formally recognized, this right including combinations for mutual protection and benefits, the regulation of wages, hours and conditions of labor and the protection of the individual rights of the workmen in the prosecution of their trade or trades; and in the act of June 1, 1898, strikes were recognized as legal in the same provision that forbade participation in or instigation of force or violence against persons or property, or the attempt to prevent others from working, by violence, threat or intimidation. The business man must be protected in person and property, and so must the farmer and the wageworker; and as regards all alike, the right of peaceful combination for all lawful purposes should be explicitly recognized.

Objects to Boycott.

The right of employers to combine and contract with one another and with their employes should be explicitly recognized; and so should the right of the employes to combine and to contract with one another and with the employers, and to seek peaceably to persuade others to accept their views, and to strike for the purpose of peaceably obtaining from employers satisfactory terms for their labor. Nothing should be done to legalize either a blacklist or a boycott that would be illegal at common law, this being the type of boycott defined and condemned by the anthracite strike commission.

The question of financial legislation is now receiving such attention in both houses that we have a right to expect action before the close of the session. It is urgently necessary that there should be such action. Moreover, action should be taken to establish postal savings banks. These postal savings banks are imperatively needed for the benefit of the wageworkers and men of small means, and will be a valuable adjunct to our whole financial system.

Tariff Revision.

The time has come when we should prepare for a revision of the tariff. This should be, and indeed must be preceded by careful investigation. It is peculiarly the province of the congress and not of the president, and indeed peculiarly the province of the house of representatives, to originate a tariff bill and to determine upon its terms; and this I fully realize. Yet it seems to me that before the close of this session provision should be made for collecting full material which will enable the congress elected next fall to act immediately after it comes into existence. This would necessitate some action by the congress at its present session, perhaps in the shape of directing the proper committee to gather the necessary information, both through the committee itself and through government agents who should report to the committee and should lay before it the facts which would permit it to act with prompt and intelligent fairness. These government agents, if it is not deemed wise to appoint individuals from outside the public service, might with advantage be members of the executive departments, designated by the president, on his own motion or on the request of the committee, to act with it.

I am of the opinion, however, that one change in the tariff could with advantage be made forthwith. Our forests need every protection, and one method of protecting them would be to put upon the free list wood pulp with a corresponding reduction upon paper made from wood pulp, when they come from any country that does not put an export duty upon them.

Waterways Commission.

Ample provision should be made for a permanent waterways commission, with whatever power is required to make it effective. The reasonable expectation of the people will not be met unless the congress provides at this session for the beginning and prosecution of the actual work of waterway improvement and control. The congress should recognize in fullest fashion the fact that the subject of the conservation of our natural resources, with which this commission deals, is literally vital for the future of the nation.

TRAIN MESSENGER IS SLAIN

THEN ROBBER LOOTED SAFES OF CASH AND JEWELRY.

Victim Believed to Have Admitted a "Friend" Who Slew Him as He Slept.

Newton, Kas., March 30.—O. A. Bailey, of Kansas City, an express messenger of the Wells-Fargo Express Co., was murdered by a robber on the Santa Fe train No. 115, between Florence and Newton, early Sunday morning. Both safes, the "local" and "through," were ransacked and at least $1,000 in cash and some jewelry taken. Whether this is the full amount the robber secured is not known.

The dead body of Messenger Bailey was found at 4 o'clock Sunday morning when the train reached Newton. It was stretched on the floor of the car, the head beaten to a pulp and lying in a pool of blood. The back of the skull was crushed and the end of the car in which the body was lying was spattered with blood. The blood spatters reached to the ceiling. There was no evidence of any struggle, the indications pointing to the committing of the murder when the messenger was asleep.

Bailey was last seen alive at Strong City. At Peabody some one opened the car door just enough to throw out a package of waybills and then closed it quickly. The custom of the messenger has been to go to sleep soon after leaving Florence, and it is probable that he did this Saturday night. After he was struck and rendered unconscious, his body rolled to the floor and the robber, after beating his victim's head, covered it with the dead man's coat.

One blow was struck at the man's face with some sharp instrument, evidently a hatchet, which broke the jawbone. From the dead man's pockets keys were removed and the safes ransacked. Then the keys were put back into Bailey's overcoat, the coat folded and put into his grip, where it was found later.

Two theories are held by the authorities. One is that the robber entered the car unobserved at Emporia, Strong City or some other point along the line and concealed himself until a favorable opportunity to commit the robbery came, and the other is that Bailey admitted somebody he knew and considered a friend.

A reward of $1,000 has been offered by the express company for the apprehension of the robber or robbers.

REAL TRAGEDY BY ACTOR

When He Killed His Female Companion and Then Suicided.

St. Paul, Minn., March 30.—Wm. W. Trainer, a vaudeville actor, shot and killed Mrs. Wm. Pryor, an actress with whom he was traveling, in their apartments at the Clarendon hotel, and then killed himself. Mrs. Pryor was about 25 years old. The clerk in the hotel heard two shots and rushing upstairs found the woman dead. Trainor lived for two hours.

An open letter was found in the room after the murder indicated that Mrs. Pryor had threatened to leave Trainor. The letter was one which had been sent by Trainor to Mrs. Pryor before she left her husband, and it is believed that the actress was reminding Trainor that he had not lived up to promises he had made her.

Trainor and Mrs. Pryor, who appeared on the stage and who registered at the hotel as "Trainor and Trainor," had an engagement at a theater in Minneapolis three weeks hence, but so far as known they had nothing in sight for the days intervening.

Fresh Conspiracy Against Hayti.

Port au Prince, Hayti, March 30.—A fresh conspiracy against the government has been discovered in this city. The leader of the plot, Gen. Larraque, former chief of cavalry, who was arrested on March 14 on suspicion of conspiring against the president, and who was released, with four others, on March 24, took refuge Sunday afternoon in the French legation with two other officers.

A Castro Outrage.

New York, March 30.—News has been received in this city of another seizure of private property in Venezuela by order of President Castro. This time the victim is the telephone company of Carupano, which supplies the telephone service for the districts of Bermudez, Arismendi and Benitez. The seizure, it is said, resulted from the refusal of the company to give free service to some of the officials.

Found Murdered.

Trenton, N. J., March 30.—Mrs. Frances Katz was found murdered at her home in Fallsington, Pa. There were two stab wounds in the body and the skull was fractured. A broken chair and other conditions in the room gave evidence of a struggle. The woman's husband is serving a term in jail for [illegible]. There is no clew to the murderer.

Considers War Claims.

Lynnville, Tenn., March 30.—The Presbyterian church claim for two churches destroyed here by federal troops during the civil war will soon be settled in Washington. The amount is $2,500.

Dog Causes Killing.

Jonesboro, Ark., March 30.—As result of trouble arising over a yellow cur Green B. Garner, a farmer of near Bono, met Reuben Tooley, 50, and his son, on the Frisco track in the town drew a pistol and shot and killed both.

LANGUID AND WEAK.

A Condition Common with Kidney Trouble and Backache.

Mrs. Marie Sipfle, 416 Miller St., Helena, Mont., says: "Three years ago my back grew weak and lame and I could not stoop without a sharp pain. It was just as bad when I tried to get up from a chair. I was languid and listless and had much pain and trouble with the kidney secretions. This was my state when I began with Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me from the first and four boxes made a complete, lasting cure."

CONSCIENCE HAD SLEPT LONG.

Purloiner of Cake of Soap Makes Restitution After Twenty Years.

Imagine a conscience that would span 20 years and drive a man to remember a theft of a cake of soap. That there is such a conscience, however, is proved by the receipt a few weeks ago of two cakes of soap by a storekeeper in a little town in Minnesota. Twenty years ago this man, Edward Hamilton, had a small store in St. Paul. In front of his establishment he had a showcase in which he displayed several large cakes of soap of special make. One morning he found the glass broken open and one of the cakes of soap missing. The theft was so small that the matter was never reported, and Hamilton had forgotten it, till he received a letter from the thief, which read:

"Dear Sir: I send you two cakes of soap in payment for one I took from your showcase in St. Paul many years ago. I recently saw your advertisment in a country paper and learned of the change of your place of business. I regret deeply having taken the soap, and trust that this which I send will satisfactorily take its place."—Sunday Magazine.

NEURALGIA

The real meaning of the word Neuralgia is nerve-pain, and any one who has suffered with the malady will not be so anxious to know of its nature as to hear of its antidote. Though scarcely recognized by the profession and people half a century ago, it is now one of the most common and painful ailments which afflict humanity. As now generally understood the word signifies an affection of the nervous system, with pain in the course of the principal nerves.

The two great causes of Neuralgia are, Impoverishment of the Blood and Deficiency of Nerve Force; and the treatment of it is not so obscure as many would be led to suppose. The first thing is to relieve the pain, which is done more quickly and satisfactorily by ST. JACOBS OIL than by any other remedy known; the second object is to remove the cause, which is accomplished by the abundant use of nourishing food, of a nature to strengthen and give tone to both the muscular and nervous systems.

WORKS FOR CIVIC PRIDE.

Excellent Scheme Devised by Merchants of Western City.

A new scheme for arousing local pride is being worked in an enterprising western city. The plan in brief is, instead of attempting to vitalize the civic spirit of the whole community, to organize clubs in different localities and to clean up and light up certain sections, without regard to what may be done elsewhere. For instance, a club is organized in a single block, and merchants on each side of the street are persuaded to join. If it is desired to make the block brilliant with light at night an investigation is had to see how it can be done, how much it will cost and what it is worth. The plan has worked so successfully that organizations are springing up all over the same city to devote their attention to cleaning or lighting a certain restricted territory. It is much easier to secure co-operation between 20 merchants than between 200, and the influence of the few spreads in a widening circle.—Baltimore News.

EXPERIMENT STATION PLANS

Knocked Out By the Veto of Governor Willson.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson got busy with his veto tomahawk, eliminating one bill entirely and another in part. The bill disapproved was one providing for two additional experiment stations as adjuncts to the main agricultural experiment stations at the State college. He vetoed the additional per capita to the houses of reform, which was raised from $100 per annum to $125, but approved that portion appropriating $78,000 to make up a deficit and to inaugurate certain improvements in that institution. He says that he does this upon the assurance of President Brown, of the prison commission, that economy will be practiced in the expenditure of the appropriation, and that no more will be used than is absolutely necessary.

GOVERNOR SIGNS M'CHORD BILL.

Willson Says Conditions Warrant Approval of Measure.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson signed the McChord bill, providing a penalty for the purchase or sale of personal property which is in the hands of another than the owner. This bill is similar to the Crecelius-Wyatt bill, which prevents the purchase or sale of pooled tobacco.

In approving the measure Gov. Willson says:

"This bill is open to serious objection as using criminal process to enforce civil contracts when the whole tendency of modern practice is against this.

"But present conditions afford great grounds for approving it, and if it proves bad on trial the legislature can repeal it. It is therefore approved."

Three Warehouses Burned.

Owenton, Ky.—Owenton was visited by a band of night riders, who set fire to three large tobacco warehouses, causing a loss of about $30,000 and destroying 150,000 pounds of tobacco, in addition to three buildings. The first building set on fire was the big new Equity warehouse, owned by a stock company. This had in it about 1,000,000 pounds of pooled tobacco and 50,000 pounds of independent leaf. The loss is insured.

Young Physician Held.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Dr. Wallis W. Durham, aged 27, a prominent physician of the northern part of Christian county, who is charged with being a "night rider," surrendered, and was released on $1,000 bond. Bob Wood, a young planter, charged with sending night rider letters, was found guilty. He was sentenced to three months in prison and fined $100.

Fear "Night Riders."

Covington, Ky.—About 40,000 pounds of tobacco is stored in a building in Greenup street and is causing some little excitement among the residents in that neighborhood on account of the recent outrages perpetrated by "night riders" in the interior of the state. The authorities here have no fear of any depredations.

One Killed; Several Hurt.

Danville, Ky.—In a head-on collision of the Blue Grass Special, a Queen & Crescent passenger train, also known as No. 28, and an extra freight train, No. 616, two miles north of High Bridge, one man was killed, two persons were fatally injured and a dozen others were severely hurt.

Ohioan Mangled.

Lexington, Ky.—The mangled remains of what is supposed to be the body of Earl Hudson, of Bellefontaine, O., were found at the Q. & C. crossing. An envelope addressed to Miss Mamie Jewell, Bellefontaine, was found in a pocket, together with letters from her.

Report Denied.

Lexington, Ky.—The report emanating from Cincinnati to the effect that the American Tobacco Co. has closed a deal with the Society of Equity for all of the 1906 and 1907 crops in pool can not be verified here. As a matter of fact, it is generally discredited.

Held Up By Footpads.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—John Barnes, 70 years old, was held up and robbed of thirty dollars. As he was on his way home two men halted Barnes at Fourth and Virginia streets and, leveling their pistols, forced him to hand over his money.

Gets Chinn's Place.

Frankfort, Ky.—Geo. Chinn resigned as warden of the penitentiary, and E. E. Mudd, who has been chief deputy warden, was selected in his stead. Col. Chinn just returned from a five months' trip to California in the interest of his wife's health.

A $100,000 Coliseum.

Louisville, Ky.—The State Fair board here decided to build a $100,000 coliseum in which to house the annual fair. It will be the biggest of its kind in the country and of the exquisite school in architecture.

Hedges Paroled.

Frankfort, Ky.—M. L. Hedges, white convict from Kenton county, was paroled by the board of prison commissioners. He was sent up for two years for horse stealing, and had served the bulk of his term. He has tuberculosis.

KENTUCKIANS WRATHY

Over the Governor's Action in Vetoing the Arnett Bill.

Louisville, Ky.—Members of the local Stock Exchange and rich men in general were wrathy here when the news was received that Gov. Willson had vetoed the Arnett bill.

Local stock men approved the bill, and sent a powerful committee to Frankfort to persuade the governor to sign it. It is known that in this city, now that the state revenue agents have been busy, the stock exchange has ceased to list sales of foreign stock so that the revenue men may be kept off the track. John W. Green headed the committee to the governor presenting all these facts, and when the news came that he had vetoed the bill they were disturbed to no small extent. Had the bill been approved the revenue agents would have been deprived perhaps of about $1,000,000 among them all in one year.

FEARED NIGHT RIDERS

And Wilson Suddenly Shot and Killed Farmer Nabb.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Aubrey Nabb, aged 24, a Caldwell county farmer, was shot and killed at the Henrietta theater at Princeton by Henry Wilson, aged 30, a stock trader. Wilson and the manager of the theater had started down the stairs as Nabb and a companion were going up. Wilson was heard to yell out something about the night riders having threatened to get him and he was going to shoot somebody. Immediately afterward two pistol shots rang out. One of the bullets struck Nabb in the breast and he died in a few minutes. The manager of the theater grabbed Wilson, but he jerked away and made his escape.

CHILAPA, MEXICO, IS RUINED

EARTHQUAKE AND FIRE DESTROY ENTIRE TOWN.

Loss of Life Unknown—Communication by Wire Severed and Place Far from Railway.

Mexico City, Mex.—Chilapa, a town of 15,000 inhabitants in the state of Guerrero, has been shaken by an earthquake and burned.

The shocks, two in number, occurred early Thursday evening and were followed by fires which, originating in a dozen places among the tumbling buildings, joined in a conflagration that swept the town. Only meager facts of the disaster are known here and what has been learned has dribbled in from a half dozen sources more or less authentic.

The loss of life, if any, as well as the monetary extent of the property damage, is problematical, and continued efforts to guage the catastrophe have been futile. Telegraph communication with Chilapa was severed by the shocks and the town is two days by horseback from the nearest railway station.

El Imparcial, the government organ, received a dispatch from its correspondent in the town of Chilpancingo, saying that the town of Chilapa, 30 miles distant from that place, was totally destroyed by the earthquake and that fire broke out in the ruins and is now completing the work of destruction. The people of the town are terrorized and many are praying in the open plaza and in the fields adjoining the town.

Some hours later the same correspondent sent the following dispatch: "Later returns confirm my first telegram: Chilapa has been shaken to the earth and reduced to ashes. I avoid the sending of details."

Mrs. Emma Jeannette Dorville, an American, lost her life in a panic in the Tiburcio theater in the city of Vera Cruz, which followed the earthquake of Thursday night.

St. Thomas, D. W. I.—A sharp earth shock occurred here Thursday afternoon and created much alarm. No damage, however, is reported.

APPEAL TO THE PRESIDENT.

Kentuckians Ask Federal Aid to Suppress Night Riders.

Lexington, Ky.—The failure on the part of the state authorities to run down perpetrators of outrages committed by "night riders" culminated Tuesday in a direct appeal to the president of the United States for federal interference in Kentucky, in the form of a petition prepared by leading men of Lexington and central Kentucky.

The petitioners are aware that the president can take no action unless the governor so requests, but it is their purpose by this means to bring the two executives together in the matter for mutual discussion and consideration that may result in some sort of action.

The shooting of McCreary was accidental. Mr. Heflin was arrested and taken to the Sixth police precinct station where a charge of assault with intent to kill was placed against him. BANKER ROBBED OF $5,000

BOLD CRIME COMMITTED ON STREET AT LINCOLN, ILL.

Pay Roll of Mine Is Taken—Bandits Are Pursued and Two Are Captured.

Peoria, Ill.—Frank Froerer, president of a Lincoln (Ill.) bank and owner of the Lincoln Mining company, was held up by highwaymen Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock in Lincoln and robbed of $5,000—the monthly pay roll of the company.

Three men did the work and two of them were caught, but the third escaped with the money after a running fight with the police and deputy sheriffs.

The robbery occurred within two blocks of the public square. Froerer was on the way to the mine in a light wagon carrying two satchels containing [illegible] small amounts already counted for the miners. He was stopped on the street by three men in a buggy and two of these got out of the buggy and, jumping into Froerer's rig, quickly bore him to the ground and grabbed the satchels, threw him into the buggy, jumped in and started out of the city at a fast clip. Froerer, who was not seriously injured, returned to the office and notified the officials.

The sheriff and night captain of police started at once and pursued the robbers two miles, at which point two men left the buggy and took to the cornfields. After a short time they were discovered and a duel began. Five shots were fired before the two surrendered, but neither was injured.

The men refuse to give their names and so far have not been identified. The third man, who escaped, was of dark complexion, about five feet ten inches tall and wore brown clothes.

HOTEL LELAND IN FLAMES.

Famous Hostelry in Springfield, Ill., Partly Burned.

Springfield, Ill.—The Leland hotel, one of the most widely known hotels in the country, and which has been the center of political gatherings for the last 30 years, was severely damaged by fire Thursday, entailing a loss on the proprietors, the Wiggins estate, of about $75,000.

The fire broke out while the Republican state convention was in session, three squares away, and when the delegates received word that the hotel was burning they leaped from their chairs, tore wildly for the doors and hastened to save their effects. No lives were lost, nor was any person injured.

The fire for a time threatened the building of the Springfield Journal, which is separated from the hotel by a narrow alley.

As soon as it was evident that the hotel was doomed the management sent all the available employes to the rooms of the guests in the effort to save as much as possible of their baggage. Some of it was lost, but, considering that the hotel was filled to its capacity and that the capacity was somewhat stretched by the number of delegates to the convention, it was surprising that so much property was saved. Some guests lost everything. But the greater part of the baggage was saved.

The delegates from the convention, when they came rushing up to the hotel, bent upon saving their belongings, were too much for the Springfield police department. They outnumbered it about twenty to one, and while an officer was trying to restrain one man from rushing into the hotel to save his property a dozen others would go tearing by and rush into the smoke-filled halls. Men repeatedly risked their lives to save their hand baggage and overcoats.

Currency Measure Goes Through the Senate, 42 to 16.

Washington.—The Aldrich currency bill was passed by the senate Friday by a vote of 42 to 16, in the main a party vote.

Previous to the taking of the vote on the Aldrich bill a vote was taken on the Bailey substitute, authorizing the government, instead of the national banks, to issue the emergency circulation for which the bill provides. The vote on the substitute stood 42 to 13, and this vote was entirely partisan, even Senator La Follette casting his vote with the Republicans.

HON. R. H. ELLISTON.

The above is the picture of Hon. R. H. Elliston, of Williamstown, Grant county, who has a most laudable ambition to represent this the sixth Congressional District in Congess. Mr. Elliston is one of the leading business men of his county, the people of which have been pleased on several occasions to bestow upon him political honors. When quite a young man he was nominated by the Democrats and elected to the office of clerk of the Grant county court which he filled for two terms, making the county an excellent official. Later on when it came Grant county's term to hold the office of State Senator the Democrats turned to Mr. Elliston as their candidate, and nominated and elected him to that office. Soon upon taking his seat in the Senate he demonstrated his power and logic as an orator, and at once took a position as a leader in that body.

Having completed his term as State Senator Mr. Elliston turned his entire attention to his business in Williamstown, and to this he has given close attention except when on the stump in the interest of the Democratic party in his county, this congressional district or the State. Last fall Mr. Elliston devoted much time to the interest of the Democratic State ticket, and ranked as one of the ablest of the army of speakers that was at large in Kentucky.

Upon the inauguration of the Society of Equity in Kentucky, he espoused the cause of the growers and has made many speeches in their behalf, and is regarded as the ablest orator that cause has in Kentucky.

Mr. Elliston is a fine student, a well informed man on all State and national issues, and his ability as a speaker will give him a position of prominence in the national congress soon upon his arrival there.

If nominated as their candidate Mr. Elliston will have the solid support of the Democrats in the country while there is no reason why he should not be as strong in the cities as anyother of the aspirants.

NOTICE—Boone County Pomona Grange will meet with Excelsior Grange, Saturday, April 4th, at 10:30. Hope all subordinate granges will be represented, as there is considerable business to come before that meeting.

Mrs. Harriet J. Davis died in Louisville, March 20th. Had she lived until April 23d she would have lived the allotted time to man. Mrs. Davis had been alone in the world for many years, having neither father, mother, sister nor bro her living. She was a daughter of James Cloud, who married Susan Synder, and, consequently, had a large circle of relatives in Boone county as well as friends. She was a faithful and consistent member of the Episcopal church. After services by the pastor, the remains were interred in Cave Hill cemetery. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lor." * * *

CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES

What never leak? Exactly; never leak, never needs repairs of any kind, and last as long as the building itself. Neither melting snow, nor the worst driving rain can possibly reach the interior of the building that's covered with Cortright Metal Shingles. Pretty good recommendation isn't it? In addition we might add they're fire-proof and lightning proof too. Think of it! and they are not as expensive as other forms of roofing. Step in and we'll show them to you.

Miss Mary Roberts returned home, last Sunday, after a visit of several weeks with Walton relatives and friends.

Gideon Kite, of Waterloo, and John D. McNeely, of Hathaway, were among those doing business in Burlington, last Monday.

Mrs. R. A. Brady, of Belleview, returned last Friday from a visit of several days with her daughter, Mrs. John M. Lassing, of Walton.

Grass did some growing last week, and if the progress it made for a few days was kept up for a week, stock could begin to nip it nicely.

Did you observe that the month of March was not as windy as usual, this year. Only a day or two that were too breezy for sowing grass seeds.

Wm. Eggleston, of Bullittsville, called at this office, one day last week, and had his enlistment extended another term. He is a loyal supporter of the RECORDER.

While tearing down a fence last Thursday, W. P. Sullivan ran a nail into his foot about half an inch, and it began giving him so much pain that a doctor had to be called.

Scott Chambers, the Walton liveryman and undertaker, passed through Burlington, Sunday afternoon enroute home from Petersburg, where he had been visiting his parents.

Mrs. E. A. Snyder, of Florence, one of the RECORDER'S most loyal supporters, was among a considerable list of those who had their subscriptions moved up a notch, last week.

Robert McIntosh, of Bullittsville, captured the honors at the shoot at Ownie Rouse's, breaking 20 clay targets out of a possible 25. J. B. Rouse got 19, and Rex Berkshire 18.

Mrs. D. E. Castleman entertained with a very elegant dinner, last Friday, of which quite a number of her friends partook. Several from a distance were among the guests.

W. C. Goodridge, who lives two miles west of Burlington, was in town, one day last week. He had on a considerable move getting ready to open up his spring farming campaign.

R. A. Brady, of Belleview precinct, was in town, last Friday. He said quite a number of those in his neighborhood, whose tobacco is in the pool, will redry it in their own barns.

A souvenir postal received at this office last Friday: Lizzie Bay will leave Cincinnati Tuesday, March 31st at 5 p. m. for Madison and will continue in the trade. W. R. MOONY, Master.

Bills for D. F. C. the fine harness stallion which Walter G. Riddell will handle again this year, were printed at this office, last week. D. F. C. is one of the several good horses that will be found in Boone county this season.

James Loder, of Petersburg, was in Burlington, one day last week, and as usual, was driving a good horse. Mr. Loder is one of Boone county's most enthusiastic admirers of the noble animal and knows a good one when he sees it.

All those who have signified their intention to raise tomatoes for the Petersburg cannery are notified to come forward and sign for the same by April 10th, 1908, or their portions will be contracted to others.

B. H. BERKSHIRE, Secretary.

John White, the Hathaway correspondent for this paper was among those from a distance, who transacted business in Burlington, last Friday. He said there is a pretty good stock of fine fish in the creek this year, and that the gigging season will be here in a few days.

The Rabbit Hash Horse Co. has had printed some very nice pocket cards advertising its stock, the great draft horse, Castillion, and the mammoth Jack, Romeo. This stock will be found near Rabbit Hash again this year, where it was so popular with the farmers last year.

If the weather is good next Monday there will be a large crowd in town and a fine show of horses unless all signs fail. There are several very fine horses in the county, and about all of them will be on exhibition in Burlington that day, and nothing will draw a crowd of Kentucky people better than a show of fine horses.

L. H. Kelly, of Waterloo neighborhood, was among the callers at this office, one day last week. Mr. Kelly is one of Boone county's good, substantial citizens, conservative in all public matters, although he always has opinions on the important topics of the day. A county never has too many citizens like him.

Hubert Rouse, who lives between Limaburg and Hebron, is one of the overseer of roads who got busy with a drag a few days, last week, and did much towards improving the condition of some of the road in his district. Dragging is said to be the thing for the roads at this season of the year, and as many overseers as can should try it.

Among the stock bills printed at this office, last week, were those for the Big Bone and Beaver Lick Horse Co., which presents Jean Fairbanks, a Percheron stallion that few equal and none excel. This horse proved a great favorite in his locality in 1907, and the company that owns him anticipates a largely increased business this season.

John Meeks, of Florence, who was indicted at the last term of the Boone circuit court for the killing of Albert Outterbrick, in Florence, and afterwards taken to Covington jail to protect him from a mob, will call on Gov. Willson for soldiers to protect him during trial at the approaching term of the circuit court.

Ray Conner, the noted ball tosser, passed through Burlington, one day last week, following a drove of 48 frames on which to build beef this summer, enroute to Waterloo. He and the local base ball manager, Herbert Kirk, had a long conference, in which the outlook for a good 1908 club at Burlington was the principal topic discussed.

The Weneeda postoffice has been discontinued and the patrons will receive their mail at the offices they consider most convenient. It appears to be the policy of the department to discontinue all the rural offices it can without crippling the service too materially, whether rural free delivery is contemplated or not. Weneeda office on the Ohio river was the most northern point in Kentucky.

By order of the State Central Committee, the Sixth District Executive Committee and the Republican Executive Committee of Boone County, a mass meeting of the Republicans of Boone county is hereby called at Burlington April 25th at 1 p. m. for the purpose of sending six delegates to the Sixth Congressional District Convention, May 4th, at Covington, and to the State Convention at Louisville, May 6th; also for the purpose of electing a new County Committee, and such other business as may properly come before it.

J. G. TOMLIN, Chairman.
G. G. HUGHES, Secretary.

The RECORDER is in receipt of the Progress, published at Wynne, Arkansas, of date March 19th. It carries the pictures of several candidates for nomination for State and county offices on the Democratic ticket, and among them is a good picture of Marcus Collins, a native of this county, who, like many others, has achieved prominence in his adopted State. Marcus was a candidate for treasurer of his, Cross, county. The primary election came off on the 25th ult., but no returns from Cross county have been received at this office. The picture represented the Boone county product as the finest looking man in the political field.

A pleasant leap year meeting of friends took place at the home of Mrs Margaret D. Those who came to extend their congratulations and be present at the feast were Mrs. Margaret D. Mayhew and son, Bryson; Allen Darby and family, George Darby and family, Andrew Darby and family, Messrs. John and Peter Darby, Thomas Godden, Mrs. Rodney Darby and son, Rodney, of Bridgeport, Ala.; Mrs. John J. The telephone message received [illegible] last Thursday, announcing the death of Isham G. Hamilton, was a shock to his many Burlington friends. He was found dead in his room in the Palace Hotel, Cincinnati, where he had been staying since first of last January. He was a son of the late Milton and Nancy Platt Hamilton, and was born in Burlington on the 25th day of March 1856. He received his education in Burlington, at a period when the people of the town and surrounding country could justly boast of the efficiency and liberal patronage of the local school. He graduated from the Cincinnati law school in 1877, and was in the office of James Forsker for some time. He finally located in Georgetown, Scott county, where he held the office of justice of the peace for several years. He was a bachelor and his sister, Mrs. Allen, of Georgetown, is the only member of the immediate family who survives him. Isham Hamilton was a man in whose heart kindness predominated, and to do a friend a favor he would forego his own comfort and submit to inconveniences that he would avoid when only his own interests were involved. It was a pleasure for him to serve a friend on any occasion, and being a man far above the ordinary in intelligence, he was an interesting companion on any occasion.

The remains were brought to Burlington, last Friday, and interred in the lot of his father in the old cemetery. A short funeral service at the grave was conducted by Rev. Thomas Stevenson, of Georgetown, Scott county.

Whereas, God in His supreme wisdom has called to her reward our dearly loved sister, Mrs. Hattie Dinn; and, whereas, by her death Greenwood Grange, 283 has lost a faithful member, her parents a much loved and only child, her husband and little daughter a kind and loving wife and mother, therefore be it,

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and prayers, looking forward to a meeting when there shall be no more parting; and, further, be it

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our record book and a copy sent to the Boone County RECORDER for publication.

Elijah the Prophet Carried Into Heaven.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Scripture Authority—2 Kings 2:1-11.

SERMONETTE.

If one were disposed to doubt the reality of the translation of Enoch concerning whom Scripture saith "that he walked with God and God took him," we have in this incident of the translation of Elijah undisputable evidence of the supernatural exodus of the prophet from this life to the life beyond, for Elisha was not only an eye witness to the glorious event, but the strong men sent out by the sons of the prophets at Jericho searched carefully for three days and were unable to find the least trace of the missing prophet.

This incident offers clear and satisfactory evidence of three wonderful truths taught by God's word:

First. That heaven is a real place, more real and enduring than the earth upon which man lives and moves, for a body of flesh and blood such as Elijah took with him out of this life into the life beyond must occupy space and must have a realm in which to continue its life and activity.

Second. That this life does not end all but that beyond the span of the human life there is a glorified existence with God which is without end, for over 900 years after Elijah was caught up into heaven we find him coming with Moses to the mount of transfiguration there to talk with Jesus the Christ concerning the supreme sacrifice which he was to make for the sin of the world.

Third. That the resurrection of the body taught so positively by Scripture is to be literal. There are at least three in heaven to-day who have their glorified bodies, Enoch, Elijah and Jesus. Enoch and Elijah never tasted death nor passed through the grave, which was a miraculous excention to the natural processes of the human life. But in Jesus we find one who has gone down into the grave and has come up out of the grave, having the body of flesh and blood transformed and glorified for entrance to the realm of the blessed of God. And that it was the same body which he had had before death, only changed, was proven over and over again during those 40 days in which Jesus walked, and talked, and ate with his disciples.

Let us hold to these three precious truths. Let us in faith rejoice in their most blessed reality, and let us live as though we really believed that heaven is our home, that we also live in God's presence eternally and that for that heavenly existence we are to have the changed and glorified bodies of this life.

THE STORY.

"BEYOND Jordan will I meet thee and take thee from earth to heaven."

Elijah started up and looked about to see from whence the voice came, and then as his spiritual perceptions asserted themselves and he realized the import of that voice, he sank back into his seat, and listened eagerly, every faculty quickened into nervous expectancy.

Again came the voice, repeating the message:

"Beyond Jordan will I meet thee and take thee from earth to heaven."

Then all was still and to the startled prophet's ear there came no further word. As the tenseness of his faculties relaxed, he bowed his head and whispered:

"It is the same voice which spoke to me on Mount Horeb."

"Beyond Jordan will I meet thee and take thee from earth to heaven," softly repeated Elijah, struggling to grasp the meaning of the words. At last after all the years of waiting since God had said that his mission should end and Elisha should be prophet in his room the final summons had come.

He was going to meet his God.

Nearly ten years had passed now since in discouragement and doubt and fear he had fled into the wilderness and then been led by God to the mount where God had spoken with him. Never for a moment since then had the consciousness left him of the immanence of God and of the uncertainty and temporality of his position as prophet in Israel. It was as though he had received notice of the termination of his mission and was only waiting for the final transfer of authority to the one who should become his successor. And so in such spirit of expectancy he had waited, while the faithful Elisha had followed him whithersoever he went and ministered unto him.

That day they had come to Gilgal and weary with the long journey Elisha had fallen into a deep sleep, while Elijah, tired though he was, had felt no inclination to sleep. So, yielding to the spirit of meditation, he let memory have free rein and in rapid kaleidoscopic manner the stirring events of his life passed before him.

How wonderfully God had kept him and cared for him and used him. And yet, he thought, how little he had accomplished. How little impress he had made on the religious life of the nation. Oh, that they might know that his God was the true and only God! Oh, that righteousness and truth might prevail throughout the nation! What more was there that he could do to arouse the people to a realization of their condition and their need?

He had reached this point in his thought and reasoning and a great yearning for a revival of religion in the nation swept over him, when out of the darkness came the voice, and speaking the words with which our story opens.

He was going to meet his God.

Just what that all meant he knew not. All he knew was that God had summoned him over the Jordan there to take his departure for heaven. Would it be with him as it was with Moses, God burying him in a lonely spot, or would he be caught up to be with God as was Enoch?

These questions came to him, and then he prayed:

"Oh Lord, that my going might be a blessing to Israel, let the people who know not thee and who doubt the realities of thy dwelling place known that thou dwellest in the heavens and that it is to thee to whom thy children go when the years of the earthly pilgrimage are ended."

As he ended his prayer there came a faint cry from the corner where Elisha lay on his couch and he turned to see his faithful follower and servant rise to his feet, suddenly exclaiming as he did so:

"My master! Oh, my master!"

"I am here," spoke up Elijah. "What troubleth thee?" he added as he saw the agitated condition of Elisha.

"Ah, thou art still here," cried Elisha, in a relieved voice, coming hastily towards Elijah and clasping him in affectionate embrace, for the younger man had come to love the saintly man as a son might a father. "It must have been a vision," he continued, rubbing his hand over his eyes in a dazed sort of way, "and yet it was so real."

"It was of thee," slowly spoke Elisha. "I thought I heard voices calling thee, and then it seemed as though a pathway of light opened up from above from the direction in which the voice had come, and when next I looked thou had gone, and the way by which thou had gone faded from my vision. But thou art still here," he exclaimed, earnestly. "But verily I believe that the Lord would take thee from me."

"Yea," softly replied the aged prophet, "this night he hath called me, and I am going."

A half sob escaped from the parted lips of Elisha, but he spoke no word. The occasion semed too sacred for utterance from him. He would listen for the words which his beloved master, who was so soon to leave him, might utter. And through the remainder of that night he sat at his master's feet drinking in with feverish eagerness all that the latter felt moved to speak, and then when the first faint streaks of gray began to appear in the eastern sky Elijah arose and girded himself as though for a journey.

Without speaking a word, Elisha arose also, and did likewise, inwardly resolving as he did so that whither Elijah went he would go until God should take him.

"Tarry here," urged Elijah, as he took his staff in his hand and started towards the door. "For the Lord hath sent me to Bethel."

"As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee."

A glad light of loving appreciation shone in the face of the aged prophet, and the two went on together, and in the course of the day came to Bethel. As they drew near to the place they were surprised to see a company of the sons of the prophets coming to meet them. With a reverential awe they looked upon Elijah, and when they found opportunity they whispered in Elisha's ear:

"Knowest thou that the Lord will take thy master from thy head today?"

"How knowest thou this?" exclaimed Elisha, almost impatiently.

"The Lord showed us this in a vision last night," was the reply.

"Yea, and the Lord hath revealed it unto me," almost curtly replied Elisha. "Hold ye your peace."

And when Elijah would go on from Bethel to Jericho, he again urged Elisha to tarry, but he would not, but clung the more to him.

Ah, the intense eager yearning of that journey to Jericho and then across Jordan. Elijah should not go without leaving him the blessing he needed as prophet to Israel. And, with the vision of the chariot of fire and his cry as Elijah was parted from him, he knew that he had prevailed, and that the blessing was his.

It's the dishonorable parents as much as the irreverent children who break the fourth commandment.

When a man boasts of being the master of his appetites he is apt to be a martyr to them.

BILLS PASSED BY THE KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson has his hands full, even though the Legislature has adjourned, for he has a large stack of bills on his desk which he must veto, sign or allow to become laws without his signature. The Legislature which just adjourned, passed, all told, ninety-two bills, in addition to the resolutions allowing pay for the employes of the House and Senate. The appropriation bills are not so large as was expected, and the total amount runs only to $1,441,200. This includes the amount appropriated for the new Capitol and the half million dollars for the State College and the normal schools.

Following is a list of the Senate bills passed by both Houses:

By Mr. Peters—An act changing the time of holding Court in the Twelfth Judicial District.

By Mr. E. M. Taylor—An act for the maintenance of public levees, the bill affecting only Hickman County.

By Mr. Neil—An act to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors by wholesale, in a local option territory, to any except a licensed retailer or wholesaler.

By Mr. Combs—An act appropriating $10,000 for the repair of the monument of Henry Clay.

By Mr. Combs—An act to regulate burial associations so as to eliminate all but legitimate concerns.

By Mr. Linn—An act providing state aid for free tuberculosis hospitals, where erected and maintained by private subscriptions.

By Mr. Combs—An act increasing the per capita of the inmates of the Houses of Reform from $100 to $125.

BEAR PUT MUZZLE ON HIMSELF.

Predatory Animal Got Nose Too Deep Into Lard Can.

Four prospectors started to explore and hunt through the Bitter Root range, in Idaho, and in a sheltering valley built them a log cabin. In the beginning of January the snow lay so deep that they had to keep in doors for a time. The cabin contained one room, with a large fireplace at the side opposite the door, while next the walls were ranged the two double bunks facing each other. Alongside the chimney was a large closet in which the provisions were stored, and the guns—the only firearms they had—were staked against the cupboard door at night.

The cabin door was fastened with a wooden latch. One night, while the party was sound asleep, there came a crash, and as each man sat up in his bunk he saw in the full light of the fire a big bear. He had knocked down the guns, and they lay beneath his feet, while the owners stared at the enemy, without the slightest idea what to do.

In fact, there was nothing to do but look on. Pretty soon the bear gave a sniff and brought forth from the cupboard a large piece of bacon, which he devoured. Then he lunched on some buckwheat, and presently there came the rattle of a tin can, and the prospectors knew that Bruin had found the lard.

They could hear him sucking away at the delicious substance, and were wondering what he would next attack, when there came a sniff, but not of satisfaction, and then a rattle of the can. Then suddenly, with a deeper sniff, Bruin faced around, and they saw that he was muzzled with the lard can. It was round and fitted his jaws perfectly, and he made it fit tighter by trying to open his mouth.

At first he gave the can a gentle tap on the floor, as if to argue with it, then the taps became faster and faster, and the bear began to spin around as he banged away. It was a funny performance and the spectators had all they could do to keep from laughing, but they knew the bear's claws were not muzzled, so they discreetly smothered their risibles and watched the performer, until, with one great growl of concentrated rage, he darted out the door, giving a final bang on the doorway as he passed. Then the four men laughed until the tears ran down their cheeks. It was too dark to pursue the bear, but they put a log against the door as a precaution against his return.

Rides in a Hearse.

The Rev. Charles James Palmer of Lanesboro, Mass., is a philosophic sort of sky pilot. The other day he had to officiate at the last sad rites over Elihu Ingraham, a parishioner, and it was a cold day. Now the Rev. Mr. Palmer is not only a Berkshire missionary, but also a Harvard man, and he has some strictly modern and utilitarian ideas of the clergyman's calling. That cold day of the Ingraham funeral, when the empty hearse was turning from the cemetery, the minister remembered that he was six miles from home, and only an open carriage at his disposal. So he walked through the snow to the hearse, got inside and told the driver to take him to the parish house. "It was fine riding," said Mr. Palmer, the next day, "warm and cozy and I could see all the scenery on both sides besides having an experience to reflect upon." He'll be quite welcome to his reflection.

The Evolution of Household Remedies.

In the early history of this country, EVERY FAMILY HAD ITS HOME-MADE MEDICINES. Herb teas, bitters, laxatives and tonics, were to be found in almost every house, compounded by the housewife, sometimes assisted by the apothecary or the family doctor. Such remedies as picra, which was aloes and quassia, dissolved in apple brandy. Sometimes a hop tonic, made of whiskey, hops and bitter barks. A score or more of popular, home-made remedies were thus compounded, the formulae for which were passed along from house to house, sometimes written, sometimes verbally communicated.

The patent medicine business is a natural outgrowth from this wholesome, old-time custom. In the beginning, some enterprising doctor, impressed by the usefulness of one of these home-made remedies, would take it up, improve it in many ways, manufacture it on a large scale, advertise it mainly through almanacs for the home, and thus it would become used over a large area. LATTERLY THE HOUSEHOLD REMEDY BUSINESS TOOK A MORE EXACT AND SCIENTIFIC FORM.

Peruna was originally one of these old-time remedies. It was used by the Mennonites, of Pennsylvania, before it was offered to the public for sale. Dr. Hartman, THE ORIGINAL COMPOUNDER OF PERUNA, is of Mennonite origin. First, he prescribed it for his neighbors and his patients. The sale of it increased, and at last he established a manufactory and furnished it to the general drug trade.

Peruna is useful in a great many climatic ailments, such as coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and catarrhal diseases generally. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES HAVE LEARNED THE USE OF PERUNA and its value in the treatment of these ailments. They have learned to trust and believe in Dr. Hartman's judgment, and to rely on his remedy, Peruna.

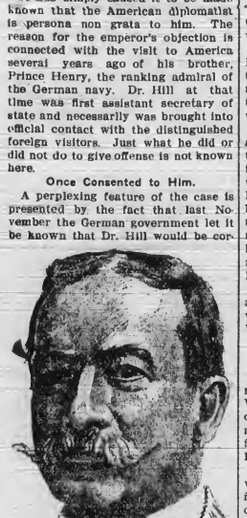
HILL TURNED DOWN

KAISER REFUSES TO RECEIVE HIM AS AMBASSADOR.

REASON NOT YET KNOWN



Personal Objection of Emperor Connected with His Brother's Visit to America—Explanation on the Way.

Washington.—The German government has declined to receive Dr. David Jayne Hill in the capacity of American ambassador to succeed Charlemagne Tower. Dr. Hill is at present American minister to The Hague and was formerly first assistant secretary of state under the administration of Secretary Hay.

The objection to Dr. Hill is one purely personal to Emperor William, [illegible] simply caused it to be made known that the American diplomatist is persona non grata to him. The reason for the emperor's objection is connected with the visit to America several years ago of his brother, Prince Henry, the ranking admiral of the German navy. Dr. Hill at that time was first assistant secretary of state and necessarily was brought into official contact with the distinguished foreign visitors. Just what he did or did not do to give offense is not known here.

Once Consented to Him.

A perplexing feature of the case is presented by the fact that last November the German government let it be known that Dr. Hill would be cordially received as American ambassador to Berlin. At that time Ambassador Tower, after the president had sought in vain to dissuade him from such a course, reached the decision that proper consideration for his own private business interests and the welfare of his children, whose education he deemed it necessary to perfect in America, obliged him to insist upon the acceptance of his resignation.

Dr. David Jayne Hill.

After a conference between Ambassador Sternberg and Secretary Root it was ascertained that a letter is en route from the German capital which contains a full explanation of the reasons for the change of attitude on the part of that government toward Mr. Hill. In the absence of the details of the objection, no comment could be elicited as to the probable action of the American government in respect to the matter. In any event, it is regarded as certain that an expressed objection to Mr. Hill made by Germany will be decisive so far as his appointment is concerned.

Mr. Hill Much Surprised.

Paris. — David Jayne Hill, who arrived Wednesday evening from The Hague, expressed the greatest surprise when informed that the German government had declined to receive him in the capacity of American ambassador to succeed Charlemagne Tower. He said that this was the first intimation he had of the German government's action, and he was at a loss to understand the announcement, especially because he personally saw an official communication from Germany to the government at Washington expressing Germany's satisfaction over the ratification of his selection for that post by President Roosevelt.

Moreover, he said, on a recent visit to Berlin he did not hear anything that would lead him to believe that he was persona non grata to the German government, nor had he received the impression that the situation was different from that expressed in the official communication he read. President Roosevelt, he added, informed him that he intended to appoint him.

TOO MUCH FOR MRS. DRUMMOND.

Ingratitude of User of Telephone Was the Last Straw.

When the Drummonds put in a telephone they were lavish in their offers of hospitality to the neighbors. "It's the unlimited kind," said little Mrs. Drummond, proudly, "so it doesn't make a bit of difference how long or how often it's used."

As time went on, Mr. Drummond noticed that when he returned to his pretty suburban home at night his wife's face often wore a tired and harrassed expression. At last one night she seemed so depressed at the dinner table that Mr. Drummond felt the time had come for him to speak.

"I'm sure it's that telephone that's at the bottom of your trouble," he said, grimly, in the midst of his awkward attempt at comfort. "Come on, you might as well tell me about it."

"I haven't minded the Lawtons discussing all their diseases with the doctor over it, because they have low voices," said Mrs. [illegible] sadly, "and I've tried not to listen when Mrs. Gray ordered her groceries and provisions and haggled over the prices.

"It wasn't pleasant to have Miss Howard scold her dressmaker, and then have the dressmaker call up our number next day and screech that until her last bill was paid Miss Howard would have no new gown.

"None of those things were pleasant, but I didn't say anything," faltered Mrs. Drummond. "But day before yesterday Mrs. Lombard came in while I was out. Lena told me when I got home that Mrs. Lombard was here telephoning a long time. And to-day some lady in town called up our number and said, 'Kindly tell Mrs. Lombard that Miss Keith regrets that after all she will be unable to go to Mrs. Lombard's tea on Saturday.'

"Horace, she's ordered all the things and invited all the people over our wire, and never asked me at all!"—Youth's Companion.

Headache from Eyestrain.

Basing himself on his records of nearly 1,300 eye examinations, Dr. S. W. S. Toms claims that 90 per cent. of all those suffering from reflex or neuralgic headache have ocular defects, declares a writer in the Family Doctor.

Over 600 of the patients examined were altogether unaware of their defect. Fully half the cases were of only slight refractive errors or muscular unbalance, and it is in these cases in which ciliary spasm is the direct factor in causing headache in persons whose occupation calls for near vision that accommodative asthenopia results.

There is no apparent relation between the severity of the headache and the degree of the ocular defect, and nothing especially characteristic, except perhaps the patient's non-suspicion of the cause. Sickness or health impairment may be the first inciting factor in some patient with considerable ocular defects which gave no trouble before.

Punishing Regicides.

Those among the assassins of the late king of Portugal and his son who fell victims to the sabers and bullets of the soldiery and police were lucky. For even in these humanitarian days the lot of the regicide when caught is not usually a very enviable one. To be hanged is the least he can expect. Perpetual solitary imprisonment is a far more dreadful fate. It drove Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert of Italy, to suicide, and it has transformed Lucchini, who murdered the empress of Austria, into a hopeless imbecile. Among the plotters implicated in the murder of the late shah of Persia one was tortured to death in prison, while another was incased in wet plaster of paris, which on setting slowly crushed the life out of him. Three of the assassins of a previous shah were boiled in huge copper caldrons.

King Frederick and the Sentry.

Frederick the Great of Prussia often told a laughable story of an experience of his own. During one of his campaigns in Silesia he made it his habit to stroll through his camp in disguise at night to come in touch with his soldiers. One night he was stopped by a sentry, but giving the proper password, was permitted to proceed. Instead of doing so, however, he endeavored to tempt the sentry into accepting a cigar, saying that a smoke would solace his long watch.

"It is against the rules," said the soldier.

"But you have my permission," said the king.

"Your permission! Who are you?"

"I am the king."

"The king be hanged!" said the incorruptible sentry. "What would my captain say?"—London Tribune.

One Definition of Critic.

"The late Edmund Clarence Stedman, the banker-poet," said a magazine editor, "was really a better critic than poet. He had a high opinion of the critic's functions. Attacks on the value of criticism always angered him. He used to tell about a typical attack of this kind. He heard it at a supper after the theater. It came from an unsuccessful actor. Mr. Stedman was replying to the toast, 'Our American Critics.' He began with the query, uttered in a ringing voice:

"'What is a critic?'

"The unsuccessful actor, in the ensuing pause, answered from the bottom of the table:

"'A man who doesn't know a good thing when he sees it.'"

AN INTERESTING CHEMICAL EXPERIMENT

Anything in the nature of a chemical experiment is always interesting and usually educative. Here is a simple experiment which any child can perform and which is instructive in a very practical way: Get a bit of White Lead about the size of a pea, a piece of charcoal, a common candle in a candlestick, and a blow-pipe. Scoop out a little hollow in the charcoal to hold the White Lead, then light the candle, take the charcoal and lead in one hand and the blow-pipe in the other, with the large end of the blow-pipe between the lips; blow the flame of the candle steadily against the bit of White Lead on the charcoal and if the White Lead is pure it will presently resolve itself into little shining globules of metallic lead, under the intense heat of the blow-pipe, leaving no residue.

If, however, the White Lead is adulterated in the slightest degree, it will not wholly change into lead. So, it will be seen, that this experiment is not only an entertaining chemical demonstration, but also of practical use in the home. White Lead is the most important ingredient of paint. It should be bought pure and unadulterated and mixed with pure linseed oil. That is the best paint. The above easy experiment enables anyone to know whether the paint is the kind which will wear or not.

The National Lead Company guarantee that white lead taken from a package bearing their "Dutch Boy Painter" trade-mark will prove absolutely pure under the blow-pipe test; and to encourage people to make the test and prove the purity of paint before using it, they will send free a blow-pipe and a valuable booklet on paint to anyone writing them asking for Test Equipment. Address National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City.

BUT WAS IT THE SAME MELON?

Paper Carried by Darky Amounted Almost to Perpetual Permit.

"A negro just loves a watermelon," said Representative Johnson of South Carolina. "Strange, too, that when a policeman sees a negro with a melon at an unreasonable hour he has it right down that the darky has stolen that watermelon. I heard a story about a policeman who met a negro in the early hours of the morning, and he had a big melon on his shoulder.

"'I see you have a melon there?'

"'Yes, sah,' answered the darky. 'I'se got cr melon; but I'se fixed fer you, sah,' and pulling out a paper he handed it to the officer, who read: 'This bearer of this is O. K. He pald me ten cents for the melon, and he is a pillar in the church. James Elder.'

"'You are fixed,' said the officer.

"'Dat's what I 'lowed,' answered the negro, and he moved on."—Washington Herald.

How Her Life Was Saved When Bitten By a Large Snake.

How few people there are who are not afraid of snakes. Not long ago a harmless little garter snake fell on the wheel of an automobile which was being driven by a woman. The woman promptly fainted and the car, left to its own resources, ran into a stone wall and caused a serious accident.

The bite of a poisonous snake needs prompt attention. Mrs. K. M. Fishel, Route No. 1, Box 40, Dillsburg, Pa., tells how she saved her life when bitten by a large snake.

"On August 29, 1906, I was bitten on the hand twice by a large copperhead snake. Being a distance from any medical aid, as a last resort I used Sloan's Liniment, and to my astonishment found it killed all pain and was the means of saving my life. I am the mother of four children and am never without your Liniment."

Promoting German Sculpture.

Emperor William has received Prof. Schott, the well-known sculptor, who with Prof. Rheinhold Begas, also a sculptor, is actively engaged in promoting an exhibition of German sculpture in New York. The emperor gave his approval of the exhibit, for which statuary worth $750,000 has already been pledged.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

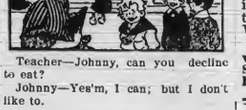
Charles McCormick of Kenville, Manitoba, writes:



"During the season of 1907, I had 100 acres in crop on the S. W. quarter of section 18, township 35, range 27 west of the Principal Meridian, Western Canada, yielded as follows:

"80 acres at 22 bushels per acre, which I sold for 90 cents per bushel; and 20 acres oats yielding 60 bushels per acre I sold for 35 cents per bushel so that my total crop realized $2,004.00. From this I deducted for expenses of threshing, hired help, etc., $400.00, leaving me a net profit on this year's crop of over $1,600."

Thomas Sawatzky of Herbert, Saskatchewan, says:

"The value of my crop per acre of wheat is $22.50. I threshed 1,750 bushels of wheat from 70 acres, and was offered 90 cents a bushel for it. Oats, 15 acres, 500 bushels; and barley, 5 acres, 80 bushels. I do not know if I have been doing the best in this district, but I know if all the farmers were doing as well, Western Canada would have no kick coming as far as grain growing is concerned; and I further say that if you want to put this in one of your advertisements, this is true and I can put my name to it."

PRESCRIBED CUTICURA

"Our baby boy broke out with eczema on his face when one month old. One place on the side of his face the size of a nickel was raw like beefsteak for three months, and he would cry out when I bathed the parts that were sore and broken out. I gave him three months' treatment from a good doctor, but at the end of that time the child was no better. Then my doctor recommended Cuticura. After using a cake of Cuticura Soap, a third of a box of Cuticura Ointment, and half a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent he was well and his face was as smooth as any baby's. He is now two years and a half old and no eczema has reappeared. Mrs. M. L. Harris, Alton, Kan., May 14 and June 12, 1907."

Too Risky.

"Resigned last week," drawled the loafer in the Beacon Ridge post office.

"What caused the old man to resign?"

"Why, he read in the paper that the Florida people were shipping live alligators through the mail. Said he could stand queen bees, but when it came to live alligators he drew the line, because he had never learned to be a circus trainer, be gosh."

While he is the president of the Equitable Bank, yet his love for his early calling, together with the balmy spring weather, the green fields and the song of the birds announcing the presence of spring—all of these enticing influences were too great for resistance and a visit to the farm alone could satisfy Charlie, the past week.

The Fielding Dickey heirs have sold their house and 29 acres near Kensington to Webb Winters, of Covington, for $4,500. The purchaser, Mr. Winters, recently moved from Ohio to Cuvington, where he formerly handled tobacco, and he concluded to get a good home in the country, and has been fully satisfied in securing a very fine piece of property.

The Walton Brick Works have gotten in their machinery and will be ready to make pressed brick next month, and have already demands for brick sufficient to keep them busy for some time. They have about $12,000 invested and the clay is said to be very superior for brick purposes. The brick are made by a dry process under an extraordinary hydraulic pressure, no water being used, and the samples made at the works are equal, if not superior, to any brick on the market. The plant is located on the old canning property formerly owned by the Snider Preserve Works.

Last Thursday a professional pedestrian named Wallace, was here enroute to New York City from a return walk across the continent, starting originally from New York City, and footing it to San Francisco, California, with the exception of 1,200 miles, which was stipulated in the wager he could ride on a railroad for the purpose of getting over the Rocky mountains and across the great alkali desert. The trip of nearly 4,000 miles from New York to California was made by Wallace in 86 days, and as proof of his being at the respective places he gets the trustees to stamp with his dating stamp the date of his arrival in a book he carries for that purpose. Wallace did not state what the wager amounted to or what he was to get for this fete of physical endurance, but in all probability he will open a saloon and use the thus obtained notoriety to popularize his place of business and draw trade. This world is made up of a peculiar lot of people who want to avoid anything that smacks of work, yet they spare no toil in their exertions to get a living for nothing.

The Union League of the Christian Endeavor met last Saturday evening at the Baptist church. The subject, Success, was well discussed. James Cross, the leader, gave a short talk on the necessity of Christianity for a truly successful life. Misses Hind and Bentz gave very interesting essays on the subject. They discussed the different views of a successful life taken by the Christian and the worldian. Rev. J. B. Harris contributed a well prepared paper, comparing the two words, success and luck, and considered the three essentials for success: ability, patience and energy. A solo, "Tell Mother I'll be There," by Miss Queen Tillman, was greatly enjoyed. A large crowd was present, the three societies were well represented, and the supporters of the union are very much encouraged by this manifestation of interest. The next meeting will be held at the Methodist church Thursday evening April 21st. All are invited.

Dr. Noble Hamilton and wife, of Washington, D. C., are guests of Mr. A. B Tompkins and family.

Jas. W. Conley, clerk of Gallatin county court and cashier of Glencoe Deposit Bank was a guest of friends here yesterday.

The appearance of two or three strange men who have been seen several times, recently, in the northern part of the county, is causing considerable uneasiness on the part of the people out there.

The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion,

SEASON 1908.

SEASON 1908.

PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $5 discount on the two seasons—paying only $35 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $20 will be collected.

This Stallion is a Mahoghany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone County as his colts speak for themselves. A ring of this Stallion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

Care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur. Positively no business done on Sunday. Parties breeding must follow up the season.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733

PROPERTY OF

High Vine Horse Company,

WALTON, KY.,

Edwards & Best, - - Managers.
W. L. Gaines, President.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733,

Foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667. Grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730. Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2282, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1655. Second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 90. Third dam, Maxey by Granger. Fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

A number of prominent citizens of the locality of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine saddle horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 00 to insure.

High Vine was shown at various county fairs, last fall, and was a prize winner at all of them, taking first in the Sweepsteaks Saddle and Harness ring at Erlanger, and defeating the great Chancellor gelding at Sanders. He has proved to be a fine breeder, and his colts will be ready sellers at fancy prices. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and keeping.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from breeding of 1908, the time and place of the show to be announced later.

IN A JAPANESE THEATER

The Funny Things One Sees in Smiling Round the World

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The theater has always been a favorite form of recreation among the Japanese, and especially beloved of the Japanese woman, for it is her only amusement, and the only public place where she may accompany her husband.

The theater of old Japan, with its strutting legendary heroes, its ancient costumes, and actors who carried their own lanterns in order to light the expressions of their faces, is practically a thing of the past. While many of the old customs still survive, modern inventions and appliances have been grafted upon them to the effect of producing some startling contrasts. The Japs, eager to grasp European ideas and fashions, have made use of some, but left many as they have been for generations.

We may go at any hour, so suppose we start at five. On our way, we are sure to see every characteristic of street life. The Japanese, in their eagerness to adopt European ways and customs, have swallowed such a large meal they are not able to digest it; and no better illustration of this can be found than their pretentious and truly wonderful street signs. As a specimen of English as she is Japped, the following, culled from a choice, and I might say, startling, collection, is respectfully submitted. The spelling and punctuation are especially worth noting:

On a baker's cart:
BY CAKE & A PIECE OF BREAD.

Over a ladies' tailor shop:
DRAPER, MILLENER & LADIES OUTFATTER.

The ribbons, the laces, the veils, the feelings. (frillings?)

Over a furniture shop:
CHAIR, COCHON. (couch?) & MATTLES (Mantels?)

On a dairy window:
PEST MILK. (rather alarming, but probably means BEST).

On a druggist's:
BEST PERFUMING WATER ANTI-FLEA.

Over a laundry:
We most cleanly and carefully wash our customers with cheap prices as under.
Ladies eight shillings per hundred.
Gentlemen seven shillings.

A dentist's sign:
NOTIES.
Our tooth is a very important organ for human life and countenance as you know; therefore when it is attack by disease or injury, artificial tooth is also very useful.
Japanese substitute for coffee:
JAPAN INSTED OF COFFEE.
More men is got dropsy of the legs who us (use?) this coffee, which is contain nourish.

Photographer's studio:
PHOTOGRAPHER EXECUTED.

Over a barber shop:
HEAD CUTTER.

Over a tailor's:
THE EUROPEAN MONKEY JACKET MADE FOR THE JAPANESE.
I reserve the gems of the collection for the last:
FULISH RUTTR. CRIAM MILK. (Fresh Butter, Cream, Milk.)

Over an egg shop:
EXTRACT OF FOWL.

Our rickshaws stop, and our men light their paper lanterns. It seems absurd to have a paper lantern for practical use, but the little candles of greenish gray wax burn steadily, and give a clear light. We meet many people carrying paper lanterns, so we see that what has always been to us merely a thing for decoration only, is in this toy-box of a country an article for practical use.

Having reached the theater, quite an imposing building of stone, we enter the lobby.

(A man and a woman are on the stage, she crying, and he trying to comfort her.) Our guide explains to us that she has been about to commit suicide because of the financial ruin of her husband.

The part of the woman is played by Takata, one of the greatest impersonators of women in Japan. There are no actresses, all the parts being assumed by men. This particular actor is so conscientious, that, in order to retain the atmosphere of his impersonations, while at home he dresses, talks acts, and generally comports himself as a woman would.

Danjiro, the most famous impersonator of women in Japan, is reported to have made up so perfectly as a girl of 17, when he was 65 years old, that when he went to his own house and asked to see Danjiro, his wife did not know him, and in a fit of jealous anger, berated him for a shameless girl, coming there to see her husband.

Her husband approaches, and the old man runs off, across the "Flowery Way," begging her not to let his charity be known.

The husband is suspicious, and asks her why she was talking with that man. Her promise given, she cannot [illegible] answer, and after a fiery scene, he spurns her, and the curtain is drawn, to the solemn banging of a drum, and the high pitched mournful song of some one in the distance.

Danjiro owns the finest curtain in Japan, presented to him by the Geisha of Tokio, who each gave a hundred yen. It is of silk, embroidered as only Japanese know how, and to see, well worth the price of admission.

The entire lower floor of the theater is divided into little boxes, about four feet square, by partitions not more than four or five inches high. About five yen are paid for these boxes, and they hold four people, who kneel on matting rugs.

The best seats are the boxes along the sides of the balcony, which also hold four people, and cost six yen. As a yen is worth 50 cents of American money, it may be seen that the prices of Japanese theaters, by comparison with those of Europe or America, are very reasonable.

* * *

At this juncture our ears are assailed by the most heart-rending sounds that chill the blood in our veins. It is the European orchestra! The smiling guide tells us: "European orchestra very nice—Japanese people like very much!"

"Who's meddled mit my drombone?" roars a musician.

"Oi did," said Paddy. "Here ye've been for two hours tryin' to pull it apart, an' Oi did it in wan minut!"

A sharp noise, made by striking two pieces of hard wood together announces that the next act is about to begin. The intervals between acts are usually about ten minutes.

As the curtain is drawn aside, the pieces of wood tap together faster and faster, until the stage is disclosed.

This time it is a house, the front open, chrysanthemums growing about the door. At intervals the shrill note of an insect is heard.

Sata, the great actor, is seated on the floor; he is in a state of intoxication, and keeps drinking from a bottle in front of him.

His father-in-law is pleading with him to grant a divorce to his daughter, as his constant intoxication and ill-treatment of her are hard to bear. The drunkard refuses, and the scene between the men is a powerful one, a knowledge of the language being unnecessary in order to appreciate their really great acting.

The revolving stage, used in all Japanese theaters, is seen in this act, as the entire stage turns, bringing into view a different scene, the old man's house.

The play proceeds through several acts, to a European or American, in rather a disjointed manner, and without much sequence, but with no lack of fine acting.

Just before the last act, the ushers bring in the sandals and clogs that have been checked, so there will be no confusion and delay when the theater is out.

But three days are allowed for rehearsal, and in that time they must be letter perfect, for a Japanese audience is a critical one.

Approbation is announced by clapping the hands, but audible comments are frequent.

When we go out, our rickshawmen, wrapped in their rugs, hurry from the gallery where they have been enjoying the play. The orchestra and the electric lights are not the only innovations in this theater. The idea of a play of modern Japanese life is entirely new, and we were fortunate in seeing the first performance of one of the few modern plays ever enacted in Japan.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

SOME PENNY-WISE AND POUND-FOOLISH METHODS.

WANTING TOO MUCH PROFIT

With price cutting, short weight packages, trading stamps, advertising fakirs, box-car merchants, mail-order houses, dead beats and numerous other burdens to carry and contend with, the life of the storekeeper is far from a happy one. He rises in the morning with the tune of the fark, works hard all the day long, and goes to bed at night not knowing whether the price of oil will be raised on him [illegible] day or not. There is the answer, and after a fiery scene, he [illegible] that the merchant sometimes reads, and it makes him tired to learn that he has been for years acting the chump by not advertising in its pages in the right way. There is a lot of retailers who kick and howl about people sending to mail-order houses for goods and never once think that they, the merchants, are to blame for the matter.

The other day the writer met a farmer. He was an interesting kind of chap, pretty well up in the ways of the wicked world, the methods of the box-car merchants and the manners of the local storekeepers. He said that he had been buying goods from a few of the mail-order houses for the past few years. He commenced patronizing them in this way: He wanted to buy a small rifle for his son at Christmas time. He went to his local hardware dealer, found that the rifle would cost him $2.50. His son had seen the same thing advertised by a mail-order house for $1.10. He told his father that he could buy it for that. The storekeeper wouldn't come down a cent on his price; in fact, told the man to send away and get it. He did so. The rifle cost him, laid down, $1.35, or $1.15 less than he could have bought it at home. This is a poor argument in favor of the home store. The dealer could have sold the rifle as low as the mail-order concern could lay it down in his town, but he wouldn't. The result was one more man became a buyer on the mail-order house plan.

This same man told me that he went to his local drug store to buy a rubber fountain syringe. He paid the druggist $1.75 for one. A few months later he wanted another one of the same kind. He found it was advertised in the big book for 60 cents. He sent for it, cost him 72 cents laid down to him by the rural mail carrier. Another case where the druggist was not up to snuff and wanted to make a profit out of all proportions to what legitimately should be made. This farmer felt that he was being overcharged for these little things and could see no reason why he should not save a little money by sending away from home for what he wanted. This same farmer knows that he should buy goods just as low from his home storekeeper as he gets them from the mail-order house. He also knows that in many lines he can buy goods cheaper. The only trouble is that some merchants carry a small line of merchandise on which they think they should make 200 per cent. profit or more. There is little call for this class, and when a sale is made they want too large profits. Their customers don't like this treatment. They feel it is not the right kind of a deal, and are sore over it. It doesn't pay the merchant to mark his special goods so high, for it is just on this class of goods that the catalogue houses make low prices to attract attention and make the people think they are selling goods cheap.

Old Fogy Ways.

"The way my father did and my grandfather did, is good enough for me; I don't take much stock in those new fangled ideas." Hoy many in the retail trade apparently take this view of things? What percentage of business men are making progress by following in the footsteps of by-gone generations? It is not a wise and good idea to use tallow dips and pine knots in an electric light age? What would an intelligent man think of the western farmer who would undertake to reap his wheat field with a sickle? But still many are in the same boat when they try to do business as their fathers and their grandfathers did. There are certain principles that one may follow; can be honest, give square measure, be sociable, favor friends, and all those little things, but to do business in the old way means failure unless one is located in a backwoods place where there is no competition. The up-to-date merchant is the man who gets there, and it is a difficult matter to find the place today where advanced methods are not necessary.

Utopian Idea.

Communism is an Utopian idea, based upon platonic principles which neither recognize natural laws as applied to business nor the rewards merited by superiority of intelligence or extraordinary achievements. It means that the plodder, the indolent and the incompetents shall partake of the benefits of the labors of the more worthy, enjoy that earned by efforts of the workers and forever be a burden upon their communities. Two thousand years of experience has proved the errors of its alleged philosophy and its unsoundness in the practical affairs of life.

PURCHASED EXPERIENCE.

Dealing Away from Home Causes Unnecessary Expense and Annoyance.

One peculiar phase of human nature is shown by how some people will jump in and buy goods without seeing what they are getting. Not long ago a man out in a western state, who had made a few thousand by farming, decided to build a new house in his home town. He was a tight-fisted, pinch-the-penny kind of fellow, and decided that he would buy all he could in the way of fixings from the mail-order houses. He had the local plumber do the lead-piping and a lot of work that the mail-order people couldn't do, then ordered his bath-tub and toilet fixings from a mail order concern. He priced the tubs in the local house, then decided that he could save two or three dollars. He got his tub and his stand from abroad. Both came without fixtures. There was a lot of trouble over freight, and when the tub was put in place it was found that another in the town could be had to fit it. Faucets, valves, etc., were ordered from the house that supplied the tub. When they came it was found they were the wrong size. They were sent back, and another lot sent. Then even the local plumber had to work two or three days extra to get things in shape. When the job was completed, it was found that the cost was some $15 more than the home man offered to do all the work and supply the equipment. This is only one illustration of how money can be saved by ordering from a house at a distance.

Some who order from the retail mail-order houses get a taste of the real thing. A young man in a Nebraska town sent 65 cents to one of the concerns for a buggy whip. It was represented as cheap at twice the price. In a week or so he got it by express, charges only 75 cents. It was done up in a package that the company didn't charge for, but when examined, the young man found that the same whip could be had of his home storekeeper for 50 cents. There was 5 cents money order and postage; 75 cents expressage and 65 cents for the whip, making a total of $1.45, not counting the trouble of ordering—all this for a whip that could be had for one-third the amount at home.

STUDY OF HUMAN NATURE.

Important to Man of Business to Be a Reader of Character.

How many business men appreciate how valuable a knowledge of human nature really is to them? There are few things, even the capital employed in business, more valuable than the faculty of understanding the people with whom one must deal day after day.

The successful man in every walk of life is the man who intuitively knows how to deal with those whom he comes in contact. It is the knowledge of human nature and the ability to read human character that makes the politician a success, that gives the public man in every walk of life the most useful power in his possession. If the average business man paid a little more attention to physiogomy and its kindred studies he would be more successful. The idiosyncrasies of mankind are as various as the shells of the ocean. Each individual cannot be understood, but he can be placed in his class, and a fair estimate of him made by the man who can read the face and understand natural actions.

One of the first studies of the business man should be his customers. He should know a little of the character of each. He should be able to tell the well-meaning, honest one from the dead beat, and know how best to handle each one. There is a difference between the actions of the man who is always looking for some merchant who will trust him and who never pays his bills, and the honest man. There is also a difference between the dishonest ones, and the honest one who is a never-to-well, and always in the "hole." Day after day the daily papers tell of the smooth forgers who pass worthless checks the "country jay" who has a check cashed or buys goods on some one else's credit. How much could such work be prevented if the average business man only could read character as he should? The wise man will lose no opportunity to study human nature and profit thereby. It is a capital as useful to him as the money he has invested in his business.

Only a Square Deal.

How much of the money which is sent away to the catalogue houses ever returns to the community from which it is sent? How much of the money spent with the home merchants goes to build up other places? Who helps pay the taxes, build roads and bridges, erect churches and schoolhouses, fosters and encourages public improvements, buys farm produce, carries names of the needy on the debit side of the books the year around, and is willing and eager at all times to assist them by credit or money, if they may need it? Is it the catalogue house or the local merchant? The local merchant? Then why not give him the opportunity to figure on that "cash order" perhaps you are about to buy. He can fill it, freight included, as cheaply, and in some instances much less, than the catalogue fellows will charge. Stand up for home trade. Dollars sent away for goods never return, but help build up the large cities and big catalogue houses which are not only trying to squeeze the life out of the country towns, but are selling goods not one cent cheaper than local dealers from whom the people expect credit when ever they need it.

CHEERING THE SICK

CUSTOM OF MAKING PRESENTS IS GOOD ONE.

Especially in the Case of Young People It Acts as an Incentive to Quick Recovery—Are Seldom Forgotten.

"Mary," said the doctor to his little girl patient, now convalescing, "when you get well don't let them forget the presents," meaning thereby the presents that little Mary's parents had promised to her when she should be well again; of which sort of presents, indeed, many are made.

When people think of presents it is commonly, to be sure, of those made at Christmas time, or on birthday or other anniversaries, or at wedding or other celebrations, but many presents are made to the sick, or assurance of them is given, for future delivery, on recovery.

Friends send in flowers to cheer the sick. Indeed a considerable percentage of the florist's trade is in flowers bought to be sent to sick friends.

Presents for younger people may take a more material form. Often such presents are promised to be given when the child gets well, with the hope that the prospect of them will stimulate recovery.

After a hard and maybe dangerous illness the little one comes through all right and gets started on the road to recovery, tired and weak but now steadily improving. And then the happy, grateful mother:

"Mary, you must hurry up and get well, now," and then she goes on to tell her what she's going to give her when she does get well, a new dress or $10 to put in the savings bank or that big doll that Mary had wanted, or whatever it might be that she thinks would please Mary most; and if the sick one is a boy, why then the promised gifts are such as would give him the greatest pleasure. Many gifts are thus made; and these things the sick ones look forward to the possession of with helpful delight.

It was to things thus promised that the doctor referred when he said to Mary that she mustn't let her folks forget the presents when she got well; bnt he was only joking when he said that, simply helping her the more by bringing to her mind in this new way, from him, the pleasant prospect of them; he knew they would not forget them, for parents seldom do forget them.

Older people themselves sick may make vows that if they are blessed with recovery they will make gifts here and there as an offering and then when they get well they may forget; but parents seldom forget their promises to their childhen.

So while Christmas is the great time of gifts, yet what with the presents made on various festive occasions and, by no means least, the presents made to the sick, who are not all sick at once, the season of gifts is really continued the year around.

A Hopeless Pessimist.

"Why don't you make some arrangements to donate your money for philanthropic purposes?"

"What's the use?" inquired Mr. Dustin Stax. "It's getting too hard these days to distinguish between a genuine philanthropist and a man who is ambitious to show off."—Washington Star.

Wit of King Carlos.

"Many witticisms fell daily from the lips of our late king," said a Portuguese consul.

"The king was, you know, a splendid shot. At a dinner the rather inferior shooting of an English visitor was praised, and some one said:

"'And Lord Gadabout, you know, sends everything he shoots to the hospitals.'

"The king laughed, and taking the long cigar from his lips, he said:

"'Naturally; since he never shoots anything but gamekeepers.'"

ELIJAH'S MANTLE

It Rests Upon the Shoulders of Elisha.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Elson.)

Scripture Authority—2 Kings 2:12-15.

SERMONETTE.

Desire for special blessing must be re-enforced by the effort which will bring one to the place where the blessing can be bestowed.

God's gifts of special power and grace are never carelessly bestowed.

It is only he who asks who receives; it is only the seeker who finds; it is only to him who knocks that the door of blessing is opened.

Ask, seek, knock. These are the progressive steps which lead from desire to possession; from aspiration to realization.

To ask is an admission of a lack and a desire for the satisfying of that lack; to seek is the test of the genuineness and quality of the desire; to knock is the settled purpose of the heart to obtain at any cost.

It is only to the watchful eyes of the saint that visions of heavenly messengers are given; it is only upon those whose feet press persistently the pathway of duty, no matter how footsore and weary those feet may become, that the descending mantle of God's special grace falls.

Between promise and fulfillment, between the call and the commission there are often many hard, weary, trying years of service which are essential to preparedness to receive the promise and execute the commission. As we contemplate the inspiring picture of Elisha receiving the mantle of Elijah, thus betokening his exaltation to the high place of service left vacant by Elijah's translation, we exclaim: "How signally blessed of God that such honor should be placed upon him." But we must not forget the years of waiting, of toil, of privation, of persecution, of suffering through which he passed to prove his fitness to receive the high commission. That was a great day in Elisha's life when while plowing in the field at Abel-meholah Elijah came and called him to the office of prophet in Israel. But there was a wide stretch of years between that call and its realization; a stretch of years which were to prove to be the school of discipline and training for the great mission he was to fill. It is ever thus. God's call is heard, the vision comes of great service, and then comes the struggle to attain the place where the call and the vision are to have their fruition.

THE STORY.

THERE lay the mantle at his feet where it had fallen.

As Elisha lowered his eyes from the heavens it was the first thing he saw. Slowly he stooped and touched reverently the rough garment of sheepskin.

Elisha did not at once lift the garment from the ground. There was something so sacred about it. He knew it was for him. He understood that it was the sign from God that his prayer had been heard and that the yearning of his heart was to be satisfied, but an overpowering sense of the great trust imposed upon him, and a consciousness of personal unworthiness coupled with that spirit of true humility which comes from close fellowship with God forbade any thought-less haste.

To take Elijah's mantle—Oh, how much it meant! Would he be equal to the exalted trust? Would the mantle in his hands be to the honor or the dishonor of God and the memory of the great prophet upon whose shoulders it had rested?

As he touched it reverently and then drew back and lifted his eyes to heaven in silent appeal there was no thought of superstitious regard or idea that in the garment itself rested any supernatural power and charm. He knew it was only a sign, a token given him by God that he was to fill the place left vacant by the translation of Elijah. And yet the life and character of the one who had worn the garment had become in a sense a part of the garment itself, so that it was a constant and eloquent reminder of the way the prophet had walked, the manner in which he had wrought, and the higher, holier life after which he had sought, so that it was sacred with memories which could but stimulate and spur on to the highest and best endeavor.

As Elisha stood thus, the deepening influence of that miraculous hour reaching to the utmost recesses of his soul, there came the memory of the first time in his life when the mantle of Elijah had touched him and he had suddenly awakened to a consciousness of God's call. Then had come an elation, a consciousness of self-importance, and a spirit of eager, self-confident purpose in the exalted place God had called him to fill. And he had been impatient for aggressive service. But the years of discipline under the faithful ministry of Elijah had chastened his spirit and brought him low before God, so that God could exalt him. And now Elijah had gone and his mantle lay at his feet.

"Oh, God," he exclaimed, as the influences of that hour were borne in upon him, "thou God of Elijah, quicken me by that same Spirit in which Elijah walked, so that people may know as they see the mantle of Elijah resting upon me that the God of Elijah still lives and is mighty in his works among men!"

With this prayer upon his lips he again stooped and this time picked up the mantle.

"In the spirit and power of Elijah, O Lord!" he fervently whispered as he turned and retraced the pathway towards the Jordan over which but so short a time before he had passed with Elijah. So intent had he been in watching Elijah lest the Lord should snatch the prophet from him ere he knew it, that he had not realized how far they had come, and during the walk back to the Jordan he had ample time to recall all the remarkable incidents of the long journey from Gilgal to Bethel, from Bethel to Jericho and then to the Jordan and on through its divided waters. As he drew near to the banks of the river he suddenly recalled the fact that the sons of the prophets from the school at Jericho had followed him and his master out as far as the high bluffs overlooking the Jordan, and he now lifted his eyes in that direction to see if they were still there.

Yes, there they were, the group being sharply silhouetted against the western sky which was all aglow with the red and gold of the setting sun, and it was evident from their gesticulations and excitement that they saw him.

The splash of his feet as he dipped into the water at the edge of the river suddenly recalled him to a consciousness of his surroundings, and, lowering his eyes from the excited group on the bluffs opposite, he looked upon the surface of the broad river, which lay seemingly as an insuperable barrier between him and the continuation of his journey. For a moment Elisha paused, but only for a moment, for as he looked out beyond him and again lifted his eyes to the opposite bluff he became conscious that here was the place of the first testing. The sons of the prophets were watching him. The broad Jordan separated him from them. Would he be able to go to them? If the power of Elijah rested upon him could he do less than cross upon the dry bed of Jordan as the prophet Elijah had done?

"Yea," he exclaimed, looking up to heaven, "and the mantle of Elijah is with me as token that the God of Elijah is still present to work his mighty works in Israel. Did not Elijah smite the waters and did not they obey his will?"

Even while he was thus speaking with himself he was carefully folding the garment which he held in his hands, and as he finished his soliloquy he raised it above his head and then brought it down upon the waters before him, exclaiming as he did so, in a voice which rang out on the still air so that it was audible to the group of men on the bluff opposite:

"Where is the Lord God of Elijah?"

Hither and thither sprang the waters as though suddenly imbued with life and soon a dry lane banked with water on either side stretched out from shore to shore, and through which Elisha passed.

With breathless, intense interest the sons of the prophets beheld the wonderful sight. Their eyes never for an instant left that majestic figure as it moved with such confidence through those towering waters. It was as though there was being borne in upon their hearts the consciousness that though Elijah was not there, the same mighty God in whom Elijah had trusted was present to work his miracles. Nearer and nearer came Elisha, and as his foot pressed the bank of the Jordan and the waters returned to their wonted channels, a cry broke from their lips, and, springing down the steep pathway of the bluff, they shouted as they ran:

"Surely, the spirit of Elijah doth rest upon Elisha! Surely the spirit of Elijah doth rest upon Elisha!"

They have right to the promises and may justly lay hold upon them who are God's servants; they who apply themselves to obey his precepts, these only can rightly apply his promises to themselves. Make it clear that you are God's servants, and then these promises are your own no less than if your name were inserted in the promise, and written in the Bible.—Manton.

The promises are a precious book; ... leaf drops myrrh and mercy. They are golden vessels laden with the choicest jewels that heaven can afford or the soul desire. There is nothing you can truly call a mercy but you will find it in the promises.—T. Brooks.

DON'T LIKE LITTLE STRANGER.

Did Ever Youngster Welcome Advent of Little Brother or Sister?

The mothers were talking shop.

"When little Harold came," said the first mother, "his older brother Reginald was very curious about him.

"'Yes, Reggie, dear,' I told him, 'the little baby is a Washington's birthday present to us from the angels.'

"He frowned in thoughtful silence. Then he said:

"'Well, mamma, if we wrap him up carefully and put him away and don't use him, we can give him to somebody else next Washington's birthday, can't we?'"

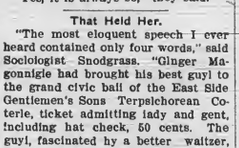
The other mothers smiled and sighed. The second said:

"On the—er—advent of my little Miriam, Hannah, our five-year-old, was taken upstairs by the cook to see the newcomer.

"Hannah looked her little sister over sternly. Then, turning to the cook, she said:

"'Jane, you can keep that in the kitchen.'"

Again the mothers smiled and sighed and nodded sadly.



"Yes, it is always so," they said.

That Held Her.

"The most eloquent speech I ever heard contained only four words," said Sociologist Snodgrass. "Ginger Magonnigle had brought his best guy! to the grand civic ball of the East Side Gentlemen's Sons Terpsichorean Coterie, ticket admitting lady and gent, including hat check, 50 cents. The guy!, fascinated by a better waltzer, abandoned her escort and danced three times with the stranger. As they were beginning their fourth waltz they were stopped by the hand of Ginger Magonnigle, which clutched the arm of the guy!. Gazing deep into her eyes, and with a voice in which were mingled surprise, self-pity, reproach, resentment and menace, he exclaimed:

"'Sa-a-ay, who brung yer?'"—Harper's Weekly.

NOTHING MORE TO SAY.

"Pardon my question, but how do you know your wife doesn't wish you to take out insurance?"

"Well, I'll tell you. She's got a notion I'm going to survive her and that it will be collected by No. 2."

THEY GROW.

Good Humor and Cheerfulness from Right Food.

Cheerfulness is like sunlight. It dispels the clouds from the mind as sunlight chases away the shadows of night.

Anything that interferes with good health is apt to keep cheerfulness and good humor in the background. A Washington lady found that letting coffee alone made things bright for her. She writes:

"Four years ago I was practically given up by my doctor and was not expected to live long. My nervous system was in a bad condition.

"But I was young and did not want to die so I began to look about for the cause of my chronic trouble. I used to have nervous spells which would exhaust me and after each spell it would take me days before I could sit up in a chair.

"I became convinced my trouble was caused by coffee. I decided to stop it and bought some Postum.

"The first cup, which I made according to directions, had a soothing effect on my nerves and I liked the taste. For a time I nearly lived on Postum and ate little food besides. I am today a healthy woman.

"My family and relatives wonder if I am the same person I was four years ago, when I could do no work on account of nervousness. Now I am doing my own housework, take care of two babies—one twenty, the other two months old. I am so busy that I hardly get time to write a letter, yet I do it all with the cheerfulness and good humor that comes from enjoying good health.

"I tell my friends it is to Postum I owe my life today."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

HIS WHEAT WENT 22 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE.

HE REALIZED $18 PER ACRE FROM IT, WHILE OATS GAVE HIM $17 AN ACRE.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Nov. 18th, 1907. Writing from Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Mr. S. K. Rathwall says:

"I have much pleasure in saying that on my farm this year I had 500 acres in wheat, and 120 acres in oats. My wheat averaged about 22 bushels per acre, and I had 200 acres cut before the frost, which I sold at 85 cents per bushel, thus realizing on that wheat $18.00 per acre, not counting cost of twine, seed and labor. With regard to the other 300 acres of wheat, it got touched with frost but is worth 60 cents per bushel. It will net me $13.00 per acre, but I do not intend to sell it at that price, as I can make more money by feeding it to hogs.

"My oats turned out about 50 bushels to the acre, and at 35 cents per bushel will give me $17.00 to the acre, not counting seed, twine and labor.

"On account of the late spring, a percentage of the grain was touched with frost, but on account of good prices, farmers will realize a fair profit on their farms even this year. We are as usual up against a shortage of cars to get our grain removed."

Watered Stock.

Edward R. Emerson, the president of the American Wine Growers' association, came from Washingtonville to New York the other day and lunched in a Broadway cafe with an editor.

Mr. Emerson, naturally, is a connoisseur of wines. The editor deems himself something of a connoisseur, too, and introduced Mr. Emerson with some pride to a Rhine wine, presumably of the famous '95 vintage.

"Well,' he said, "how do you like this Rhine wine, Mr. Emerson? Delicious, don't you think?"

"Not bad," said Mr. Emerson, "only I fancy there's a trifle too much Rhine in it."

"NONE BUT THE BRAVE," ETC.

HOW TO APPLY PAINT.

Greatest care should be taken when painting buildings or implements which are exposed to the weather, to have the paint applied properly. No excellence of material can make up for carelessness of application, any more than care in applying it can make poor paint wear well.

The surface to be painted should be dry and scraped and sandpapered hard and smooth. Pure white lead should be mixed with pure linseed oil, fresh for the job, and should be well brushed out, not flowed on thick. When painting is done in this manner with National Lead Company's pure white lead (trade marked with "The Dutch Boy Painter") there is every chance that the job will be satisfactory. White lead is capable of absolute test for purity. National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York, will send a testing outfit free to any one interested.

It takes a woman to sit down and cry when she happens to think what a hard time her children might have had if some other woman had been their mother.

DEVON.

Mrs. J. Wieman, was called to Notre Dame College, on account of the serious illness of her youngest daughter, Lorreta, has returned, accompanied by her daughter. It is to be hoped that she will be able to resume her studies after Easter.

The Fiscal Court was in session yesterday and transacted considerable business, much of it, however, being of minor importance. It donated $100 to assist in repairing the county road known as the Hebron and Francesville road, the appropriation being made upon the condition that those persons living along the road give an additional sum of $150 for the same purpose. Esquire J. H. Walton and W. R. Rouse were appointed a committee to have the iron bridge that spans Dry creek near Constance put in order. The floor of the bridge is submerged ten or fifteen feet by backwater, and, no doubt it will be in a very bad condition when the water recedes. The court entered an order that hereafter oversees must make their official reports to the fiscal court instead of to the county judge as heretofore.

An unusally large crowd was in town last Monday, and everybody was on his good behavior. The horse show did not come up to expectations in the matter of the number of the horses exhibited, but those that were shown attracted the attention of the entire crowd, and elicited many favorable comments. It was the first appearance here of the noted saddle horse, High Vine, and he attracted much attention, as did Plutarch, William Penn, Star Wilks, Black Badger, and the horses handled by Larry Farrell, Chas. Bodie, Ben Snyder and others.

Quite a number of those to whom statements have been sent under the new ruling of the postal department have responded. The sending out of statements will continue until the entire mailing list is covered. Those who are convenient to Walton can call at the Equitable Bank and Trust Co. and pay to Mr. D. B. Wallace, who is authorized to issue receipts, or they can remit to this office direct if they prefer.

Hon. Clifford E. Nadaud, of Covington, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district, addressed the large crowd that was in town last Monday. He spoke from the front steps of the court house, and had good attention throughout his speech which lasted about two hours. Mr. Nadaud made a good speech, and gained friends here Monday.

The flood prevailing in the Ohio river has reached proportions that make it a serious proposition with a great many people, and the outlook this morning is not a bit encouraging.

Dr. Glackin, of Richwood, veterinary, had two calls to Burlington and vicinity, last week. The doctor generally shows up in a remarkably short time when summoned here, and has always been quite successful with his patients.

The freeze of last Thursday night put the fruit growers to guessing. Some said it was all killed while some claimed there is never any danger during the light of the moon. A good crop of fruit would be a great blessing to Kentucky this year.

The connection of the Consolidated and the Hebron telephone systems is proving a very great convenience to the patrons of each, and it will soon be that the directors of the two will not understand how it was that they did not come to terms long ago.

W. J. Rice invested in a pair of young mules, one day last week, since which time he has been very busy instructing them in the use of harness that they may be prepared to render valuable service from the beginning until the close of the cropping season.

Enoch White and L. P. Rice, of the Lawrenceburg Ferry neighborhood, were among the ruralists looking after business in Burlington, last Thursday. Mr. Rice is a veteran in the ranks of Judge Cason's overseers of roads, and came in to file his report and make a show-down.

Superintendent D. M. Snyder did not attend the convention of county superintendents as announced in this column, last week. Circumstances at the last moment were such that he was compelled to abandon the trip, a fact of which the RECORDER was totally unaware until last Thursday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Smith, of Walton, were guests of friends in Burlington from last Sunday at noon until Tuesday afternoon. They were, originally, members of this community where they were, and are yet, held in very high esteem. Mr. Smith is proprietor of an up to date drugstore in Walton, and is making money.

The news of the fatal accident to Geo. Arnold, of Walton, brother of Mrs. Marce Riddell, was received here Thursday afternoon shortly after it happened. He was engaged painting the building occupied by W. N. Hud & Co., on Fifth street, Cincinnati, when he fell and was hurt so badly that he died before the hospital could be reached.

Messrs. John Smith and Stephen Gaines, two of the industrious and prosperous farmers of Prosperity Hill, were transacting business in Burlington, last Thursday. The manner in which they were clad indicated that old borses was doing business out their way that morning, and the altitude at which they dwell presented a very favorable location for him to make known his undesirable presence.

The Sand Run postoffice in the north end of the county will be discontinued in the next few days, very much to the displeasure of Johnnie Scothorn, who has been the faithful mail carrier between that place and Bullittsville, for several years, and who had secured the contract for another term, but Uncle Sam always hitches so as to unhook in case it should, at any time, be to his advantage so to do.

The livestock men in the county appear to be making a special effort to improve the grade of horses, and with that object in view several companies have been organized and considerable money invested in sires said to be as well bred as any in the country There is plenty of room for improvement of the horses in this county, and it is hoped that the recent large investments of capital will bring results of a lasting and valuable character to the producers.

Mr. A. C. Passons, who resides down on Woolper, and keeps tab on the snows for the RECORDER every winter, handed in his report a few days ago. It shows that the first snow of the past winter fell November 30th; that snow fell on 14 days during the month of December; January had five snow days, while February came up with 9 days on which the beautiful fell. It snowed on the first day of March and there the chapter ends. The total number of days on which snow fell during the snow season was 26.

The North Kentucky Agricultural Association (Florence Fair) has begun issuing matter advertising the fair which will be held on the grounds at Florence on August 26, 27, 28 and 29th. The coming exhibition will be the 13th of that popular fair, and it will be equal in interest to any of the preceding. Boone county is now in a good condition to give a good fair even without any outside help, but there will be the usual number of fine horses from abroad competing for the several very liberal premiums. The admission this year will be 35 cents for persons over 8 years old, under 8 years old free; no admission will be charged for horses and vehicles.

By order of the State Central Committee, the Sixth District Executive Committee and the Republican Executive Committee of Boone County, a mass meeting of the Republicans of Boone county is hereby called at Burlington April 25th at 1 p. m. for the purpose of sending six delegates to the Sixth Congressional District Convention, May 4th, at Covington, and to the State Convention at Louisville, May 6th; also for the purpose of electing a new County Committee, and such other business as may properly come before it.

J. G. TOMLIN, Chairman.
G. G. HUGHES, Secretary.

In Memory of Brother William N. Surface.

Whereas, the great and supreme Ruler of the universe has, in His infinite wisdom, called from among us our beloved brother, Wm N. Surface, and, whereas, Bro. Surface was a charter member of Fowler Lodge No. 201, instituted December 8th, 1905; therefore be it

Resolved, That, in his death, Fowler Lodge No. 201, I. O. O. F., has lost a friend and brother whom every member of the body loved and appreciated; a brother who was ever ready to assist both by his talents and his purse; who cheerfully and pleasantly performed all services required, and who was always ready to do his duty.

Resolved, That we know his loss will be deeply felt by every one of his relatives; therefore, we, as Odd-Fellows, extend to his bereaved wife our heartfelt sympathy, assuring her that the noble virtues of her loved one will ever be fresh in our memories.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of Fowler Lodge No. 201, I. O. O. F., a copy sent to the widow, also to the RECORDER for publication.

Committee—N. C. Tanner, Harry W. Riley, R. O. Smith.

Circuit Clerk James A. Duncan is hustling this week shaping up the business in his office and in that of Master Commissioner, which he also holds, for the spring term of the Boone circuit court which convenes next Monday. The docket has very few new cases, and nearly all the old ones have been threshed over and over until there is not much in them. The trial of John Meeks, charged with the murder of Albert Clutterbuck in Florence on Saturday evening, December 14th, 1907, is set for Tuesday, April 21, which is the 8th day of the term. Meeks has been in jail in Covington ever since the last term of the circuit court here, the court ordering him taken there in order to prevent mob violence which it was reported had been threatened. Judge Cammack will order Meeks returned to the jail in Burlington at the proper time. Meeks has addressed a letter to Governor Willson, stating that he will be in danger of a mob when returned to Boone county, and asks the Governor to furnish him a squad of soldiers for protection. If soldiers are sent here to prevent a mob they will be ordered to come upon application for them made to the Governor by the circuit judge. It is said that Meeks will ask the court to grant him a change of venue.

Hon. Ben Johnson, through the editor of the Kentucky Standard, requests exchanges to say to the people of Keutucky:

That persons have been misled by imperfect newspaper articles to believe that the United States is now returning to those who put in "substitutes" the amount paid for the substitutes. In the main this is not true. The act of February 24, 1864, authorized the President to levy a draft for additional troops. Under the levy or draft no section was to be called on for more troops, if that section had already furnished its proper quota of troops under former calls.

Under this call Mr. C. D. Pennebaker, an attorney at Washington, brought suit for Mr. Marshall of Pendleton county, this state.

The Court finally held that Marshall was entitled to have three hundred dollars returned to him, because the draft of him was illegal, his county, Pendleton, having furnished its full quota of troops. The Court held that sixteen other counties in Kentucky had at that time also furnished their quota. These counties are: Crittenden, Obio, Grayson, Butler, Green, Adair, Taylor, Casey, Jefferson, Grant, Monroe and Lincoln, and to them the law applies, three hundred dollars being the maximum amount which could be received.

Congress passed an act in February, 1868, to refund to each of those who had been illegally drafted, three hundred dollars, if they had furnished a substitute or turned the money into a commutation fund.

Other test cases are now being considered. Until they are determined favorably, no drafted man in Kentucky, outside of the seventeen counties will be paid.

[The above article is given for what it is worth, as it has been the understanding all along that certain persons in Boone county, or their representatives are entitled to the $300 in question as set out in the above article.—EDITOR.]

Among the stock bills printed at this office last week were those of Huey Bros. of Union, fine horse and jack; W. A. Murray, of Richwood, fine jack; Rabbit Hash Horse Co's. mammoth jack, and the splendid jack belonging to B. F. Bedinger, of Richwood.

Dr. Rouse has a large quantity of curiosities he brought from the south with him. Among them is a very handsome shell, a native of Panama, but which drifts to the Florida coast, where, upon them is placed a considerable value, and they are much sought after.

A New Precedent.

A new precedent in insanity cases has been set by William H. Holmes of Omaha, on trial for the embezzlement of $700. Although insanity is his sole defense, no alienists have been called, no one has testified to hereditary taints, and no mention has been made of brainstorm or exaggerated ego. The witnesses have all been ordinary citizens who have met him in everyday life. Sam Hoff, ex-sheriff and member of the legislature, testifies that he believes Holmes insane, because he wants a bath every day and is scrupulous about his dress. George Stryker, another ex-sheriff, says that Holmes would have "a roaring toothache evenings, but would be all right mornings," which, coupled with the fact that he turned out his gas in jail at 8 p. m. and went to sleep, though the rules allowed him to have it going till 9, proved madness conclusively. The only departure from the home-made brand of evidence was when Holmes' attorney argued that, as all the masters of music, art, literature and politics had been more or less crazy, Holmes must undoubtedly be so. One telling argument was adduced—the prisoner ate breakfast foods! However, remarks the New York Post, no one thought to point out the most conclusive proof of all, namely, that, if he had not been insane, Holmes never would have embezzled merely $700.

The Man We Envy.

In one of his plays, Bernard Shaw remarks that "the man with the toothache thinks everyone happy whose teeth are sound, and the poverty-stricken man makes the same mistake about the rich man." So it is with most things. One always feels that the thing one does not possess, or the thing one cannot do, is the one thing essential to happiness. The unsuccessful think the successful must be happy. The invalids think if they had health nothing else would matter. The laboring man thinks if he only had leisure he would be content. But, fortunately, happiness is not the prerogative of any class of people or station in life. No doubt some are gifted with a happier and more cheerful temperament than others, says the New York Weekly, but one's point of view is really largely a matter of habit, and the thing to do is to try and get into a habit of letting one's thoughts dwell on the pleasant things of life as much as possible and forget its worries as soon as may be.

"A nobleman who becomes the husband of an American heiress enters into the marriage with a proper respect for his bride. He does not crave the alliance because of the financial reasons, but because he is dominated by the overwhelming beauty and fairness of the American girl. He is carried away by her philosophy, her logic, her irresistible and fascinating mien," says an Austro-Hungarian visitor in Washington. Be-oo-tiful! But why, asks the Baltimore American, is it that only girls with the largest sort of fortunes have the peculiar brand of philosophy, logic and irresistible and fascinating mien ot appeal to the foreign aspirants for American wives?

It is inspiring to read that the Association of Master Plumbers is animated by the noble desire to mitigate human suffering and lessen disease by improving the standard of plumbing. The enthusiasm with which the average citizen greets this sentiment gets somehing of a jolt, however, with the further announcement that by giving the people sanitary plumbing the organization will be able to command prices that will pay its members for the good work they do. Dear, dear, and most of us thought we had been paying enough to secure that kind of work all the time!

Even the Arabian Nights contains nothing more gorgeously weird than the story which comes from Alabama concerning one Smith who ran half a mile to a doctor, his head fastened to his neck only by a shred of flesh. Smith might have toted his top piece much more easily had he sawed it entirely off and carried it in a bag slung over his shoulder.

A Philadelphia newspaper consigns Chicago to outer darkness because of the alleged fact that the Auditorium theater is to be pulled down. Before forming its opinions even a Philadelphia newspaper should get the facts in the case.

The Pennsylvania railroad has served notice on the steel trust to furnish it rails without blowholes. Holes are endurable in bread and cheese and lace insertion, but the present railroad traffic is so heavy that it leaves dents in rails that are spongy.

Mr. Whitaker is modest. The English fortune he seeks amounts to only $600,000,000. Few people attempting to collect a mythical chancery estate would give up a penny of their claims for such a sum.

THE REQUIREMENTS OF OUR FOREIGN DIPLOMACY.

COSTLY DISTILLERY BLAZE

PEORIA (ILL.) PLANT SUFFERS TO THE EXTENT OF $230,000.

Four Large Factories in Lynchburg, Va., Are Destroyed by Flames—Incendiarism Is Suspected.

Peoria, Ill.—Fire which started on the fourth floor of the elevator of the Corning Distilling company's plant at two a. m. Friday, did $230,000 damage to the building and contents, threatened all the other buildings and 3,000 cattle and proved one of the most spectacular blazes seen in years.

The "mill," or elevator building, is a six-story brick structure 150 feet square, in which thousands of bushels of grain are stored, and at the top of which is the machinery for grinding the corn and other grains for the cookers.

The blaze quickly spread to the other floors, and to the "still" house of the distillery proper adjoining. In this building are huge beer stills and the heat caused an explosion which set the roof of the beer tower, a hundred feet high, on fire. The burning beer on the roof of this building presented the novel spectacle of a huge green torch, the center of which was red from the burning timbers. As the tower burned down the colors changed and the outside of the torch became red and the inside a bright green.

Lynchburg, Va.—One of the most destructive fires in this city in 20 years occurred early Friday when four factories, three of them tobacco plants, and four negro dwellings were consumed, with a total loss of $225,000 and insurance of $175,000. The fire raged during a 20-mile wind and the firemen were powerless to cope with the blaze. The factory of the Norfolk & Western Overall company and three tobacco factories occupied by W. G. Dunnington of Farmville, in which more than a million pounds of tobacco for Austrian and Italian trade were stored, were the business buildings destroyed, the loss on the tobacco factories being $115,000, fully insured. It is believed that the fire was of incendiary origin. Dunnington is a heavy buyer in Kentucky, which gave rise to a report that "night riders" might have been concerned.

WEALTHY FARMER MURDERED.

Two Farm Hands Held for Crime in North Dakota.

Minot, N. D.—Gus Johnson, a wealthy farmer who lived five miles south of Kenmare, has been murdered and R. S. Noah and "Patsy" Coyle are in jail charged with the crime. Recently Johnson employed Noah to work for him and in a few days the latter reported in Kenmare that Johnson had gone to Sweden and had left him and Coyle, who proved to be an ex-convict, to run his farm in his absence. They commenced to sell grain and stock from the farm, and neighbors, becoming suspicious, made a search and found the dead body of Johnson, bearing unmistakable evidences of violence, in the cellar, where it had been pitched through a trap door.

Senate Gets Hill Nomination.

Washington.—President Roosevelt sent to the senate Tuesday the nomination of Dr. David Jayne Hill to be American ambassador at Berlin, Germany. The resignation of Charlemagne Tower, now at the post, has been accepted to take effect June 1. At that time Dr. Hill will assume his new duties. This statement, made at the White House Tuesday, is said to be taken as a happy ending of the Hill incident.

Killed in Peculiar Accident.

Philadelphia.—Henry Shepherd was killed by a trolley car Friday in one of the most peculiar accidents ever reported here. He was picking dandelions along a wall in front of one of the big country estates when a trolley car came along and jumped the track. The car ran into him, pinning him against the wall.

Riley Grannan Is Dead.

MANY MINERS QUIT WORK.

Quarter of a Million of Them Drop Their Picks.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Two hundred and fifty thousand picks dropped from the hands of as many bituminous coal miners of the United States Tuesday evening, not to be used again until a wage settlement has been reached and a scale adopted between the members of the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators of the various fields.

The situation, however, does not indicate prolonged strike. An open winter and industrial depression have left a large stock of coal on hand and the differences between miners and operators are very slight. It is practically agreed that the present wage scale will be continued, but some politics in connection with the change in the national officers of the miners' organization, and local differences between operators and miners have resulted in temporary suspension from work until a new wage scale is agreed to, either by districts or individual mines.

SEVERAL PERISH IN FLOODS.

Rivers in Virginia and West Virginia on the Rampage.

Elkhorn, W. Va.—The greatest flood ever recorded in the history of the Tug river and Elkhorn valleys, with the exception of that caused by the cloudburst of seven years ago, when a hundred lives were lost, now prevails. In 36 hours the rainfall registered three inches and the Elkhorn, Tug, Bluestone and other streams in Virginia and West Virginia are out of their banks.

Wednesday night along the Elkhorn many hundreds of families were camping along the mountain sides, their homes being inundated. Three lives were reported lost at North Fork, W. Va., and two at Keystone, W. Va. Bridges are washed away along the Norfolk & Western railroad and traffic has been suspended.

AGRICULTURAL BILL PASSES.

House Adopts Measure Carrying Total of $11,508,806.

Washington.—Carrying a total of $11,508,806, the agricultural appropriation bill was passed by the house of representatives late Thursday. The Democrats then began their threatened filibuster.

In executive session the senate confirmed the appointments of David Jayne Hill as ambassador to Germany, Spencer F. Eddy as minister of Argentina and Arthur M. Beaupre as minister to the Netherlands.

EVANS' PAIN IS ALL GONE.

Admiral Much Benefited by the Hot Sulphur Baths.

Paso Robles Hot Springs, Cal.—The physicians in attendance on Admiral Evans Friday issued the following bulletin:

"Admiral Evans feels greatly improved. He slept well during the night and all pain has disappeared. P. F. McDonald, M. D., L. E. Phillips, M. D."

The rear admiral said that he greatly enjoyed the hot sulphur baths.

Judge McAllister Dead.

San Rafael, Cal. — Judge Ward McAllister, son of the famous society leader of New York, died Tuesday at a local sanitarium from the effects of an operation for appendicitis.

For two years he had been a sufferer from paralysis, and in his weakened condition he was unable to survive long after the operation, which was performed last Saturday.

Oswego, N. Y.—Capt. Albert Laws of the Twenty-fourth United States cavalry was killed Friday by falling downstairs in his quarters at Fort Ontario. His skull was fractured and his brain lacerated. His home was in Eastern Shore, Pa.

Bay Rum Kills Two Men.

Detroit, Mich.—A special from Decatur, a town in Van Buren county, says Edwin Carney, Jr., aged 22, and James Mahoney, aged 38 years, are dead from drinking bay rum.

POINTS WELL TAKEN

INIQUITY OF PRESENT TARIFF RATES EXPOSED.

With Taxes of Over 100 Per Cent. on Articles of Necessity, Republican Leaders Still Refuse Necessary Relief.

In his speech against the Beveridge bill on the 5th of February, Senator Culberson established by facts and figures exceedingly important points relating to the present tariff law.

"The first is that the average ad valorem tariff tax is 45 per cent or more.

"The second fact is that the average tariff which we have now is far greater than the difference between the cost of labor in foreign countries and in this country. So, whatever a man may be, whether he be a protectionist or a revenue reformer, like myself, the fact stares him in the face that we have schedules now which go far beyond the difference between the cost of labor in foreign countries and in the United States.

"The third fact, which is indisputable, is that manufactured articles in the United States in a number of instances are sold in foreign countries under the present tariff at a lower rate than in America.

"The fourth fact, which is already established and in the minds of the American people, is that a protective tariff fosters and encourages the creation of trusts."

In spite of these four facts the Republican leaders refuse even to consider bills for revising the tariff, even to the extent of not considering the bill now before congress to reduce the tariff on all articles upon which the tariff tax is over 100 per cent. And there are many such instances, including those in the woolen and glass schedules, all articles of necessity. Think of it, necessities taxed by the tariff over 100 per cent!

How different is the position on the tariff of former Gov. Douglas of Massachusetts, who in his speech of acceptance when a candidate for governor said:

"Besides the effect of the tariff tax on raw materials, which affects the manufacturers, primarily, we must not forget or neglect, as the Republicans do, the interests of the consumers, of whom there are about 3,000,000 in Massachusetts. The motto of the Democratic party is, as I understand it, 'the greatest good to the greatest number.'

"Careful estimates show that the average tariff tax per family paid in 1903 was about $111 for the United States. Of this tax only $16.52 per family went to the government. Over $94 went to the trusts and other protected interests. It is probable that this tax for the benefit of trusts averaged $100 per family for the 650,000 families in Massachusetts, or $65,000,000 for the commonwealth.

"While it is impossible, as long as we obtain our revenue largely from tariff taxes, to prevent considerable salvage for the protected trusts, yet our aim should be to minimize this loss and to get into our treasury at Washington nearly every dollar collected from the people. There should be no tariff 'graft' for the trusts. This $100 tariff tax paid by each family should go for more and better food and clothing for our women and children, and not to increase the dividends on the watered stocks of the protected corporations. Our constant aim should be to reduce the cost of living and to increase the comforts and health of the people.

"It may not be possible to remove all of this heavy burden, but it is entirely possible to remove the greater portion of it. I propose to do my utmost to free our industries and our people from oppressive taxation.

"To accomplish this end I shall labor in season and out of season, and use whatever influence I may have to reduce the taxation on our materials and our food and clothing. I shall favor the reduction of these tariff taxes by revision of the tariff and by reciprocal treaties with Canada and other foreign countries."

But then Gov. Douglas has shown himself to be a statesman, and thus able to take a broader view of the plundering tariff than the Republican politicians can attain to.

Labor and the Battleships.

Senator Perkins and other advocates of the big stick and the big navy assert that at least 95 per cent, of the cost of a battleship goes to the laboring man. This is what logicians call a material fallacy, and what plain men call a lie. It is a subterfuge designed to make the people believe that they are the beneficiaries of the millions paid to the steel trust and its allies, the Cramps. The big fleet which has been sent to the Pacific is more likely to be used to subdue the people of San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, San Diego and other Pacific coast cities who object to the importation of cheap Asiatic labor, than against Japan. The greatest dangers to a free people are big navies and big armies. Military despotism, resulting from the overwhelming strength of armies and navies has destroyed republics since the beginnings of civilized government. The teachings of Christ and those of Mencius and Jefferson on this subject are instructive. Brute force is barbarism.

Tariff revision will be deliberate, says a Washington correspondent. In other words, congress will take its time about it. Unless, of course, the country should elect a Democratic congress and a Democratic president.

PROPOSED COMMISSION A SHAM.

"Non-Partisan" Body to Revise Tariff Is Out of the Question.

The specific tariff measure which the National Association of Manufacturers favor is the Beveridge-Steenerson bill, which provides for a non-partisan tariff commission to gather information, make suggestions, and guide congress in revising the Dingley schedule. This wonderful commission is to be appointed by the president, a Republican, with a view to carrying out his own Republican policies. The people who are urging it say that they are Republicans and protectionists, but assume that the poor, fleeced, abused, insulted, racked and ruined multitude will regard them as non-partisan and entirely disinterested, in spite of their confessions to the contrary. We assume that their proposition is both unconstitutional and inexpedient. It is unconstitutional because "all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the house of representatives," while the bill in question originated in the senate, and because it would have the effect of usurping the initiation of tariff bills in the hands of a commission "appointed by the president with the advice and consent of the senate," and thereby deprive the house of its prerogative in this vital matter.

This scheme is an attempt to take away from the representatives of the people the power of taxation secured to them by the constitution of the United States.

It is not only an unconstitutional measure, but a deceptive, hypocritical measure. Its authors and backers know that any commission appointed by a Republican president and confirmed by a Republican senate would be a Republican and partisan commission. They know that the question of high tariff and low tariff—the question of protection and monopoly—is a party question. They know that the Democratic doctrine is to take away monopolies, to remove the legal obstacles to wholesome competition now existing, and to get down as soon as possible to a system in which every tub shall stand on its own bottom, in manufacturing and commerce. They know that the Republican doctrine is the antithesis of this. They know that it is impossible to find any honest man who can be non-partisan on this question. And, therefore, they know that they are engaged in a huge bunco game.

Even if the bill should pass the courts will refuse to give it the effect designed by its advocates.

Fooling the People.

The Republican leaders have the tariff revision issue all fixed up to their satisfaction, with the evident intention of fooling the people again. No such dangerous method as a tariff commission is to be attempted, but the whole matter is to be within the keeping of the stand-patters of the committee on ways and means of the house of representatives and the finance committee of the senate. According to the New York Tribune, which is undoubtedly in the confidence of the Republican leaders, the tariff program is to be carried out by congress giving those committees authority to "hold sessions in the recess and conduct such examination into the tariff schedules as may be deemed wise in view of the approaching revision." This is the way the Washington correspondent of the Tribune understands the plans have been set up. President Roosevelt is to "contribute his share" of this Republican conspiracy for revising the tariff higher by detailing a committee of appraisers, collectors and "other treasury experts" to supply statistics and "suggestions."

That will be what the Republicans call revising the tariff by the friends of protection, and we have the assurance of Secretary Root and the other Republican leaders that the intention is to add to the present schedules maximum rates to be imposed on the products of those countries with whom no reciprocity treaties exist. What is the use of promises of tariff reduction if the revision is to be in the hands of those who would revise the tariff higher?

Republican Indicts His Party.

When you come to analyze it and think about it, Gov. Black's indictment of his party is as severe as it is true. Gov. Black nominated Roosevelt for vice-president at Philadelphia in 1900. He has been one of the national leaders of the Republican party for many years. Therefore, when he expresses an opinion of his own party that opinion may justly be regarded as a just and fair statement. Now, Gov. Black recently said: "We have seen . . . the independence of the courts, the fixed and salutary boundaries of co-ordinate functions, the guarantee of fair play, the scrupulous regard for the limitations of official power, all staggering under blows inflicted in the party name." And since all the blows under which these things are staggering have been rendered effective only because the Republican party has by a vast majority made them effective by its unqualified approval, surely the party is as rotten and reckless as its leader.

Nothing Doing.

It is not likely that either the Aldrich bill or the Fowler bill will pass at the present session of congress. One of them seems to be in the particular interest of Morgan and Rockefeller; and the other, of Carnegie. The people have no lot or part in either.

Why shouldn't our war vessels be constructed at government navy yards?

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

THE PART HE PREFERRED.

Subtle Meaning in Poet's Criticism of Decollete Costume.

Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras, is something of a recluse and rarely comes into San Francisco, but when he does he is made a good deal of a lion. On his last visit he was one of the guests at a rather formal dinner at a friend's house where he stayed overnight. His hostess had known the poet since her childhood, so she felt privileged, next morning, to discourse to him of the beauties of the Parisian gown she had worn the night before—beauties which seemed to have escaped his observation.

Mr. Miller listened to all that she had to say and remained silent.

"But didn't you really like the dress?" pleaded the lady.

"Indeed?" she said. "What part?"

"The part you had on," answered the poet; and that ended the discussion.—Lippincott's.

SKIN TROUBLES CURED.

First Had Itching Rash—Threatened Later With Blood-Poison in Leg—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"About twelve or fifteen years ago I had a breaking-out, and it itched, and stung so badly that I could not have any peace because of it. Three doctors did not help me. Then I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent and began to get better right away. They cured me and I have not been bothered with the itching since, to amount to anything. About two years ago I had la grippe and pneumonia which left me with a pain in my side. Treatment ran it into my leg, which then swelled and began to break out. The doctor was afraid it would turn to blood-poison. I used his medicine but it did no good, then I used the Cuticura Remedies three times and cured the breaking-out on my leg. J. F. Hennen, Milan, Mo., May 13, 1907."

Gentle Persuasion.

A young chap from the south, who recently took up his residence in Boston with the purpose of pursuing certain technical studies at the Hub, engaged board and lodgings at "a select establishment" in Columbus avenue.

It was not long after his installment therein that the southerner found himself obliged to complain to the landlady with reference to the noisy doings of some of his fellow-lodgers.

"The people in the room next to mine," said he, "quarrel in a loud tone regularly every evening much to my distress. What's the trouble, anyway?"

"Oh, you mustn't mind them," said the landlady. "That occurs very often, at least once a week. It's only Prof. Whitesides, the hypnotist, trying to persuade his wife to go to the band concert."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

When It Came to Raising.

"I hope, now that you've become a young wife," said the enthusiastic anti-race suicide lady, to the newly-wedded country girl, "you'll make good use of your blessing and raise many children.

"Wall," spoke up the rural husband, who had overheard this utterance and deemed it akin to interference, "a deal o' her time outside th' kitchen'll be put t' raisin' vegetables!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

FARMERS FLEE FROM FLOODS.

Residents of Towns Along Rivers Suffer From High Water.

Lexington, Ky.—According to reports received from the mountain districts, there has been great damage done by the flooded streams.

Much territory, embracing the lowlands along the Licking river, is flooded and farmers report extensive losses.

In Rowan county many farms are under water and towns along the creeks and rivers suffer greatly from high water.

The streams of Bath county are said to be higher than at any time in the last 20 years.

Salt[illegible] of Wyoming, river towns are partly under water and residents are going about in boats.

Many persons have moved their household goods to the upper floors of their residences. In Wyoming the water is four feet deep in the streets of the town. A sawmill and a large quantity of lumber has been washed away.

Cattle in the flooded sections of the state were removed before the sudden rise and the loss from drowning is light.

In Valley View water invaded many houses and many persons have taken what goods they can and have gone to adjacent hilltops. The flood is the worst experienced here in six years.

PLANT BED DESTROYED.

First Destruction of Tobacco in Davis County Is Reported.

Owensboro, Ky.—The first destruction of tobacco property in the Green river district occurred in this county.

The plant beds of Jacob Hardin, near Ensor, were heavily salted and a note was left on a stick in the bed warning him not to grow any tobacco.

The canvas was stolen from the beds of W. E. Whitely and Tom French and the beds trampled.

Twenty-Two Indicted.

Kenton, Ky.—Twenty-two night riders have been indicted here, 11 for murder in the Birmingham raid in which two negroes were killed. Seven have been arrested and are out on bond. One night rider killed in the Birmingham raid was buried on the bank of the Tennessee river. Citizens of Benton are armed for the protection of the grand jury and officers conducting the investigation. A raid on this town is expected every night.

Felix Feltner Pardoned.

Frankfort, Ky.—Acting Gov. Cox pardoned Felix Feltner, of Perry county, from serving two years in the penitentiary, having been convicted at Winchester two years ago for contempt of court during the $100,000 damage suit of Mrs. Abrelia Mareum against Judge James Hargis and others on the charge of attempting to spirit away Mose Feltner, Mrs. Marcum's star witness.

Panic Wrecked Them.

Lonisville, Ky.—There are 1,400 patients at Lakeland asylum, more than ever before in the history of the institution. This city, it is said, has sent more patients recently than at any other time. Most of them are business men, who became demented over financial reverses.

Negro Is Run Out.

Trenton, Ky.—There is no truth in the report sent out that George Tutt, colored, was taken from jail here by a mob of masked men. Tutt was sent to jail for carrying concealed weapons and when his sentence expired he was ordered to leave town.

Half of His Life Spent in Prison.

Frankfort, Ky.—After serving more than half of his life in the penitentiary here John Hunter, 45, a negro, was pardoned by Acting Gov. Cox. Hunter was convicted in 1886 under the habitual criminal act on the charge of stealing $13 from a drummer.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS

At Murray Was In Time To Prevent Outrages By Night Riders.

Murray, Ky.—Murray is under the guard of a mounted company of the Second regiment, hurried here on orders from Acting Gov. Cox. The troops are members of the Whitesburg and Middlesboro companies.

The soldiers were sent here on request of Judge A. J. G. Wells, it being reported that 150 night riders were forming at Kuksey and would attack the town.

The militia rode from Hopkinsville at double quick and the night riders failed to show up.

The town is quiet and the presence of the troops has relieved the high tension.

Every night for a week citizens of Calloway county have been whipped by night riders and women and children terrorized. The principal outrages were committed in the eastern part of the county.

NOT GUILTY,

The Aldermen Find Themselves in Graft Inquiry.

Louisville, Ky.—The board of aldermen received and adopted a report made by a committee of that body absolving its members of any degree of guilt in the matter of graft which was implied from editorial utterances of George A. Newman, editor of a republican newspaper. They found the intimation to have been based on idle rumors. The lower board, the council, considered a report from a committee of its membership in the same matter. The body split on the language of the committee report.

Blakey Second Assistant.

Frankfort, Ky.—Attorney General Breathitt announced that he had appointed Theo. B. Blakey, of Beattyville, as his second assistant attorney general, and that Chas. H. Morris, who was assistant to former Attorney General Hays, will be retained temporarily as the law clerk, provided for under the bill.

Looking To Indiana.

Louisville, Ky.—Local tobacco men have been distributing tobacco seed in Southern Indiana. They seek to increase the acreage in the counties across the river in the hope that the Indiana authorities will not permit such lawlessness as has been rampant in Kentucky fields.

Revenue Collections.

Louisville, Ky.—The total internal revenue collection for March, 1908, reached $1,286,161.70. This is a decrease from the record of March, 1907, which was a record-breaker, but it shows that the revenue on whisky and tobacco is picking up.

ALFRED VANDERBILT IS SUED

WIFE BEGINS AN ACTION FOR DIVORCE OR SEPARATION.

Papers Filed Just After the Multimillionaire Sails and Nature of Suit Is Not Revealed.

New York.—Within an hour after he had sailed for Europe Wednesday, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt was made the defendant in a suit filed with the supreme court by his wife, Ellen French Vanderbilt. The nature of the action was not immediately disclosed and counsel for the plaintiff refused to say whether Mrs. Vanderbilt seeks a divorce or legal separation from her husband.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was Ellen French, daughter of the late Francis Ormond French, president of the Manhattan Trust company and director of many railroads. Her mother has been abroad for several years but is returning for the wedding of her granddaughter, Miss Pauline Leroy French, to Alfred Vanderbilt, to take place at Newport on May 5. Ellen, or as she was more generally known, Elsie, French was married to Alfred Vanderbilt on January 31, 1901. A year later their only child, William Henry, was born.

Mr. Vanderbilt, as the second son of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, inherited something like $60,000,000. He has been regarded as the head of the family since the estrangement which followed the marriage of Cornelius, the eldest son, to Miss Grace Wilson.

The domestic affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have engaged public attention since March 24, when Mrs. Vanderbilt, accompanied by their son and maids, left Oakland Farm, near Newport, R. I., and went to the home of her brother, Amos Tuck French, at Tuxedo Park, this state. Much of the furnishings at the Newport home have been shipped to Tuxedo Park.

HOOSIERS NAME J. E. WATSON.

Republicans Put Him Up for Governor and Indorse Fairbanks.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Indiana Republican state convention Tuesday adopted a platform, indorsed Vice-President Fairbanks and instructed the 30 state delegates to the national convention at Chicago to vote and work for his nomination for the presidency, and nominated the following ticket:

For governor, James E. Watson, Rushville; for lieutenant governor, Fremont C. Goodwine, Williamsport; for secretary of state, Fred A. Sims, Frankfort; for auditor of state, John C. Billheimer, Washington; for treasurer of state, Oscar Hadley, Plainfield; for attorney general, James Bingham, Muncie; for reporter of supreme court, George W. Self, Corydon; for superintendent of public instruction, Lawrence McTurnan, Anderson; for state statistician, J. L. Peets, Kokomo; for judge supreme court, Fifth district, Quincy A. WATSON AND WILLIAMS.

Presidential Ticket Nominated by People's Party Convention.

St. Louis.—For president of the United States—Thomas E. Watson of Georgia.

The above ticket was nominated Friday by the People's party convention, after two stormy sessions, throughout which the Nebraska and Minnesota delegations, working in the interest of William J. Bryan, strove desperately to bring about an adjournment of the convention until after nominations had been made by the Democratic and Republican parties.

Hopelessly outnumbered and without any chance whatever of gaining their object, the Nebraska men fought desperately to the last, and when Jay W. Forest of Albany, N. Y., mounted the platform to place Watson in nomination, they withdrew from the convention, attended by the Minnesota delegation, which consisted, however, of only one man, T. J. Welghan.

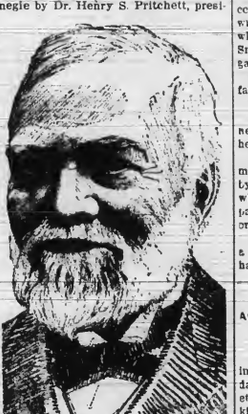
ADDS FIVE MILLIONS

ANDREW CARNEGIE INCREASES FUND FOR EDUCATORS.

IRONMASTER IS GENEROUS



Professors in State Universities to Receive Pensions from Foundation When Legislature and Governor Approve Application.

New York. — Announcement was made Friday night that Andrew Carnegie would add $5,000,000 to the fund of the Carnegie Foundation, or whatever sum might be necessary to include as pension beneficiaries eligible professors of state universities.

No provision was made for this class of educators in the original gift, for the reason, stated by Mr. Carnegie at the time, that the donor thought it possible that such institutions might prefer that their relations should continue exclusively with the state from which their chief support was derived. This view was not taken by the National Association of State Universities, which in the year following the establishment of the foundation petitioned the trustees for admittance to the benefits of the retiring allowance system.

Original Fund Too Small.

It was then found that the earnings of the original fund of $10,000,000 were exhausted through the outlet already planned, and that if the faculties of all state universities were to be benefited, an additional $5,000,000 would be required. The situation was placed formally before Mr. Carnegie by Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, on March 31 last, and on that same day Mr. Carnegie replied that the money would be forthcoming for any state institution whose application received the approval of the legislature and governor of its state. The additional donation will be in five per cent. bonds, providing an added annual income of a quarter of a million dollars, and a total for yearly disbursement of $750,000.

Andrew Carnegie.

Mr. Carnegie's Letter.

Dr. Pritchett Friday night made public Mr. Carnegie's letter promising the further gift and a statement regarding the action of the National Association of State Universities. Under date of March 31, 1908, Mr. Carnegie wrote to Dr. Pritchett:

"I beg now to say that should the governing boards of any state university apply for participation in the fund and the legislature and governor of the state approve such application, it will give me great pleasure to increase the fund to the extent necessary to admit them. I understand from you that if all the state universities should apply and be admitted five millions more of five per cent. bonds would be required, making the fund $15,000,000 in all.

"From the numerous letters I have received from pensioners and their wives and the warm approval of the press and public, I am satisfied that this fund is, and must be for all time, productive of lasting good, not only to the recipients but to the cause of higher education.

"Most grateful am I to be privileged as trustee of this wealth to devote it to such use. Truly yours, Andrew Carnegie."

ANGRY MOBS LYNCH NEGROES

ONE ATTACKED WOMAN; OTHER SHOT BOY DEAD.

Both of the Victims Are Taken From the Authorities and Each Makes a Confession.

Mobile, Ala., April 6.—Walter Clayton, a negro, who was serving time at the stockade of the Hand Lumber Co. for manslaughter, late Saturday afternoon attacked Mrs. Joseph White, aged 20 years, and was lynched by a mob of 75 men outside the limits of Bay Minette.

The attack occurred at the woman's home, six miles below Loxley. Clayton entered the house, it is said, and choked Mrs. White into submission. The negro returned to the convict camp, where he was arrested late Saturday night.

The negro told the officers not to take him back to the scene of the crime, as he committed it and it was not necessary to have him identified.

The officers hurried him to Bay Minette, county seat of Baldwin county.

As they approached the jail 75 men came from behind a fence and took the negro, dragging him and the deputy sheriff 75 yards before it was discovered that the men were handcuffed together.

The deputy was then released and the negro carried away. The negro's body has not yet been found.

Wesson, Miss., April 6.—John Burr, a young negro, was lynched near here by about 30 men for the murder of a 12-year-old boy.

Saturday night, according to Burr's confession and the story of an eyewitness, he was fishing in a mill pond when Earl Smith, the son of J. W. Smith, a planter, approached and began a conversation.

Burr was an employe of Smith's father, and he said to the boy:

"Look up; look at the bird."

As young Smith gazed skyward the negro shot him in the back of the head with a shotgun.

Burr threw the boy's body into the mill pond and fled, but was captured by officers and was on his way to jail when just as the Sabbath dawned a party of about 30 men took the prisoner away from the officers.

The negro was quietly hanged from a tree and several shots were fired to hasten his death.

SHOT DOWN

At Side of His Wife and Daughters By Unknown Assassin.

St. Louis, Mo., April 6.—While walking home with his wife and two young daughters Ries Speale, of 2621 Lafayette avenue, was shot and instantly killed at Chouteau avenue and Dolman street by an unidentified man, who was accompanied by two fashionably dressed women. Speale's assailant and his women companion fled and escaped.

The two women were singing snatches from a song, in which the daughters of Speale joined. This angered the man, who drew a revolver and fired one shot at Speale, the bullet entering his brain. He died a moment later on the sidewalk, while his wife and daughters stood horror-stricken. The two women screamed, but at a hoarse command from their companion they silenced their cries and fled. When Policeman Peeper, of the Soland street station, attracted by the shot, arrived he found Speale dead on the sidewalk.

Sheriff Killed By Negro Desperado.

Bristol, Tenn., April 6.—Taking the chance of winning reward money, Deputy Sheriff James Morefield, of Scott county, Virginia, was shot through the heart and instantly killed by a negro desperado near Speer's Ferry, Va. Morefield and a posse had located the negro and a companion, hoping to claim a reward of $300, offered by the West Virginia authorities, when Morefield met his fate at the hands of the negro for whom the reward had been offered. After firing several shots at the posse the negro escaped.

Summer Cottages Burned.

The Commonwealth writes the best and cheapest policy by far, and then you are helping a home institution. Keep this money at home, especially when you have as good security in policy and a more reasonable rate. Write or call on James R. Wallace at the Equitable Bank, Walton, Ky., and he will gladly explain the features to you of every kind of policy.

The elegant home of Capt. and Mrs. A. G. DeJarnette, of Williamstown, was the scene of a beautiful wedding last Thursday afternoon at half-past three o'clock, when, in the presence of about fifty relatives and friends, their youngest daughter, Miss Rita Marie, was united in marriage to Dr. John J. Marshall, of Crittenden. The bride, who is well known here, is an accomplished member of the Grant county bar, while the groom is a rising young physician of Grant county.

The handsome bride looked very tall and stately crowned in a princess dress of silk mousselin and lace and carried a large bouquet of lillies of the valley. The presents were numerous and handsome, consisting mostly of silver, cut-glass and china. The bridal party left amid a shower of congratulations, rice and old shoes for Cincinnati, Louisville and other points. After a short trip they will be at home to their many friends at Crittenden, Ky.

Last Thursday a most distressing accident occurred in Cincinnati whereby Geo. W. Arnold, 32, of Walton, lost his life. Mr. Arnold was a painter by trade, and was employed painting a building on West Fifth Street, near Plum, and while at work on the 4th story, in stepping back from the window ledge to the ladder missed his footing and fell to the pavement below, a distance of about 50 feet. His crushed body was hurried to the hospital, but he died before he could reach there to receive medical aid. Undertaker A. M. Edwards went to Cincinnati and brought the remains here Friday morning, and they were taken to the residence of his sister, Mrs. Everett Stephens. The deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Arnold, both long residents of this quarter, who died years ago. Mr. Arnold was popular with a large circle of friends because of his genial nature and kind disposition, and his sad death was the cause of sorrow among all of our people. He leaves two sisters, Mrs. Stephens, of this place, and Mrs. Marce Riddell, of Burlington. The funeral took place Sunday morning at 11 o'clock from the Walton Baptist church of which he was a member, a large attendance of sorrowing friends being present to attest their esteem of the deceased. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. S. M. Adams, who feelingly mentioned the good qualities of the deceased and applied the spiritual lesson to such a life. The floral offerings were very extensive and beautiful, coming from a large number of friends.

The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion, PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $5 discount on the two seasons—paying only $35 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $20 will be collected.

This Stallion is a Mahoghany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone County as his colts speak for themselves. A ring of this Stalion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

We will give a return season for the best colt, regardless of sex, the get of this Stallion of 1908, to be shown at the Harvest Time during the fall of 1909.

Care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur. Positively no business done on Sunday. Parties breeding must follow up the season.

A number of prominent citizens of the locality of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine saddle horses, associated themselves togetber as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20.00 to insure.

He has proved to be a fine breeder, and his colts will be ready sellers at fancy prices. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2 50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and keeping.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from breeding of 1908, the time and place of the show to be announced later.

Deputy Sheriff B. B. Hume went to East Bend, Monday, to arrest one Robert Craig, aged about 17, who had been behaving ugly the day before towards his father. When the officer reached the neighborhood the young man had fled to Indiana. The officer continued the pursuit of the fugitive to Indiana, where he overtook the young man, whom he convinced the best thing for him to do was to return to Kentucky and answer to the charge set out in the warrant against him, and about 7:30 o'clock that evening he delivered the accused to the jailer, who locked him up to await the action of the grand jury. Thomas Walton was also arrested for some misbehavior on Sunday, but he gave bond and was released. Mr. Hume says he came very near getting in company that day with Dick Walton, who, many years ago killed a man near Landing, this county. The man who was killed was named Craig and was a brother-in-law of Walton. Walton escaped from the county jail, since which time he has made himself scarce in this county, until within the last few years, when he commenced slipping into the county. His visits are becoming more frequent, and as he is disposed to be quarrelsome and inclined to make trouble, the officers will lay for him, and he may yet get several year's free board at Frankfort for his old crime.

Deputy Sheriff Hume went down in Indiana, one day last week, and arrested Ed Jump, an ex-Kentuckian, suspecting that he was the man who shot and killed the negro at the Q. & C station in Walton several months ago. The man filled the description of the fellow who did the shooting, but when taken to Cincinnati for identification by Mr. Schrump, who was conductor of the train on which the murder rode to Walton the evening of the killing, he said he was not the man and the officer released him.

Following is an account of the above transaction furnished the Cincinnati Enquirer from Lawrenceburg, Ind.: "Ed Jump, formerly of Boone county, Ky., was arrested last night, suspected of the murder of a man named Claidbosk, committed at Florence, that state, last June. Jump had up to within a few weeks of the murder been working near Florence, and the murdered man, it is said, undermined him of his job, which led to bitter quarrels. Shortly after the last quarrel the deceased was found dead lu the road near Florence with a bullet hole in his head. Since then the Kentucky authorities have been looking for Jume. He readily consented to return to Kentucky without extradition papers."

To Whom It May Concern:

Having seen in the Boone County Recorder of last week, a notice from the secretary of the Boone County Insurance Company, I wish to say that I being one of the class that is being discriminated against, and one who has enough to do to attend to his own private business affairs, without advising or directing what others may do or not do, and expect to continue on this line. I am one who helped to draft the rules and organize this company, and have always patronized it and worked for its success, and have been insured in this company almost from its foundation. I have been extremely fortunate never to have a fire or have cause to receive one penny in that time. But not wishing to criticize too harshly those who saw cause to cancel my policy, thinking they have a hold on possession of information that makes this company more secure with my policy cancelled. It is not necessary to know. I propose to manage my own business in my own way and to protect my property the best I can, rather than be dictated to as to how I shall manage my private affairs.
April 13, 1908. Z. T. KELLY.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, . . KENTUCKY.

Language and Nationality.

Since the beginning of history no nation which has not been saturated in all parts with one language has enjoyed a secure and peaceful solidarity: and subject nations and races have sometimes regained independence by preserving their mother tongue. Political divisions between the nations follow differences in language rather than differences in race or religion. One language may do for two nations, as in the case of Belgium and France, Austria and Germany, Great Britain and the United States. But two languages seldom subsist together in harmony inside one political unit. The Magyars of Hungary for years have protested against the use of German as the official language. Poland, politically divided into three parts under Russia, Germany and Austria, is united by the Polish language, and from the Polish point of view, no other act of the German government is so oppressive as the effort to impose the German language on Polish school children. The appeal of Henryk Sienkiewicz, the Polish novelist, in the name of literature, to intellectual persons in all countries for sympathy with the Poles who are being dispossessed of their language strikes deeper than politics, and has subdivided political camps. From these contentions in Europe a hopeful lesson can be drawn and applied to America, remarks the Youth's Companion. We are putting the children of immigrants through our public schools, blending them with the children of earlier immigrants through the great solvent of language. We do not force them as if they were conquered people; they yield willingly to the amalgam; it penetrates even the clotted ghettos and foreign colonies. The measure of Poland's fear of losing its tongue is the measure of our hope that by language, and all that it carries, we shall bring many races into homogeneity.

A vote of thanks is due the Wisconsin professor who says that our old friend the tired feeling which comes in the spring is not an acquired virtue but is the result of heredity. If it has been handed down to us from our forefathers, who acquired it through much patient endeavor, anyone can see that we are not to blame. Still, we think more of our ancestors because of this discovery. Evidently they were human, remarks the Chicago Daily News, and not mere stern, busy automatons, as we have been taught to believe, who never relaxed but were busy chasing work throughout the livelong day and part of both ends of the night. Besides, we can the more readily resign ourselves to the pleasure of being lazy in the spring when we know that we couldn't help it if we tried.

The British mint has been turning out copper coins at the rate of four tons daily in an attempt to cope with the famine in pence in London and the provinces. This stringency always becomes most acute toward the end of each quarter. The explanation is very simple. Nearly all the English gas companies have adopted the penny-in-the-slot system of selling gas. The automatic meters are emptied at the end of each quarter. The popularity of this system of supplying illumination is shown by the fact that during 1907 pennies weighing 1,336 tons were taken from the meters in London belonging to the Gas Light and Coke company. This means an average of 400,000 pennies a day.

The railroad companies are obeying the new laws passed for their regulation. Reports from 99 per cent. of the railroad mileage of the country have been received by the interstate commerce commission, giving the information about their operations called for by the Hepburn law. One or two of the largest companies put the nine hour rule in operation before March 4, the day after which the employment of railroad men more than nine hours a day is forbidden.

Much is said about the large number of American novels published annually, as if they constituted the chief output of the publishing houses, but people who like other classes of books need not feel discouraged. In 1907, for example, the fiction list shows 1,171 titles, but religion and theology came second, with 876 titles. It is not necessary for anyone to read novels for the lack of other literary productions.

Fifty Persons Injured and Four Are Killed—Terrific Gale Carries Myriads of Sparks to Scores of Wooden Buildings.

Boston, April 13.—At an early hour Monday morning the ruins of the burned district in Chelsea were under guard of 14 companies of the state militia and marines from the Charlestown navy yard and the city was under martial law to prevent looting. The soldiers were supplied with ball cartridges.

An apparently insignificant fire, which started among rags on a dump in the city of Chelsea Sunday, was fanned by a northwest gale into a conflagration which obliterated nearly one-third of the city.

Five hundred dwelling houses and public buildings were destroyed, 1,500 families were driven from their habitations and 10,000 persons made homeless.

Two lives are known to have been lost and at a late hour Sunday night it was reported that two others had perished, one a woman, having shot herself in a frenzy over her inability to save her property. Perhaps 50 were injured.

As accurate estimate of the loss is impossible. The city solicitor estimates it at nearly $10,000,000.

The fire, which was the worst Greater Boston has known in many years, raged before a 45-mile gale for more than 12 hours, defying the utmost efforts of the combined fire departments of Chelsea and several near-by cities and a large detachment of Boston firemen and apparatus.

The fire area, which was in the form of an ellipse, a mile and a half long and half a mile wide at its broadest part, extended diagonally across the city from a point near the boundary between Everett and Chelsea to the waters of Chelsea creek.

It was useless for the firemen to attempt to check the onrushing flames before the gale, and their main efforts were to prevent a spread of the fire on either side.

Their last stand was taken at Chelsea square late in the afternoon, and for hours a doubtful battle was waged.

At 9 o'clock word was passed that the firemen were winning, and with renewed energy the contest was pressed.

At 10:50 o'clock official announcement was made by Chief H. A. Spencer that the fire was under control.

The majority of the buildings were of wood, and were completely destroyed, but structures of other material were almost as quickly and thoroughly incinerated by the fierceness of the blaze.

All the banks, more than three-quarters of the churches, half of the business blocks and nearly all the schoolhouses were wiped out.

One hospital and a day nursery were destroyed.

In the turmoil many of the sick and infirm found difficulty in obtaining assistance and several of them had narrow escapes.

Late in the afternoon the wind bad carrier burning embers across Chelsea creek and buildings in East Boston caught, but extensive damage there was prevented by prompt and energetic work by the firemen.

GARBED AS MEN,

Mother and Daughter, With Latter's Lover, Commit Numerous Thefts.

Bridgeton, N. J., April 13.—A woman appearing in men's attire proves to have been one of the daring burglars who have been doing much work and causing so much alarm in Bridgeton recently. The mystery has been cleared up and householders breathe much better. Harry Blizzard and Mrs. Elizabeth Parsons were arrested for stealing from the Arctic Ice & Milk Co., and were caught with the goods by Detective Frank J. Lore, who got a signed and corroborated confession from the man stating that he and Mrs. Parsons had robbed about 40 places with the assistance of the latter adopted daughter, Mamie, aged 18, within the past few weeks. Both women wore men's clothing to avoid detection, and mother and daughter entered many of the houses with him. Blizzard is about 25 years old and was infatuated with the girl.

FIERCE RIOT IN PENSACOLA

IMPORTATION OF STRIKE BREAKERS CAUSES BATTLE.

Street Car Men from St. Louis Are Attacked and Fifteen of Them Are Beaten.

Pensacola, Fla.—The bringing of a carload of strike breakers from St. Louis Friday afternoon by the Pensacola Electric company was the signal for rioting and disorder which resulted in the injury of 15 of the imported men.

No sooner had the strike breakers arrived and started for the car sheds than a fight occurred between them and the sympathizers of the union men and from the corner of Palafox and Wright streets, where the first battle occurred, there was a continual riot in which bricks, bottles and shells were hurled at the strike breakers, and in turn the latter fired shots and used heavy sticks and bricks. For over an hour the riot continued, the strike breakers gradually getting nearer to the car barns, but before they reached there 15 bad been wounded.

When near the car barns, so fierce was the onslaught on the body of imported men, that they separated and fled, 30 running into a negro's house, while the remainder reached the car barn and barricaded the doors. The 30 men in the house barricaded the doors and it took the police over an hour to disperse the mob and remove the men to places of safety.

All night there were great crowds on the streets.

The mayor has issued a proclamation closing all saloons and the board of public safety has ordered the marshal to swear in a sufficient number of deputies to quell the disturbance.

Seventy strike breakers were marched to the city jail, where they were kept in safety all night.

Benjamin Commons, vice-president of the International Association of Street Railway Employes, made an address, urging the strikers to disperse and go to their homes quietly.

BAD FLOODS IN SOUTHWEST.

One Man Killed and Traffic Impeded in Missouri.

Joplin, Mo.—One man killed, railroad traffic impeded, cave-ins on the electric and St. Louis & San Francisco lines near Joplin and mines in the Badger-Peacock district inundated, are some of the features of the flood that is sweeping southwest Missouri. Levi Sevier, a miner, was drowned in the Iroquois mine.

Near Monett, the overflow from Spring river washed out the St. Louis & San Francisco tracks and trains are delayed. The tracks of the Missouri Pacific are washed out near Granby. Portions of Carthage are inundated. The big dam of the Spring River Water company at Varck, Kan., is holding its own against the great volume of water that is pressing against it.

OFFERED MONEY FOR MURDER.

Serious Evidence Against Thomas McGonnigle and Mrs. Burnett.

Richmond, Mo.—In the trial here Friday of Thomas McGonnigle and Mrs. Jane Burnett, accused of the murder of Mrs. Margaret McGonnigle, Thomas Bailey, 21 years old, son of a farmer, said that in 1907 Thomas McGonnigle offered him $150 if he would kill Mrs. McGonnigle. Bailey said he refused to do so, and that McGonnigle then threatened to kill him if he revealed what he had said.

Mrs. Fannie Davis testified that Tom McGonnigle and his sister, Mrs. Burnett, had offered her $50 to kill Mrs. McGonnigle. Thomas, she testified, had fixed a bottle of wine with poison in it to give to Mrs. McGonnigle, but witness had destroyed the wine. Then they wanted her to shoot Mrs. McGonnigle, she testified, and leave the revolver and a hat at the house to give the impression that a man had killed her. At another time they gave her some poisoned cake to give to her. Mrs. Jane Burnett, the witness said, had told her that she would kill Mrs. McGonnigle.

DETROIT JURY IS SCORED.

Judge Angered by Acquittal of Self-Confessed Murderer.

Detroit, Mich.—"This is one of the vilest miscarriages of justice that has ever been heard of in this community," said Judge Phelan in the recorder's court Thursday afternoon, when a jury found 18-year-old Percy Bowin of Woodville, Ont., not guilty of the brutal murder on January 7 of 63-year-old Mrs. Cornelia Welch, proprietress of a disreputable place on Congress street east which Bowin had frequented.

Bowin had admitted his guilt and made a detailed confession of how he killed the old woman and stole and pawned her diamonds. This confession, signed by Bowin, was placed in evidence. Then Bowin took the stand and repudiated it absolutely, saying that Capt. McDonnell induced him to make it by talking of the strong case against him and promising to help him to a pardon later. This the captain and other officers denied absolutely. The police offered a great deal of evidence to confirm the statements in Bowin's confession.

STRANGE CAREER IS ENDED.

Dr. J. S. Cabanne of St. Louis Dies in an Asylum.

St. Louis.—After a career ranging from respect and affluence to poverty and disgrace, Dr. James Shapard Cabanne, 69 years old, founder of the fashionable residence district known as Cabanne place, died Tuesday at St. Vincent's asylum.

For 25 years Dr. Cabanne lived a dual life in St. Louis, maintaining one home in Cabanne place, where he was known as a wealthy and successful physician, and in another in North St. Louis, where he was known as "Mr. Norris."

Mrs. Cabanne divorced her husband in 1904. Soon afterward he lost his money through unfortunate speculation. Last May, as an act of reparation, he wedded Della Doherty, a former domestic in his household and the mother of four of his children, who with these children lived in the "Norris" home in North St. Louis.

TO SUPPRESS "REDS"

SPECIAL MESSAGE ON ANARCHISTS FROM PRESIDENT.

ADDITIONAL LAWS NEEDED

Senate Passes Employers' Liability Bill Without Change — House Makes Progress Despite Democratic Filibuster.

Washington. — Suppression of anarchy as the greatest question before the nation was called to the attention of congress by President Roosevelt in a special message. The executive submits what has been done under existing statutes, but says there should be further legislation.

The anarchist is declared the enemy of all mankind and no paper, published here or abroad, propagating anarchism should be permitted to circulate in the mails, the president says.

This message, containing only about 100 words, is one of the shortest Mr. Roosevelt has transmitted to congress. With the message he transmitted a report reviewing the legal phases of the question by Attorney General Bonaparte.

Message of the President.

The message of the president follows:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives: I herewith submit a letter from the department of justice, which explains itself. Under this opinion, I hold that existing statutes give the president the power to prohibit the postmaster general from being used as an instrument in the commission of crime; that is, to prohibit the use of the mails for the advocacy of murder, arson and treason.

"I shall act upon such construction. Unquestionably, however, there should be further legislation by congress in this matter. When compared with the suppression of anarchy, every other question sinks into insignificance. The anarchist is the enemy of humanity, the enemy of all mankind, and his is a deeper degree of criminality than any other. No immigrant is allowed to come to our shores if he is an anarchist; and no paper published here or abroad should be permitted circulation in this country, if it propagates anarchistic opinions.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Senate Passes Liability Bill.

The employers' liability bill, recently passed by the house, was passed by the senate Thursday without amendment, so that it is ready to go to the president for his approval.

The scope of the bill is limited to common carriers by railroad. The senate adjourned at 5:50 o'clock until Monday.

House Busy, Despite Filibuster.

Three times in the house the Democrats caught the Republicans "napping" and forced them to produce a quorum. On one other occasion a vote by tellers disclosed the absence of a quorum but Speaker Cannon peremptorily applied the Reed rule and declared a quorum to be present. In doing so he had a brief but lively clash with Mr. Williams.

Notwithstanding repeated roll calls, progress was made in the transaction of public business. Both the army and the fortifications appropriation bills were sent to conference; the senate bill to increase the efficiency of the revenue cutter service was, with Democratic help, passed, and the bill to promote the safe transportation in interstate commerce of explosives was considered. It will be finally disposed of Friday.

The Democrats prevented the adoption of the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill and caused it to be sent back to conference.

EVANS YIELDS TO DOCTORS.

Will Not Undertake to Rejoin Fleet at San Diego.

Paso Robles, Cal.—Rear Admiral Evans will not rejoin the battleship fleet at San Diego or participate in any of the functions and celebrations in the ports of southern California.

That has practically been determined upon. The rear admiral was told Wednesday morning by Dr. P. F. McDonnald, surgeon on the Connecticut, that it would be very inadvisable for him to undertake to rejoin the fleet at San Diego. Admiral Evans stated that he would submit to the judgment of his physician, although it will be a bitter disappointment to him.

Calls for Paper Trust Facts.

Washington.—Wednesday's session of the house will go down as one of the stormiest in its history. The sum total of the day's proceedings was the adoption of several additional rules to further check the Democratic filibuster and the passing of the two resolutions introduced by Speaker Cannon calling on the department of justice and the department of commerce and labor for certain information regarding the so-called paper trust. The naval appropriation bill was reported to the house.

Money Troubles Lead to Death.

New York.—Charles A. Murphey, a prominent lawyer and real estate dealer, committed suicide in a room in the Astor house some time Thursday night by shooting through the head. His suicide is attributed to financial troubles.

Cut in Freight Rates Ordered.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—The state board of railroad commissioners Friday ordered reductions in freight rates in western South Dakota ranging from ten to 43 per cent.

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lena V. Henry, of Norristown, Ga., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered untold misery from female troubles. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death.

"One day I read how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I was better, and now I am entirely cured.

"Every woman suffering with any female trouble should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

The Wrong Tense.

Dorothea's father was sitting before a window in his country house with Dorothea on his knees. He was looking across the fields with unseeing eyes, when the lassie broke in on his reverie with, "What are you looking at, papa?"

"I was looking into the future, my dear."

"The future, papa! I thought it was into the pasture!"—Harper's Weekly.

Too Free Speech.

The allegations made during a trial for "blasphemy" raises the whole question of courtesy and kindliness in public discussion. Ridicule and sarcasm are permissible, and effective weapons in debate, but mere vulgarity and abuse or irreverence in dealing with subjects that are sacred to others, are not to be confounded with free speech and cannot be tolerated.—Lloyd's (Eng.) News.

A Counter Stroke.

A stylishly-dressed woman entered a Chinese laundry and paid for a laundered shirt.

"Why do you wear those 'tats,' I think you call them, in your hair?" inquired the Chinaman, who had an inquisitive turn of mind.

"Tush, Mr. John," replied his customer. "I always thought it was Chinese etiquette not to talk about the things they like best."

LOST $300.

Buying Medicine When Right Food Was Needed.

Money spent for "tonics" and "bracers" to relieve indigestion, while the poor old stomach is loaded with pastry and pork, is worse than losing a pocketbook containing the money.

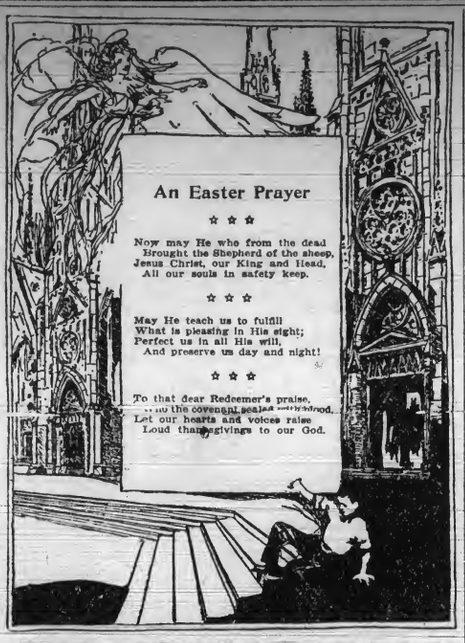
A Mich. young lady lost money on drugs but is thankful she found a way to get back her health by proper food. She writes:



"I had been a victim of nervous dyspepsia for six years and spent three hundred dollars for treatment in the attempt to get well. None of it did me any good.

"Finally I tried Grape-Nuts food, and the results were such that, if it cost a dollar a package, I would not be without it. My trouble had been caused by eating rich food such as pastry and pork.

"The most wonderful thing that ever happened to me, I am sure, was the change in my condition after I began to eat Grape-Nuts. I began to improve at once and the first week gained four pounds.

"I feel that I cannot express myself in terms that are worthy of the benefit Grape-Nuts has brought to me, and you are perfectly free to publish this letter if it will send some poor sufferer relief, such as has come to me."

HER EASTER

A Sermon Delivered Out of Doors by Mother Nature

EASTER in the foothill country, among the low-lying valleys, with the white-capped, blue vastness of the mountains in the background, and all the endless variety of sunshine and shadow! Divine, indeed, with the divinity of spring. The very smallest and sweetest of the early wild flowers bloomed in the sheltered places, and the quail nesting on the hillside, called melodiously across the valleys. Meadow larks rippled their melody of tune under foot, and the long absent lizards sunned themselves luxuriously on the rocks.

It was as though, after the mighty throes of travail Mother Nature hushed upon her breast, with the brooding of tender motherhood, the blessed Child, as yet too young for its full uncovering.

It was a day to revive old loves and longings, and to arouse the fires of old passions—to let slip from you discontent and all uncharitableness. And over all the quiet of the morning the bells pealed their "Christ is risen," and the tremor of their echoes thrilled you to your finger tips.

Mrs. Chester dressed herself slowly and with much deliberation, that Easter morning. The gauzy spring gown lay, in all its dainty fluffiness of laces and ruffles and tucks, upon her bed. Beside it lay the dainty hat and gloves and the creamy parasol which was to cast just the right tinge of white over the piquant face of the pretty little woman who was to carry it. A tiny, tiny lace handkerchief lay over a bit of a purse, wherein was the gleam of gold; and a great bunch of mammoth violets filled the room with their fragrance.

She was as a bride who arrayed herself for the coming of her bridegroom—and of this she thought, but a quick frown gathered on her brow, a worried little frown which lingered until the final settling of the dainty hat upon the fluffy dark hair finally drove it away.

The bells again rang out their "Christ is risen" as she stepped from the door. She paused a moment, then, turning, walked rapidly around the house, beyond the pepper trees, across the rose garden to where, in a stately row, the great white Easter lilies lifted their heads to drink in the beauty of the morning. A little terrace led up to them, and upon this she stepped daintily, one hand grasping the little niceties of her toilet—the white gloves the bit of lace, the pocketbook wherein were the pieces of gold to be dropped, with a musical jingle, from tiny fingers into the contribution basket; the dainty skirts and the furled parasol. With the other hand she broke off the long-stemmed lilies, raised them caressingly to her cheek, whiffed their fragrance, and stepped back. Her foot slipped and turned on the forgotten terrace, there was a little cry, as she fell, with all the snowiness of her garments about her, and the violets and the Easter lilies upon her breast.

She lay quietly a moment, dazed and sickened by the suddenness and pain of the fall. She tried to move, but warning pains shot up in the foot doubled under her. Then she called and waited, and called again; but nobody answered. Again she waited, then she became drowsy and a faintness stole upon her. The bells rang out: "I am the resurrection and the life" over and over again. Then all was still. Faint sounds began to force themselves upon her dull ears—the drip, drip, drip of the hydrant into a stone basin, the rippling note or two of a meadow lark, the fainter song of a mocker, as he gave the gossip of the bird world from the topmost tip of a eucalyptus tree; and always the hum of the bees, so persistent that drowsiness came with it. Also she saw the low, spreading house, with its pillared verandas, rose-embowered, a beautiful home, hers and—his. Her slow mind stopped again. Hers and his for all time—"till death do us part"—"for better, for worse"—"in sickness or health . . . . to love . . . and honor . . . and cherish." Yes, to cherish. So they had promised—they two, standing alone together, in all the solemnity of the marriage rites. But somehow the sweetness had gone out of it all; the love; or was it the comradeship? And who to blame? Not he. No, not he. Herself? She shook her head uncertainly. Mostly it was "duties," she said. Oh, yes, all of one's duties to society—church duties; club duties; social duties; and she shivered. Here they all were, in pointed caps, with little silver spurs on their feet, with which, when she lagged, they prodded her, with these and pointed tongues of uncharitableness. Presently behind them all she saw the figure of her husband, his eyes upon her lovingly; but ever and again they turned sorrowfully upon the group about her, and as often as he would approach her, she was pushed back; he could not reach her for the harrier of Duties which stood between them.

The woman wept, she tried to brush them all aside, for to her terror her husband seemed to recede and recede and she was unable to reach him. In an agony of remorse and grief she stretched out her arms. Then from among the Easter lilies came a fairy shape—a tiny child. A moment it nestled on her breast, then it advanced and as it advanced, the Shapes drew away, grew fainter, and were gone; and the tiny thing, leading the man by one brown finger, brought him to her. Was it only Cupid, the little god of love, or was it the spirit of the little child which some day might come to dwell with them? The woman held out her arms and clasped them both and held them to her.

When Mrs. Chester roused herself from her swoon, or dream, or whatever it was which held her bound, it was to find her heart throbbing with a new hope and joy and longing; and she wondered whether or not she had dreamed, or had been the privileged listener to an Easter sermon preached out of doors by Nature, Nature who was now in her most blessed mood.

Through the open windows of her home came a low cheery whistle. She pressed the Easter lilies to her lips in a passion of joy. In some way she felt that she owed them something—a deliverance from something, and in the depths of her religious soul she cried: "This is the resurrection and the life," even as the bells had said it—while her face was baptized with tears.

It was so that her husband found her, on that most blessed Easter day, when the sun stood high over the valleys, and spring brooded over the foothill country.—Edna Heald McCoy, in Los Angeles Herald.

Something New to Wear.

The idea of having a new frock and hat for Easter Sunday is not altogether flippant. On the contrary, it is of religious origin, an old English rite requiring that every person should wear three new articles on that day and a superstition which declares it unlucky not to do so.

LICENSED TO ROB

WHAT TARIFF DUTY MEANS TO STANDARD OIL TRUST.

Congressman Kustermann One of Those Who Seem to Have Seen the Connection — Democratic Attempt to End Monopoly.

Hon. Gustav Kustermann, who represents the Green Bay district of Wisconsin, has endeavored to enlighten the public in a speech in congress about the amount of the tariff protection the Standard Oil trust has been granted by the benevolent Republicans. Like many other novices who seek to discover the intricacies of protectionism, he jumps at erroneous conclusions and then tries to force his errors upon the public. If it was not that he appears to have imposed on our good and great statesman Theodore Roosevelt, instead of confining himself to the Republicans in congress and those of his Republican constituents — perhaps [illegible] deceived, it would hardly be worth while to set him straight on the tariff question.

In his speech he admits that himself and other Republican congressmen and speakers have declared "that the Standard Oil Company, the greatest and greediest trust in the world, had no protection." He gives the reason for this as ignorance of the tariff, but says: "It came in handy when we wished proof that there was no connection between tariff and trusts. It served its purpose and silenced those who were constantly attacking the tariff." Finding that the voters were no longer to be fooled by these evasions of the connection between the tariff and the trusts, he now admits, what has always been claimed by the Democrats, that the Standard Oil trust is protected by a tariff duty of "in some cases 100 to even 200 per cent.," as Mr. Kustermann declares, under the proviso in paragraph 626, although included in the free list.

As a means of escape from this prolonged attempt unintentionally to deceive the people, as Mr. Kustermann declares, he now charges that the same paragraph was in the Democratic tariff in 1894 "and our people overlooked it." If "our people overlooked it," why did they increase the duty so enormously? He must know, however, for he says he has made "a thorough study of the tariff," that instead of the Standard Oil trust being protected by from 100 to 200 per cent., the Democratic tariff expressly provided that "there shall be levied, paid and collected upon said crude petroleum or its products so imported, 40 percentum ad valorem." As refined petroleum was then worth in Russia about six cents a gallon the ad valorem rate would he but 2½ cents a gallon, instead of "in some cases 100 and even 200 per cent," as Mr. Kustermann now declares the tariff duty to be. Congressman Rainey of Illinois, in a speech in congress on February 13, gave official and statistical proof of the Democratic contention, which can be found in the Congressional Record of that date on page 2056. In justice to Mr. Kustermann it must be said that he has introduced a bill to repeal this tariff protection to the Standard Oil trust, but he evidently should know that our Republican congress will give it no consideration.

But after all Kustermann is a blind man leading the blind—President Roosevelt as well as other Republicans—for it is reported in a Washington newspaper that the president "has become much interested in the question of the tariff on petroleum," and has secured a copy of Mr. Kustermann's address.

What the president needs is not the Kustermann speech but Congressman Rainey's speech, for the former tells but half the truth, while the latter exposes the whole infamous transaction which has allowed the Standard Oil trust to plunder the American people, while at the same time selling its oil to other countries for much less than it charges here.

Bogus Civil Service Reform.

President Roosevelt is undoubtedly a civil service reformer, when it suits his purpose, but he does not seem able to control the spoil-mongers that he politically associates with. For instance, Col. Cecil A. Lyon of Texas, a personal and political friend of the president and head of the Republican organization, is alleged to have been assessing the federal office holders of that state five per cent. of their salaries. What is done with the money is not stated. It is certainly useless when applied to elections there, for the Democratic majorities seem larger than ever. It must he demoralizing to the public service to have most of the federal office holders so at the beck and call of one man that they feel compelled to pay these assessments on their salaries, and leaving out the political corruption that it naturally leads to, for the good of the public service President Roosevelt should admonish his friend to put a stop to it. There is no doubt that the practice of assessing office holders is prevalent in other states, but in Texas it is declared to have been done openly and flagrantly, such as the boasted civil service reform under "the party of great moral ideas."

Rotation in Office.

President Diaz of Mexico says that it is a sentiment of Democracy that their officers should he often changed; and that when a man has accepted a powerful office for a long time, he is likely to regard it as his personal property. Diaz must have been reading Jefferson's works, or Clayton's resolution, and then thinking of Roosevelt's boom for a third term.

HOW GET FOREIGN MARKETS!

Situation Shows Failure of Republican Policy of Protection.

The New York Journal of Commerce the only financial and business paper that is independent of Wall street and trust influences, thinks that American mills should seek foreign markets. It quotes the opinion of a manufacturer in an executive and practical way with one of the largest industries in this country, who said that only by entering into the competitive business abroad could it be hoped to prevent one of the most trying, cruel and disastrous periods that labor has experienced. "The public have not yet begun to appreciate the severity of the labor outlook," he continued. "They hear of the hundreds of thousands of workmen of all kinds being out of work in the great cities, but they do not begin to realize the situation and the prespects at the woolen manufacturing centers, for instance, throughout New England. What is needed are foreign markets to act as a regulator or insurance for the home market."

But how is the American manufacturer to overcome the high tariff rates that foreign countries impose on American products in retaliation for our high tariff duties imposed on their products? Virtually only the English markets are open to our wares, and even the British colonies, such as Canada and Australia, now impose tariff protection to protect their own manufacturers. Every country but England has a tariff wall around it and the United States has the highest tariff wall of all, with the possible exception of Russia.

To seek foreign markets for our surplus products under such conditions is a thankless task, for our manufacturers would have to offer their goods for a price that with the tariff rates of other countries added would be less than the price the manufacturers of foreign countries sell for. We cannot compete with England, for her manufacturers have free raw materials and lower cost of living for her workmen, and thus lower wages and cheaper cost of production than the manufacturer of the United States has.

The sad state of affairs that the Republican policy of protection has produced, both for the manufacturer and the workmen, cannot be mis-bettered by the trusts and tariff-protected industries selling cheaper abroad than here, because after all but little international trade can he accomplished between those who want to sell and refuse to buy. If we want to sell to foreigners, we must buy of them as a general proposition. No country can afford long to pay gold for foreign products, except for raw materials which it resells as finished products. The protected interests here must abide the conditions they have created, and nothing but reforming our own tariff with free raw materials and other reductions that will allow our workingmen to live cheaper will force open foreign markets for our surplus products.

As long as the business boom was on everything was lovely for awhile, but now the breakdown has come we are helpless under the inelastic workings of the Republican policy of tariff protection.

The Republicans now propose a tariff commission to investigate the tariff abomination, but as that farseeing statesman, former Governor Douglas of Massachusetts, has lately said:

"While this commission will be slowly prosecuting its investigation the tariff trusts will continue to plunder the helpless consumers and will raise a campaign fund that will almost insure the re-election of stand-patters and defeat the revisionists. Instead of this program of delay, I would have a president who would call an extra session of congress to revise the tariff immediately and radically.

"The proper time to get rid of something bad is right now. Nor do I believe in compromising with an evil and in agreeing to abolish it piecemeal—say ten per cent. a year—when it is possible to get rid of it at once. If I have an nicerated tooth that should be extracted, I do not want it pulled by installments, so that the process will last several hours or several days; I want the agony of the separation to be as short as possible. I also want to get relief from the bad tooth as soon as possible."

A Few Booms.

All kinds of presidential booms are afloat. There is the boom for "the man on horseback;" the boom for "the big stick;" Uncle Joe's boom "in song;" the Bryan boom; the negro boom for Foraker; the boom of the cocktails for Fairbanks; the boom for Gov. Johnson; the Knox boom, that is backed by the trusts and the railroads; the Hughes boom, that is helping the Knox boom; the Harmon boom in Ohio; the Douglas boom for Democratic principles—equal rights to all and special privileges to none; the Culberson boom for a southern leader; the boom for Senator Daniel, who would restore the constitutional rights of the states, which are being subverted by centralization. It is safe to predict that those booms will best survive which stand for principles and not personal advantage.

Queer Republican Politicians.

It is rather singular that Mr. Frank Hitchcock should feel bound to give up a lucrative office in order to become an active Taft political manager, while Taft himself holds on to a still more important and lucrative office, and yet spends his entire time traveling and electioneering. Who pays Taft's salary? Why should anybody consent to pay it? He is not at work for the public, but for Taft alone.

NAVY TOWNS PROJECTED

BASES ON COASTS PLANNED TO UPHOLD SERVICE.

Enlisted Men Would Be Given Opportunity to Purchase Homes on Atlantic or Pacific Coast.

New York — Navy department officials have under consideration a project for the establishment on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of what will be known as home bases for the fleets, where enlisted men would be given an opportunity to purchase homes and where the ships would call at regular intervals.

Establishment of such a community on Staten Island is likely, in the opinion of many naval officers, and this is believed to have had much to do with the visit to New York the other day of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Truman H. Newberry, who sailed along the Staten Island coast, presumably looking for a site suitable for the establishment of one of these proposed navy villages.

For many years navy officers have advocated creating home ports to increase the attractiveness of the service and to bring about a much-needed increase in enlistments. Before the departure of the Atlantic fleet for the Pacific ocean the enlisted strength of the navy was far below the requirements of the service. Then came the announcement of the long cruise and its many ports of call and entertainments by foreign countries. This increased the enlistments, the result being that when the fleet sailed the strength of the service was nearer the authorized maximum than it had been in years.

It will be necessary soon for the department to do something to keep the thousands of well-trained men in the service. This, the officials believe, the establishment of home bases will accomplish.

Rear Admiral Burwell, commandant of the navy yard in Puget sound, is said to have interested a number of prominent Pacific coast men in the project of establishing such a community there. A large plot of ground may be purchased near the Puget sound yard, where the enlisted men will be given the opportunity of buying lots and erecting homes for their families.

OMAHA MUST PAY $6,263,295.

Appellate Court Decides Water Works Case Against City.

St. Louis.—The United States circuit court of appeals, sitting in St. Louis, handed down an opinion Tuesday ordering the case of the Omaha Water Works company against the city of Omaha, Neb., remanding it to the United States district court, where it was tried, with the instruction that the case was to be so decided that the city of Omaha must purchase the water works system of the Omaha Water Works company, paying for it $6,263,295.49.

This amount is the appraised value of the Omaha water works by the three engineers appointed to determine the value to the city. Judge Hock wrote the opinion which was concurred in by Judges Adams and Garland.

"OPEN SHOP" ON GREAT LAKES.

Vessel Owners Adopt Policy of Ignoring Unions.

Cleveland, O.—The "open shop" policy will be adhered to by vessel owners, in the operation of boats upon the great lakes this season. A stand of this character in dealing with organized labor was unanimously agreed to at the annual meeting of the Lake Carriers' association here Thursday.

The rule will he put into operation at once and will affect upward of 40,000 men. Whether the plan adopted by the boat owners will be opposed by the various unions is unknown. None of their representatives was present at the meeting.

Iron Chain Deal Invalid.

Lincoln, Neb.—Dr. E. C. Spinney of Chicago must pay back the sum of $7,800 received from the Iron Chain, a Minnesota organization. So declared the supreme court in a decision rendered Friday. Dr. Spinney is at the head of a fraternal society, the Bankers Union. This organization took over the Iron Chain in 1901. At that time the home office of the Bankers Union was located at Omaha. The Nebraska court holds that the purchase of the Minnesota society was not valid.

After he made a full confession he was taken to the courthouse yard, a rope placed around his neck, a horse driven from under him and he was left hanging.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The April term of the Boone Circuit Court convened Monday with Judge J. W. Cammack, of Owenton, presiding. Sheriff Wingate and his deputies, Cropper and Hume, had everything in readiness for starting the wheels of justice to revolving. The following gentlemen, good and true, had been summoned for the purpose of organizing the grand jury: W. T. Davis, R. L. Huey, Scott Chambers, B. T. Kelly, Robt. Moore, Jas. W. Kite, George Hafer, James E. Botts, Hubert Clore, Edgar Berkshire, W. H. Griffith, John H. Aylor, R. W. Allen, Henry Phipps P. J. Allen, J. J. Cleek, (Union), W. R. Ronse, J. C. Miller, J. C. Hankins, H. G. Cropper, P. P. Neal, Jas. Popham, John Smith, Jr., John H. Jarrel.

After this term of the court, the jurors who are summoned and answer to their names when called the first day of the term will receive $2 for that day although they may be excused from service. This ought to have been the law all the time, as under it no one is required to lose the day as heretofore.

Mrs. Callie Baldon is keeping the record for her brother, circuit clerk James A. Duncan.

There was nobody in jail for the grand jury to investigate.

The term will extend into next week.

The grand jury was organized before noon, Monday, and given a comprehensive instruction by Judge Cammack. The jury is composed of the following gentlemen: J. E. Botts, foreman; W. T. Davis, R. L. Huey, B. T. Kelly, Robert Moore, Geo. Hafer, Hubert Clore, Edgar Berkshire, John H. Aylor, Henry Phipps, P. J. Allen, James Popham.

Several witnesses were present Monday before noon to go before the grand jury. They were summoned last week.

Judge Cammack is never better pleased than when there is plenty of work to keep him busy.

The petit jurors for the term are as follows:

No. 1—Sam Petit, R. C. Gaines, B. C. Graddy, O. V. Kelly, Geo. Gordon, H. D. Brady, Owen Beemon, W. L. Gaines, Jas. W. Kelly, Jas. W. Cleek, A. B. Corbin, Kirb Tanner.

The following steps have been taken in cases on Commonwealth and the common law dockets:

Two prosecutions against Silas Lampkin, set for trial on the 11th day of the term.

G. G. Hughes vs. A. M. Acra, suit for damages, set for trial today.

W. H. Iliff vs. A. H. C. Miller, set for trial on second day of next term of the court.

Mary Adams vs. L. & N. Railroad, suit for damages for personal injuries, set for trial on the ninth day of the term.

Myron Green vs. Louis Dolwick; Winifried Coal Co., vs. Rudolph Kreuger; The Burley Tobacco Association vs. V. W. Gaines, all continued.

Commonwealth's Attorney F. C. Green is not attending court this week, he being in St. Louis, Mo. He will be here next week to look after the State's interest.

The following attorneys have been and are attending court: Hon. W. W. Dickerson, Hon. John S. Gaunt, Thornton Snyder, John L. Vest, O. M. Rogers.

Esq. Solon Early, of Petersburg, was the only justice of the peace who reported any funds in his hands belonging to the State.

The petit jurors were discharged yesterday at 4 o'clock until next Monday, when the court expects to start them for a week of hard work.

The suit of S. S. D. Rice vs. Charles Bachelor, was tried yesterday and a verdict returned in favor of Bachelor. Rice got a verdict in the lower court.

Yesterday appeared to be Big Bone day up about the court house.

Judge Cammack will adjourn court today until next Monday. He will hold court at Owenton, Saturday.

Following is a brief synopsis of the new school law passed by the last legislature:

Each county in the State shall compose one school district, except where a city or town maintains a separate school. The county Superintendent, county judge or county attorney to divide district into 4, 6 or 8 educational divisions, which divisions shall be divided into subdivisions. One trustee to be elected in each subdistrict on first Saturday in August. They with the superintendent will constitute the county board of education which shall employ teachers. A high school is to be established at each county seat to furnish free tuition to rural pupils. A first-class high school to maintain a four years' course of study. The fiscal court can levy a tax not to exceed 25 cents on the $100 and $1 capitation tax for school purposes. The county board of education has power to purchase, lease or rent school sites, to build, to repair and to rent school houses, purchase maps, globes, charts, school furniture, etc. The county board of education will employ and fix the salaries of the high school teachers and prescribe the course of study to be pursued, and select the text books to be used in said school. The county superintendent shall keep an exact account of the receipts and disbursements and shall report the same in detail to the county board as often as it may require and to the fiscal court annually.

Story Told All in Esses.

Simeon Sykes, silver seller, strayed slowly southward, steadily seeking satisfactory sales, soberly sauntered, swinging satchel, systematically showing solid silver spoons, sugar shovels, small sized salvers, superior spectacles, scissors, sewing shields. Somber skies sent soft showers, soaking Simeon's satchel, shoes, stockings, shirt, skin.

Suddenly something seemed softly saying:

"Sweet Sally Slater, Simeon soon shall see."

Simeon soon saw sundry stately sycamores spacious shelter; spied Sally, sitting solus sewing silk stockinette, slying snuffing sweet scented Scotch snuff. Sudden surprise siezed Sally's soul, seeing Simeon's swift strides; Sally's sanctity soon skeddadled shamefully.

She, somewhat sensitive, suspiciously started, suddenly spilled some snuff, soiled stockinette, stammered, stuttered, said "S-s-seat, s-sir."

Simeon shivered, shook, said, "Smart shower."

Sally said, "Slightly so."

Simeon's shins seemed sore; so Sally sought some soothing salve (Sawyer's), supplied some soft soled slippers.

Sally said: "Sold some silver since Sunday, Simeon?"

Simeon scolded savagely.

Sally suggested supper.

"Sartin, Sally!" said Simeon; "something sufficiently strengthening. Some strong stimulant.

So Sally sent some sausage, sirloin steak, savory stew, some soothing sangaree.

Simeon's stomach seemed satisfied; so Simeon smoked several "Spanish segars," stupefied, soon slept, snored sonorously.

Sally, sitting, solemnly stitching stockinet, suddenly sneezed! Simeon started—seemed scared—suspiciously surveyed surrounding space, shutters, shades; seemed secure.

Sally stopped sewing, said she saw something slyly sneaking, stealing Simeon's silver.

Simeon, slightly susceptible, seemed suddenly smitten, sought Sally's side, sacrilegiously surrounded sanctimoniously Sally Slater's smooth symmetry. Simeon said: "Sweetest surely such solitary souls should sympathize."

Sally stopped Simeon.

Simeon seemed snubbed.

She seemed sorry, showed some softening symptoms, supinely sought Simeon's sturdy shoulder, sh! sh! sh! Sim smacked Sally! So straightway surrendering she smacked Sim!

Simeon said: "Set some suitable season." Sally said "September." Simeon, shrugging Sim's shoulder, said: "Sooner! Surely Scripture sanctions such strong sympathy; say Sunday."

So Sally succumed.

Seven supernal seasons softly, silently slipped somewhere. Seven small scions sprung, successfully, shedding sunshine, singing, shouting, seldom sick, squalling sometimes, still sweetening Sally's solitude. So, succeeding summers serenely spent. Simeon's seven stalwart sons seized soldiers' swords.

Simeon still sells silver, supplying substantial substance.

Mrs. H. W. Ryle, of Erlanger, who underwent a dangerous surgical operation at her home in Erlanger, one day last week, is improving nicely.

B. B. Hume bought a handsome horse of Edgar Graves, of Bullittsville, yesterday. The only information in regard to the price is it was a long one.

Dr. Frank Sayre, of Hebron, came over, one day last week, and purchased a toppy saddle horse of B. B. Hume. The price is private, but it is known that it involved a considerable bunch of filthy lucre. It is said that the doctor is delighted with his purchase.

W. C. Weaver, and Master Lloyd and H. W. Rouse caught a considerable string of nice fish in Gunpowder, last Thursday. The catch consisted of bass, suckers and other popular varieties. These people can catch fish when other persons can not get a nibble.

The two and a half miles of pike between Limaburg and Constance have come through the wiuter in good condition—in fact that road is in about the best condition it has ever been, which is a testimonial to somebody's management—Harvy Tanuer's it is presumed.

Clyde Berkshire, the local fruit tree man, made a spring delivery of fruit trees in [illegible], last Thursday. Mr. Berkshire has the credit of being one of the best fruit men in this part of the county, and makes large sales annually, of fruit trees and ornamental shrubbery.

Grover and Cleveland Snyder went to Erlanger, last Thursday night, to rehearse with the brass band at that place. Grover handles the bass and Cleveland the Cornet. They are both good and will be a considerable acquisition to the band if they become regular members of the organization.

The Union Creamery had some nice monthly statements printed at this office, last week. The business of the institution has increased constantly from the opening day, and the stockholders are delighted with their investment. The output of the creamery has established a splendid reputation that is increasing the demand for it.

The State Board of Equalization has given this county a 5 per cent increase on lands and personal property. May 12th is the day set by the board for hearing the county's protest against the increase, and county Judge Cason will appoint a committee to be headed by assessor Ben Lee Cleek, to go to Frankfort and show the State Board the error of its way.

Chas Garnett, the Kidville auctioneer, purchased a pair of handsome three-year old mules of W. J. Rice, of Burlington, last Thursday. Mr. Garnett has been anxious for some time to own a pair of mules, and came down with a good, long price for the mules, which pleased his fancy the first time he saw them. Mr Rice owned the mules only a few days.

The late date at which the Boone county delegation will be given a hearing before the State Board of Equalization, will delay Deputy Sheriff W. D. Cropper very much in the preparation of his 1908 tax books. Heretofore he has always been ready to receive taxes so soon as they were due, but he may not be ready by that time this year, taking his books as an entirety.

Bills were printed at this office, last week, for Star Wilkes and Jim Wilkes Jr., the very excellent horses of H. C. Fisk, of Florence. Star Wilkes has a mark of 2:24¼ and Mr. Fisk believes he will lower it to 2:15 this season. Jim Wilkes, Jr., has a record of 2:23½, but has worked his mile in 2:17. These two horses are the best steppers the county has, and are admired by all who desire to breed for extra fine drivers.

An effort will be made to have Burlington rural mail route No. 2 so changed as to go from W. C. Weaver's down Gunpowder creek to the W. P. Sullivan mill, then southward to the old James Aylor residence which is on the present route. It is said that this change will add very little distance and will be a great accommodation to several who now have to go quite a distance to their boxes, besides adding new boxes.

Farmer Hack Walton, who is engaged tickling the soil of a fertile farm about two miles below Petersburg, and in the suburbs of Gasburg, was in Burlington, last Thursday, and received a considerable load of fruit trees, with which he will put out quite a large orchard with a view to combining horticulture with agriculture. He has developed very much the appearance of a first-class farmer, in which vocation he is making good.

Everett Walton, who, a few weeks ago landed back on Kentucky soil and in the neighborhood where he first saw the light of day, after an absence of many years has put himself in training for a year's activity in farm pursuits, but "through sympathy" for the Equity movement he will not indulge in the pleasure of cultivating any of the weed. His spare hours will be devoted to the propagation of fine poultry by way of the incubator route.

John Baldon, who had been in Denver, Colorado, since last fall, blew in last Thursday, looking hale and hearty. He left his wife, who is in Denver for her health, feeling quite well, while Master Kenneth is attending a good school. Mr. Baldon is one of [illegible] who thinks there is no place like K[illegible] tucky, notwithstanding the many sad[illegible] for which she has to account. He has a host of friends here who are rejoiced to have him with them again, and there is no question but what he is glad to be in their midst.

Since the arrival of the balmy, spring like weather, there has been a very considerable increase in the volume of mail matter received by the local base ball magnate, Herbert Kirkpatrick. Numerous teams are seeking dates with the aggregation which he will lead this season, and he will endeavor to accommodate all of them. He has some new material in his 1908 line-up, and expects to develop a few wonders this year if he is not disappointed in them, and he generally knows a valuable man when he sees him.

By order of the State Central Committee, the Sixth District Executive Committee and the Republican Executive Committee of Boone County, a mass meeting of the Republicans of Boone county is hereby called at Burlington April 25th at 1 p. m. for the purpose of sending six delegates to the Sixth Congressional District Convention, May 4th, at Covington, and to the State Convention at Louisville, May 6th; also for the purpose of electing a new County Committee, and such other business as may properly come before it.

Dr. Y. Frank Hopkins, of Rabbit Hash, has decided to seek another location on account of the continued ill health of his wife, which he thinks is agravated by local climatic conditions. The doctor is very popular with the people in that part of the county, both as a man and a physician, and the thought of his departure causes a general gloom in the community where he has been such an active citizen for so many years. He is now taking a special course in the treatmentof diseases of the eye, ear and throat, which, when completed, will make him one of the best equipped physicians in this part of the State.

Among the devises in the will of the late Isham G. Hamilton is one of $300 for the benefit of the old cemetery at Burlington. Two-thirds of the income from this amount is to be used annually to keep up the cemetery while the other one-third is to be added to the principal. He gave to Mrs. J. O Revill and Miss Louvenia Runyan $500 each; to the Presbyterian church at Olintonville, Bourbon county, $100; the remainder of his estate to the children of his sister, Mrs. Allen, Geo. H. Allen to receive $5.000 more than either of the others. The estate is supposed to be worth between $25,000 and $30,000, nearly all in bank stock.

Big creeks interfered with the work of the rural mail carriers again last week. If that class of postal service is to be continued many miles of public roads will have to be moved from the beds of creeks, while several new bridges will be necessary. The public may as well make up its mind to that effect right now.

William Kirkpatrick, of Hopeful neighborhood, a hustling dealer in livestock, was among the out-of-towners who showed up in Burlington, last Thursday. THE WIDOW'S POT OF OIL

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Scripture Authority—2 Kings 4:1-7.

SERMONETTE.

The little we have used as God directs will always multiply for future needs.

Suffering and trouble accomplish a blessed ministry when they cause man to look upward and give God the chance to reach down his helping hand.

It is ever true that man's extremity is God's opportunity.

David said: "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." The widow did not have to beg. God always provides an honorable way of supplying our need.

God's gifts are only limited by the room we provide to receive them.

The last vessel marked the limit of the widow's faith and measured the flow of the oil. She obtained from God only what she had provided room to receive.

It is our capacity to receive and not God's ability to give which determines how much of blessing both temporal and spiritual we shall receive.

The empty vessels of the neighbors is suggestive of the world's poverty in helping the needy soul. Plenty of empty vessels, but nothing to nourish and satisfy. Such alone God can supply.

Again the empty vessels may suggest how much God depends upon the help of others in doing his work. The widow must exhaust the human ability to help before God could begin to do his part.

It is only the empty vessel for which God has need. Suppose, now, that the widow, whose poverty and need undoubtedly were known, had been offered vessels full of various things to eat, and being content with the possessions in sight, she had not let faith look toward the blessing which God had to give, thnnk how much she would have missed. But is it not so with us? We take the vessels filled with the world's offerings and have not room for that greater blessing which God would give.

The widow in her need turned to God first and then to her neighbors. How often in our troubles we reverse the order, exhausting every human appeal for help before seeking God and his blessing.

The godly life of the departed father was the best legacy which he could leave to his wife and two sons. The pathway of faith which he had traveled pointed out the way they should go in time of need.

The devil, like the creditors of this poor widow, is standing waiting before the heart's door, eager to seize upon its dearest treasures, but there is nothing to fear as the soul looks up and knows that Jesus has paid all the debt.

THE STORY.

IN A certain village in the land of Israel in the time of Elisha the prophet there lived a widow and her two sons upon whom a great trouble had fallen. She was in debt, and the next day the creditor was coming to drag her two sons into bondage because she was unable to pay him the money that was due him, for it was a law in Israel that the creditor was entitled to claim the person and the children of the debtor.

Only the day before the widow had been to the house of the creditor, and, falling in anguish at his feet, had implored that he wait yet a little longer and she would try to pay the debt. But he had turned a deaf ear to her pleading and with brutal bluntness had told her that on the morrow he would come to take her boys to be his bond servants.

Broken hearted and discouraged she had returned to the little hare cottage. It was a dear spot to her, for there she had lived with her husband and sons for many years. The husband and father had belonged to the priestly order, and although in the low spiritual condition of the nation he had had hard work to secure a living, still by careful managing and subsisting on the plainest and coarsest of food they had managed to get along. Then had come the great sorrow into the home, the death of the husband and father, and with their only means of support gone they soon found themselves in sore straits, and gradually heavy debts had accumulated until now the creditor was about to take her sons into bondage to satisfy his claims.

"Only one more night," she thought, tearfully, as she gathered her two boys about her and tried to tell them as gently as possible that they must leave her on the morrow.

"But we don't want to go, mother. Why can't we stay with you?" exclaimed the older boy, while the younger brother clung with his arms about his mother's neck and sobbed as though his heart would break.

"Because, my son, the creditor will wait no longer for the money we owe him, and the law of Israel gives him the right to take thee to satisfy the debt."

"Then it's a bad law," cried the younger boy, lifting his head from his mother's shoulder and stopping his sobbing.

"Hush, my son, you must not speak thus, for it is the law which Moses by the command of God gave," was the mother's gentle rebuke.

"But doesn't God care because we have to leave you? Doesn't He know that it is cruel?" demanded the boy, almost fiercely.

"Yea, God knows all things," replied the mother, quietly; "but we must not blame the God whom thy father feared and served."

"But if God knows, will He not help?" persisted the boy.

"Yes," spoke up the other boy, eagerly, "did not our father bless us in the name of his God as he lay dying, and did he not say that God would care for us?"

"Yes," whispered the mother.

"And won't He?"

"Yes," again whispered the mother. She could not say no, for her boys must not know that she doubted her God, and yet doubt was in her heart that God would or could help her in the present extremity.

Long after the boys had fallen into a troubled sleep she sat thinking. Her "yes" kept ringing in her ears, and the consciousness that she had not turned to God in her trouble as she should have done grew upon her and made her feel guilty and uncomfortable.

"I will seek the prophet Elisha," she exclaimed at last. "Perhaps he will hear and be able to help in the name of his God."

Rising in obedience to the thought, she went softly to the door, lest she should wake the sleeping boys, and, opening it quietly, passed swiftly out into the night.

The light was just breaking in the east when she returned. The boys were still sleeping, and she went and stood over them. A new light of hope and cheer shone in her face as she looked down upon them and exclaimed joyfully, over and over again:

"I shall not lose them! I shall not lose them! I shall not lose them!"

But there was much she must do. The prophet had said to go and gather all the empty vessels she could borrow, and she must obey. Hastily calling her sons she sent them forth in one direction, while she went in another.

"Empty vessels! Who ever heard of such a request?" exclaimed the neighbors. "Had the poor widow gone crazy?"

But back and forth, back and forth, apparently unconscious of the wondering looks of her neighbors, passed the widow and her sons with the empty vessels—pots and jars and basins and all manner of dishes—until the bare floor of the little cottage was quite covered.

"What can she be going to do?" was the question being asked on every side, as the neighbors gathered in little groups and talked of the widow and her troubles. And as they saw the creditor coming to take the boys they shook their heads and said:

"I have come for the boys," bluntly, almost brutally, spoke the creditor, as he followed the mother into the house after one of her many trips. "Where are they?" he exclaimed, wrathfully, as a glance around the little bare room told him that they were not there, and then, as his eyes fell upon the motley array of empty vessels scattered over the floor, he laughed derisively, and said:

"Hast thou traded them for these? 'Tis hut thy folly, for they belong to me."

"Nay but I would have one parting word with my sons," the widow exclaimed, unabashed, and as at that moment the two boys came laden with other vessels the creditor felt reassured and, with the condescending air of one who is sure of his quarry, he stepped without while the widow closed and barred the door.

The moments dragged themselves out until it seemed to the creditor standing without that it had been hours. Angrily pounding on the door at last, when his patience would no longer brook delay, he demanded that the two boys come forth.

In response there came a glad cry from within as the widow exclaimed:

"They are all filled!"

"All filled! What does it mean?" exclaimed the creditor. "Not the empty vessels! Filled with what?"

But at that moment the door was flung open and there within was revealed to the astonished gaze of the creditor and those gathered about, the vessels filled with the fragrant oil. "Now I will pay thee," cried the widow, joyfully, and my sons shall go free."

Get Busy.

Real Prayer.

In souls filled with love the ambition to please God is real prayer.

An Easter Revelation.

WHAT a wonderful beautiful story
Is mutely proclaimed to-day;
How the hope of the world and its glory
End not 'neath a mound of clay!

THE palms and the Easter lilies
Crooned 'round the chancel rail,
The roll of the organ, all breathing
Of the love that cannot fail.

THE peeping germ of the orchards,
The whirr of the waking bees,
The promise of bloom in the lilies,
The glimpse of green 'mong the trees.

Do you something within us—preaching
For a promise clear and plain—
Prove stronger than Sensuous teaching
That we sleep to wake again.

A LESSON

How, by God's Way, Which Is Not Our Way, Easter Spoke Its Old Message of New Life

IT was a sad Easter for Mrs. Farnham. Three times since the lilies last blossomed had death come to her house. Her mother, her husband and her boy had filled her heart. Lacking them, it was empty, and it ached with a strange perplexed grief, a confused question as to the purpose of her life, which now seemed to her a shrunk and withered thing.

She went to church on Easter morning because her beautiful house was intolerable to her, rather than because she expected to find comfort. The masses of white flowers, with the suggestiveness of their heavy fragrance, carried her back to the funerals of the last year. The familiar words of the service sounded like mockery to her.

"Let us keep the feast;" "Even so in Christ shall all he made alive;" "Set your affection on things above, not on things on earth." One by one she caught at the phrases, only to find each was powerless to help her.

The hymn was no better:

The strife is o'er, the battle done;
The victory of life is won!

For her strife was just beginning, and defeat instead of victory seemed her fate. She could not lift herself out of her personal woe far enough to apply the words to anything but herself.

She left the church, avoiding speech with any one, and, with her heart like ice in her bosom, she took an electric car toward her desolate home.

A half block before her house was reached the car stopped with a suddenness which startled the passengers. Mrs. Farnham got off, thinking that she would walk the few remaining steps; but she saw the motorman with a white face raising a small boy in his arms from under the fender of the car. The little fellow was unconscious, and there was an ugly bruise on his temple and a deep cut on his neck. Before Mrs. Farnham realized what she was doing the child was carried into her house, and she was enlisted with the doctors in a fight for his life.

For a week the issue was doubtful. Consciousness flickered and wavered, but would not come back. Meantime Mrs. Farnham had learned that the boy was nobody's child. He had sold papers since he was hardly more than a baby. He had lived wherever he could find a shelter, and had eaten whatever he could get. The fact of home was something he had never experienced. The grieving woman forgot her grief in her devotion to the waif who had been cast at her door by the strange decree of what we call accident.

The day came when the boy's heavy eyelids lifted and his childish curiosity at his surroundings unloosed his tongue. To open to him the doors of new life was the most wonderful of joys for his foster-mother. After his long silence it was as if he had come back from the dead. That he could talk and laugh and eat and love seemed like a proof of the power of life over death. Somehow Mrs. Farnham came to believe that it was such a proof, and that it was sent to her in her desolation.

Out of the boy's almost fatal accident there was wrought for him the miracle of home and love, and the opportunity for an educated and useful manhood, and for the grieving woman the springtime brought new hope as the lonely winter passed. By God's way, which is not our way, Easter spoke its old message of new life.—Youth's Companion.

The Eastertide's Lesson.

Since our existence is divided into two sections, the one under the temptations and sufferings of this present life, and the other that which is attained in the security and joy of eternity through Christ, so the circle of the Easter festival is divided into two sections, the time before and after Easter. The time before Easter points us to the conflict of this present life, the time after Easter to the blessedness which we can obtain through Christ. The Lord's passion shows us the present life of suffering. The resurrection and glorification of the Lord shows the life which we shall receive.

Custom Not Christian Alone.

The giving of eggs at Easter is derived from the old nature worship, and is not confined to the Christian nations. The Parsees of Persia and India distribute eggs at the opening of spring, and in many other nations the giving of eggs at the commencement of spring is as common as New Year's gifts with us. In Hungary the boys sprinkle the girls with rose water and receive eggs in return.

BOON FOR TOURIST

TRAVEL NOW MADE POSSIBLE IN LAPLAND.

New Luxury Supplied During the Three Summer Months—Only Railroad in the Polar Circle—Built to Carry One.

A new itinerary is offered to the bored globe trotter. It is now possible for him to travel in Lapland, the land of the midnight sun, in a sleeping car. This luxury, however, is supplied only during the three summer months when tourists may be enticed to cross the polar circle and travel for 270 miles on the only arctic railroad yet built.

This is the railroad that was first pushed north of the arctic circle to carry the iron ore of Gellivara down to the Baltic for shipment to Germany and England. A million tons of ore is hauled down to the port of Lulea every year, and much of it is stored there in winter awaiting the steamers that come when navigation opens.

Within a few years the polar road has been extended 200 miles west of the Atlantic, where the ice free port of Narvik has been built.

All passenger trains on one of the lines to the City of Mexico stop at a monument near the track, on which is inscribed in Spanish "The Tropic of Cancer." Everybody gets out to see what the tropic looks like.

So trains on this arctic railroad halt in the middle of a peat bog, where a board stands erect bearing the word "Polcirkeln." The surroundings of the polar circle at the point where tourists see them are quite disappointing.

But there is much worth seeing at the thriving town of Gellivara, and on the mountain near the town the midnight sun is visible from June 5 to July 11, or for 37 nights. It is the boast of the people of Gellevara that the midnight sun may be seen from their town for a longer time than at any other reasonably accessible spot on the earth.

This is doubtless true. The polar circle has about the same position relative to Gellivara that it has to the Endicott mountains in Alaska, but the railroad makes it much easier to reach this Lapland town than any other spot where the midnight sun may be seen to equal advantage.

The most remarkable object that the traveler sees on the trip to the Atlantic is Mount Kirunavara, 2,550 feet high and nearly two miles long. About 70 per cent. hy weight of its rock is iron.

In time the whole mountain will be dug away and there will be a very deep hole where it now stands, for it is all the richest kind of iron ore; and there is estimated to be about 233,000,000 tons of it. The big mining town of Kiruna has grown up beside the iron mountain and six long trains every work day carry the ore to Narvik.

Across the Lapland moors the scenery is monotonous, but it is of the finest character among the mountains and waterfalls of Norway as the train approaches the Atlantic, and few sights in Europe surpass that which is presented when Narvik, on the great Ofoten fiord, suddenly hursts into view and the swelling sails on the broad channel are seen a thousand feet helow the railroad.

NO ONE CAN ALWAYS AVOID

Catching Cold on the Street Car

Pe-ru-na Prevents Catching Cold.

One Dose in Time, Saves Nine.

Many people persist in riding on the street cars, insufficiently protected by clothing.

They start out perhaps in the heat of the day and do not feel the need of wraps.

The rapid moving of the car cools the body unduly. When they board the car perhaps they are slightly perspiring. When the body is in this condition it is easily chilled. This is especially the case if a person is sitting.

Beginning a street car ride in the middle of the day and ending it in the evening almost invariably requires extra wraps, but people do not observe these precautions, hence they catch cold.

Colds are very frequent in the Spring on this account, and as the Summer advances, they do not decrease. During the Spring months, no one should think of riding on the car without being provided with a wrap.

A cold caught in the Spring is liable to last through the entire Summer. Great caution should be observed at this season against exposure to cold. During the first few pleasant days of Spring, the liability of catching cold is great.

No wonder so many people acquire muscular rheumatism and catarrhal diseases during this season.

However, in spite of the greatest precautions, colds will be caught.

At the appearance of the first symptom, Peruna should be taken according to directions on the bottle, and continued until every symptom disappears.

Do not put it off. Do not waste time by taking other remedies. Begin at once to take Peruna and continue taking it until you are positive that the cold has entirely disappeared. This may save you a long and perhaps serious illness later on.

Bad Effects From Cold.

Mr. M. J. Deutsch, Secretary Building Material Trades Council, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have found your medicine to be unusually efficacious in getting rid of bad effects from cold, and more especially in driving away all symptoms of catarrh, with which I am frequently troubled.

"The relief Peruna gives in catarrhal troubles alone is well worth the price per bottle. I have used the remedy for several years now."

Spells of Coughing.

Mrs. C. E. Long, writes from Atwood, Colorado, as follows:

"When I wrote you for advice my little three-year-old girl had a cough that had been troubling her for four months. She took cold easily, and would wheeze and have spells of coughing that would sometimes last for a half hour.

"Now we can never thank you enough for the change you have made in our little one's health. Before she began taking your Peruna she suffered everything in the way of cough, colds and croup, but now she has taken not quite a bottle of Peruna, and is well and strong as she has ever been in her life."

Pe-ru-na for Colds.

Mr. James Morrison, 68 East 16th St., Paterson, N. J., writes:

"I have given Peruna a fair trial, and I find it to be just what you claim it to be. I cannot praise it too highly. I have used two bottles in my family for colds, and everything imaginable. I can safely say that your medicine is the best I have ever used."

THE MEAN MAN.

"I believe," his wife angrily declared, "that if I were dead you would be married again inside of a year."

"Oh, no," the mean man replied, "you are mistaken. Try me and I'll prove it."

GIRL WAS DELIRIOUS

With Fearful Eczema—Pain, Heat, and Tingling Were Excruciating—Cuticura Acted Like Magic.

"An eruption broke out on my daughter's chest. I took her to a doctor, and he pronounced it to be eczema of a very bad form. He treated her, hut the disease spread to her back, and then the whole of her head was affected, and all her hair had to be cut off. The pain she suffered was excruciating, and with that and the heat and tingling her life was almost unbearable. Occasionally she was delirious and she did not have a proper hour's sleep for many nights. The second doctor we tried afforded her just as little relief as the first. Then I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, and before the Ointment was three-quarters finished every trace of the disease was gone. It really seemed like magic. Mrs. T. W. Hyde, Brentwood, Essex, England, Mar. 8, 1907."

A Gentle Request.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I wish you wouldn't pay so much attention to the personal popularity of horses this year."

"What do you mean?"

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. VOICE FROM A ROOM

In Which Son Was Killed Fixed Hour of Father's Death.

Owingsville, Ky.—A strange story in regard to the recent death of Almanza Byrd, at his home, near this place, has just been told by his family. He was occupying an upstairs room when, early in the morning, he rushed down into the family room, and, in a very excited manner, told his wife that a voice had said to him: "Byrd, you will die before 12 o'clock to-day." She tried to convince him that it was his imagination, but he grew more excited, and vehemently protested that the voice was real, and its prediction only too true. All that could be done did not calm him, and his agitation and fear became intense and uncontrollable, and when finally almost exhausted he lay down and suddenly died, almost without a struggle. It was in the room occupied by Byrd on the morning of his death that he blew out the brains of his son with a load of buckshot two or three years ago. His son had battered down the door and was advancing on his father with uplifted ax when the fatal shot was fired.

CHARGES ARE DENIED.

Men Accused By Staton File Answer to $50,000 Suit.

Covington, Ky.—Answers to the suit against them by Robert E. Staton, a Bracken county tobacco grower, were filed in the United States court in Covington by Elbert Route, John Flannery, Benjamin McCracken and Hillman Hamilton, the defendants.

Staton sued for $50,000 damages, said to have been sustained when his tobacco was destroyed by "night riders" in Brooksville.

Staton alleged conspiracy of the defendants, with about 150 others, and that he was compelled to accompany them to the warehouse, and was beaten by them.

The answers deny the allegations of the petition, and were filed individually by the defendants.

Fight Rum in Florida.

Frankfort, Ky.—Dr. Charles L. Collins, for several years superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Kentucky, has resigned and will move to Florida to take up anti-saloon work in that state. Dr. M. B. Adams, former president of the Kentucky Anti-Saloon League, states that it will concentrate its fight in this state solely upon the extension of the county unit bill.

No Room For New Companies.

Frankfort, Ky.—Adjt. Gen. P. P. Johnston has received application for 15 or 20 new companies of state guards to be mustered in Eastern Kentucky. As the Eastern Kentucky district comes under the Second regiment there are no vacancies and consequently no additional companies can be mustered in.

Killed By Raiders.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Tom Weaver, at Canton, Trigg county, a colored packer in the employ of an association tobacco house at Golden Pond, was taken from his bed at midnight by a band of 40 masked men and whipped. The riders then commanded him to run. When he failed to obey he was shot in the back.

Kentucky Family Poisoned.

Lexington, Ky.—The family of Simon Holleran, of Bourbon county, were poisoned in a peculiar way. Mrs. Holleran, while mixing biscuits, used rat poison, mistaking it for soda. Mrs. Holleran, her husband, daughter and two sons ate the biscuits. Physicians are doing everything possible to save their lives.

Cartridge and Matches.

Frankfort, Ky.—Charles M. Parrish, of the state auditor's office, exhibited a notice, written in red ink, which he received, presumably from night riders. A cartridge and several matches accompanied the note, which was received through the mail. Mr. Parrish has decided not to raise any tobacco this year.

Two Counties Raised.

Frankfort, Ky.—The state board of equalization took up the assessment of Caldwell and Rowan counties. Assessment on farm land of the former was raised 4 per cent, and an 6 per cent raise was made on town lots. In Rowan county the raise was 5 per cent on each.

Grower Flees State.

Louisville, Ky.—J. D. McKibbon, of Bracken county, disposed of all the tobacco he had on the local "breaks." He said that the night riders had destroyed practically everything he owned at Augusta; had threatened his life, and that he determined to quit the state.

Defaulter Located.

Louisville, Ky.—In a suit filed in this city it was learned that Lattimore D. Carter, a defaulting Louisville man is at Colville, Wash. He disappeared a year ago with $60,000 belonging to the Russell estate.

Held As Night Riders.

Paducah, Ky.—J. H. Peek and Kelly Knight were held to the Lyon county grand jury, charged with being in the night riders' raid on Eddyville and Dycusburg. They were presented and waived examination.

FINES TOTALED $27,349.49

Paid By Seven Men Indicted For Operating the Kentucky Lottery.

Covington, Ky.—Seven of the eleven men indicted by the federal grand jury last February for operating the Kentucky Lottery Co. were assessed fines in the federal court in this city aggregating the sum of $27,347.49. Through the efforts of the attorneys for the defense a compromise with the government authorities was effected. Consequently the hearing was of short duration. The plea of guilty was entered by the prisoners when arraigned before Judge Cochran. Maurice Richmond, of Covington, who was at the head of the concern, then agreed to refrain from carrying on any business of a like nature in the future and to turn over all the paraphernalia of his business to the government. The fines were then given as follows:

Maurice Richmond, $10,500; J. R. Jameson, $5,000; C. E. Wells, $5,000; Laney Long, $5,000; W. H. Armstrong, $250; Louis Gatto, $250; James Starr, alias Moore, $200.

TEMPERANCE ADVOCATES

Want Liquor Legislation Included If Willson Calls Extra Session.

Frankfort, Ky.—Representative J. F. Porter, of Webster county, democrat, here before the board of equalization, doubts that much good could be accomplished even if an extra session of the legislature is called. He said in response to the question whether he thought an extra session would be called: "If sufficient pressure is brought to bear, and Gov. Willson feels that an extra session is necessary, I believe he will call one. Individually, I would very much regret to see an extra session called. The political parties at present being equally divided make it doubtful as to the results accomplished. The more subjects embraced in the call if an extra session is held would render more doubtful the results of an extra session. Of course, Gov. Willson's administration is pledged to secure the passage of the county unit bill, and it may be that he will use his best efforts to carry out the pledge."

Soldiers Will Make Arrests.

Paducah, Ky.—Sufficient evidence has been secured for the issuance of warrants against 10 alleged night riders in Calloway county, and they will be arrested in the next few days. The soldiers in charge of Lieut. N. J. Wilburn will make the arrests and summon the witnesses. The preliminary trials will be before County Judge J. G. Wells, who is waging warfare on night riders, and says he will restore peace in his county if it costs him his life. He has received a number of death threats.

Not Pipeful of Burley.

Lexington, Ky.—Secretary J. D. Clark, of the Fayette board of control of the Society of Equity, said: "The canvassed returns from every county in the white burley district show that we have the fight for no crop in 1908 won, and that there will not be enough tobacco grown in Central Kentucky this year to give each man a pipeful around."

Raises Assessments.

Frankfort, Ky.—The state board of equalization passed finally upon Barren county, raising the assessment 7 per cent on land and 10 per cent on town lots; Bullitt county, 2 per cent on lands, and Hardin county, 4 per cent on lands and 2 per cent on town lots.

Hargis Pleads For Bail.

Jackson, Ky.—Application for bail for Beach Hargis was made before Judge J. P. Adams here. The defense submitted its testimony, and one witness for the commonwealth was introduced. The court reserved its decision. It is believed bail will be granted.

Raiders Ready For Victims.

Lexington, Ky.—"Night Riders" again are becoming active in Montgomery county. Notes have been sent to various farmers threatening them with a whipping. Matches and powder are in the warning letters.

Apoplexy Kills Doctor.

Louisville, Ky.—Dr. George W. Griffiths, 67, one of the most prominent physicians of Louisville, died of apoplexy. He was trustee of the University of Louisville, president of the Louisville Clinical society and a member of many fraternal societies.

Pension Fraud Alleged.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—N. B. Livingston, charged with having posed as a government pension agent, and defrauded many persons in Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois, was arrested here. Livingston waived examination and was sent to jail at Owensboro.

Death of Noted Missionary.

Danville, Ky.—Miss Ethel Montgomery, who gained national prominence for original ideas on raising funds for foreign missionary work, died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Montgomery.

Plant Leased.

Lexington, Ky.—The Cleveland Lumber and Timber Co. has leased the Boice-Grogan plant, which recently went into bankruptcy, and will begin the manufacture of 10,000,000 feet of oak, poplar and chestnut lumber.

SPRING KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Vividly Described by One Who Has Suffered from It.

Mrs. H. Mutzabaugh, of Duncannon, Pa., says: "I was sick and miserable all last Spring and as I did not know what was the matter I kept going down and down until I was a physical wreck. I had smothering spells, flashes of heat over the kidneys and pain in passing the kidney secretions, which contained sediment. My husband urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and at last I did so. They did me much good, and I used in all eight boxes which restored me to perfect health."

MADE HIS MEANING CLEAR.

Professor's Son Translated Father's Speech into the Vernacular.

A college professor, in company with his son, was enjoying a walk in the country, when he met an old farmer. It had been a very wet season, and the professor, thinking to start the conversation in a way that would prove interesting to the farmer, remarked:

"There has been a rather abnormal precipitation of late."

The farmer seemed somewhat embarrassed, and the professor's son, who used a different vernacular, though he was a student in the college to which his father was attached, attempted to straighten out the matter. Drawing the farmer to one side, he said in a superior way:

"The governor means that we've been having a devil of a lot of rain."
—Harper's Weekly.

MACHINE-GROUND PAINT.

Occasionally one hears the "hand-mixed" paint of the painter slightingly spoken of as "unscientific" and "not thoroughly mixed." The facts are all on the side of the painter and his hand-prepared paint.

It is the most "scientific" paint there is, because it is made on the spot to suit the particular purpose for which it is to be used. It is as scientific as a good doctor's prescription. If the painter did not mix it thus it would be as unscientific as a patent medicine. Moreover, the paint which a good painter turns out is made of genuine white lead and pure linseed oil. If he does not mix it himself he is not sure what is in it, and consequently his client cannot be sure.

As for not being thoroughly mixed by machinery, that is simply a misstatement. White Lead as made by National Lead Company is thoroughly incorporated with 7 or 8 per cent. of pure Linseed oil in the factory, making a paste. This paste need only be thinned with additional linseed oil to make it ready for the brush.

The thorough incorporation of pigment and oil has already been accomplished before the painter gets it.

To know how to tell pure white lead is a great advantage to both painter and house-owner. National Lead Company will send a tester free to anyone interested. Address the company at Woodbridge Building, New York, N. Y.

A Rustic Sarcasm.

"Did your husband ketch chills an' fever?" asked the woman who was standing in front of the cabin.

"No," answered the woman who was driving a spring wagon. "He wouldn't have that much git-up-an'-git. He jes' sot around an' let 'em overtake him."

NEW ARRIVALS IN CANADA NEARLY 300,000 IN 1907.

ABOUT SIXTY THOUSAND FROM THE UNITED STATES.

Now that it is known that in the year just closed nearly sixty thousand from the United States declared their intention of making their homes in Canada, it might not be out of place to search for some reasons that would bring this about. These people are but following the example of the fifty-five or sixty thousand who did the same thing the year previous, and an almost equal number who the year before that but followed the example of the thousands of the year preceding. An excellent climate, certain and positive crops of grain of all kinds, good markets for their produce, land—and good land, too— at low prices, easy terms of payment, (not forgetting the 160 acres of land given free by the Government, particulars of which the Canadian Government Agent whose name appears elsewhere will tell you about) and then the splendid social conditions. The situation is pretty well sized up by a writer in one of the magazines. Quoting from this article, we find this: "Those of us who made good in the States," interjected another settler as if to continue the story of his neighbor, "have had it easy from the start; a little money is a mighty good thing on coming into a new country. But those who make an entry, or even buy lands at low rates, are able to square things in two or three seasons' crops. There are hardships in building shanties, and then with increasing prosperity getting things into shape for better homes. But affairs go much as in the States. We have the largest liberty in the world; there is more home rule in the Provinces than in the several states of the Republic. Taxes are light and with only a few million people west of Winnipeg we don't get in each other's way. One's friends over the line probably thought we would not live through the winter; and while it is cold, real cold, it is free from the moisture experienced in the east. Schools are good as encouraged by the Government; the enterprising American promoter and Yankee drummer see to it that we take notice of the latest improvements and best agricultural machinery. Altogether we are as near to affairs as we would be on our own farms in the States. Winnipeg bears the same relation to us as Chicago did at home; and Edmonton with the surrounding region advances as Omaha did in the days when we were as young as the boys yonder. We get together much as they did in the granges over the border; the government has established experimental schools of agriculture, and progress in every line is stimulated. This is a great region for grazing," we hear the Calgary citizen continuing, "and then with building elevators of wheat at one dollar a bushel, many of us find time to go over to the live stock exhibition in Chicago or visit old friends during the course of the winter. Every man is taken for what he is worth os for what he can raise; and in this good air and on this fertile soil we intend to show our old friends that we are made of the right stuff—that we are chips of the old block who built up the American West."

STUDY NOT A NECESSITY.

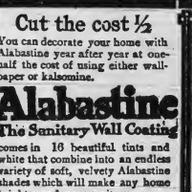
End and Aim of Woman's Life, as Understood by Rosie's Mother.

In one of the Philadelphia public schools is a little girl pupil whose ancestors and coreligionists have ever held that the principal end and aim of the life of a woman is marriage. This little girl is well up in most of her studies, but she has an inveterate dislike of geography and it seems impossible to teach the study to her. The other day her teacher, made impatient by her seeming unwillingness to learn her geography lesson, sent to Rosie's mother a note requesting her to see that the girl studied her lesson. The next day showed no improvement, however, and the teacher asked Rosie whether she had delivered the note.

"Yes, ma'am," was the reply.

"And did your mother read the note, Rosie," said the teacher.

"Yes, ma'm."



"What did she say?"

"My mother said that she didn't know geography, an' she got married, an' my aunt didn't know geography, an' she got married, an' you know geography, an' you didn't get married."

The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion, PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $5 discount on the two seasons—paying only $35 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $20 will be collected.

This Stallion is a Mahoghany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone County as his colts speak for themselves. A ring of this Stallion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

Care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur. Positively no business done on Sunday. Parties breeding must follow up the season.

He is an exceptionally fine saddle horse, going all the saddle gaits in a very attractive manner. He is a quiet, fearless driver that has speed enough at either the trot or pace to make a race horse. He is a very handsome horse with a disposition that is perfect. We could take up more space in giving a long description and pedigree of his ancestors, and what they had done, but William Penn will prove for himself that he will transmit to his get the rare qualities that he possesses. Pasture furnished at $2 a month.

A number of promiuent citizens of the locality of Walton, realising the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine saddle horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20.00 to insure.

High Vine was shown at various county fairs, last fall, and was a prize winner at all of them, taking first in the Sweepstaeks Saddle and Harness ring at Erlanger, and defeating the great Chamberlior and Colonel Sanders. He has proved to be a fine breeder, and his colts will be ready sellers at fancy prices. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

GRANGE HALL.

Miss Sadie Beemon closed a six months term of school here, last Thursday, and the esteem in which she is held as a teacher, was manifested by the large crowd of patrons and friends who assembled at the school house to witness the closing exercises. Part of these exercises were a complete and delightful surprise to the teacher and pupils. The patrons had been invited for the afternoon, but planned differently, and at 12 o'clock arrived with—not a lunch—but provisions for a banquet, which were quickly spread and greatly enjoyed by the pupils, teacher and the happy patrons. The exercises consisted of recitations and dialogues, and were carefully selected and well rendered. Misses Alma, Mattie and Jane Bristow and Master Thomas Garrison, received beautiful gifts from their teacher as prizes for perfect attendance, none of them having been absent during the entire term. She also dispensed a bountiful treat and handsome souvenirs containing her picture, to each pupil, while she was the recipient of several tokens of affection from her pupils. The trustees in earnest speeches attested the perfect satisfaction given by Miss Beemon and they and all other patrons urged her to agree to teach the next term. Her gentle, lady-like demeanor and firm discipline has had fine effect on her pupils, and her effort to teach them moral lessons as well as mental ones is greatly appreciated. This district is composed of some of our most substantial farmers and the trustees are men of ability and commend themselves to the patrons by the interest they take in the education of their children. Just now they are contemplating a much needed new floor and a safer flue in their school house, and every patron and tax-payer in the district should willingly aid these gentlemen in providing a comfortable and safe building for the little ones. Remember these children are a sacred heritage—God's little ones—and we should rise to what is not only our duty to them, but a beautiful privilege to us. An education is a better inheritance than dollars—without the education. It is earnestly hoped that by the united efforts of every man, woman and child in the district these very necessary repairs will be made before next September.

BURLINGTON, - - KENTUCKY.

The Mountain Feuds.

The feuds and assassinations which for ten years have made Breathitt county, Kentucky, the most infamous spot in the United States have lately attracted new attention because of the tragic death of the man to whom, more than to anyone else, the reign of terror was due. It would be hard to find, even in a Greek play, a more dramatic ending to a career of abhorrent crime. The man who had become both a political and a financial king of his mountain realm; who had debauched the civil life of his state as well as that of his county, and who had no one knows how many assassinations to his discredit, was finally shot down in cold blood, in his own store, by the son whom he had allowed to grow up in untaught, unrestrained drunken viciousness. Nothing stranger exists in the civilization of the United States than the feuds of which that which has just ended is typical. The actors are of the purest American blood, the most unmixed lineage, of any people in the country. They are forceful, proud and independent, and possessed of more than ordinary natural ability; but they have lived in isolation, cut off from the learning of the schools and almost everything else which spells progress. Constant intermarriages have intensified natural traits and raised the sense of family solidarity to a height that has rarely existed elsewhere except among the Scottish clans in the days of the border warfare. It has been the family or the friend against the world, with the Colt or the Winchester as the court of last resort. The end of these feuds, remarks the Youth's Companion, is undoubtedly in sight, if it has not already been reached. Even before this latest murder, public indignation, like a tide, had been rising slowly and irresistibly in Kentucky. It had already sent to the penitentiary for life two of the most notorious of the assassins, and had driven others from the state. The parricidal bullet may have been only anticipatory.

Mr. Valerian Gribayedoff, who died recently in Paris, was called "the father of newspaper illustration." The practice of illustrating news articles was, of course, common to many weekly papers long before Mr. Gribayedoff reached New York in the early '80s; but it was he who first saw and mastered the difficulty of making illustrations for the dailies, and his work gave an enormous impetus to what may be called the graphic reporting of news. Through no fault of the distinguished Russian artist, his innovation also gave impetus, if not origin, to a new kind of "faking"—the "illustration". drawn from telegraphic reports," which, as the New York Nation remarks, might as well be drawn from the imagination. Many of the so-called newspaper "artists" of the day might profitably study the faithful work and the admirable skill which Mr. Gribayedoff put into his drawings.

The anti-vivisection agitation is spreading. It is a practice so particularly liable to abuse that the lay public, inspired by the progressive humanity of the age, demands more than mere denials of cruelty and indifference to suffering to convince them that it is exercised under all possible humane restraints. An international mass-meeting is to be held in Paris to demand the necessary legislation in the case. In this country the crusade has been vigorously taken up, and the interests of science itself requires that it should be completely and convincingly cleared of the charge of unnecessary brutality in experiments on living animals.

At the end of December, 1907, the state of New South Wales, Australia, had a population of 1,571,300, being an increase of 40,330 for the year, the largest since 1885, the last year of the previous extensive assisted immigration scheme. The excess of immigration over emigration was 14,500, which is the largest for 16 years, and 5,500 more than in 1906.

A French scientist protests against the common idea that a microbe is necessarily a thing of evil, and says that while there are many bad microbes, the vast majority of them are good and useful. The same may be said about men. Perhaps, in the general scheme of things, man is but a microbe himself.

At a recent meeting of the New Jersey Federation of Women's clubs one of the speakers referred to servant girls as "animals." An investigation would probably reveal the fact that the speaker has recently been forced to do her own housework.

A Georgia woman has been deserted by her fourth husband because he didn't like her cooking. A woman with her experience ought to have been able to pick out a man who was able to hire a cook.

ISSUES SET FORTH

GOV. DOUGLAS ON THE DUTY OF DEMOCRATS.

Doing Away with Iniquitous Dingley Tariff the Most Important Project to Be Achieved — Consumers Victims of Greed.

William L. Douglas, former governor of Massachusetts, is a sound and sensible Democrat. Regarding three tenets of Democracy he says:

"I am heartily in favor of a larger measure of home rule for our cities and towns.

"It is hardly necessary to say that I am opposed to extravagance and in favor of strict economy and retrenchment in all of our governmental affairs. Not a dollar of the people's money should be spent unnecessarily or invested in measures of doubtful utility to the people as a whole.

"The most important issue in this country is that of the tariff. In my opinion, the Dingley tariff wall that surrounds this country is entirely too high, not only for the welfare of consumers and of the people as a whole, but for the manufacturers, as a class. It protects the larger manufacturers, combined into trusts, at the expense of the smaller and independent manufacturers. It does not protect the farmer, for the prices of our staple farm products are usually fixed by the prices in foreign markets. It does not protect the workingman, for there is no tariff duty on labor.

"The extremely high tariff rates of the Dingley act, higher than any before enacted, or than those of any other country with the possible exception of Russia, are largely responsible for the era of trusts in which we now find ourselves. The protected manufacturers have combined in order to restrict production, raise prices and get the full benefit of these unnecessarily high duties. For the same reason, and to make their monopoly more perfect, the smaller trusts have been merged into larger ones.

"The protected 'infant industries' of to-day are the billion-dollar steel and other giant trusts that get the lion's share of the tariff bonus and then show their appreciation for these favors by intimidating and oppressing ordinary manufacturers, and by selling their tariff-protected wares in unprotected foreign markets at prices only two-thirds or three-fourths as high as those charged at home.

"In my opinion, the American consumers, who pay the tariff taxes that go to swell the profits of these trusts, should be the most favored customers of these giant paupers. Our own people are entitled to any bargain-counter prices that our protected trusts may have to offer."

A Republican Bolt.

The Republicans are suffering from the ambition of some of their leaders and the evident intention of President Roosevelt to dictate the nomination of Secretary Taft as his successor, or himself, in case Taft is impossible, may result in a split in the party. Even in Ohio where the convention was apparently unanimous for Taft there is a rebellion. That stalwart Republican organ, the Toledo Blade, which has been faithful to the Republican party since its organization, leads in an open bolt against the Taft-Cox-Brown ticket. The Blade declares that the Taft managers have handed over the party organization to the corrupt Cox-Brown machine, and the Sandusky Register indorses the Blade's attack upon the state ticket.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft must have known that in making this combination with Boss Cox and allowing him to dictate the most important nominations for state officers, they were guilty of betraying the people for their own personal advantage, and it is decidedly refreshing to see that the honest organs of the party refuse to abide by it.

Corruption and Scandal.

The federal officeholders in the southern states are expected to turn out delegates to the Republican national convention with quickness and dispatch at the disposal of the administration. But somehow the old machine is squeaky and the plan does not work well. The negroes are opposed to President Roosevelt and his man Taft. The Lilley-whites are somewhat divided and there will be contesting delegations from nearly every southern state. This offers a good chance for the Republican national committee to "fix things." The fact that any of those states have the same power in voting on contests as other states have, and that those members who are involved in the contests from their states will have to pass, in a judicial way, upon all the contests, will put their virtue to a test that most of them will be unable to withstand.

Corruption will rear its hideous head and with both factions trying to fix the committee to pass favorably on their side of the contests, there is almost a certainty of a scandal and perhaps a split that will tear the hide from the tough old elephant of the G. O. P.

Sees Victory for Democrats.

If the Republican party stands unblushingly behind the existing tariff throughout the coming campaign and Democrats make their fight on the issue that the people have been robbed long enough by tariff-protected trusts even Mr. Roosevelt's popularity will scarcely carry the Republican nominee to victory.—Chicago Journal (Rep.)

A GLANCE AT THE PAST.

How Trust-Busting President Succumbed to Power of Protected Interests.

When Attorney General Knox, the great trust lawyer, undertook to prosecute the beef trust and the railroad merger, every one but the combine magnates was delighted, and praised Mr. Roosevelt for doing something. When the injunction was obtained against the beef trust magnates, Armour, et al., commanding them not to disobey the law, and the order of the court to the Northern Securities company to disband that unholy alliance was procured, unthinking people said that trusts had at last found their master; but as the months rolled around, those corporations and combines still continued to do business at the old stands, and when Mr. Knox told the people that there would be "no running amuck against the trusts" there began to be doubts in many minds of the outcome; well-founded doubts, as the sequel has shown.

When congress ordered the secretary of commerce and labor to investigate the beef combine and the president ordered the bad trusts to be investigated so that "publicity" of their doings would warn the public whom to beware of, the hopes of the people revived. The trust magnates became restive and threatened to defeat Roosevelt for election. The magnates of the protected industries also threatened to defeat him, unless he declared for protection and "stood pat" like Hanna, instead of urging real reciprocity like McKinley.

The fate of Mr. Roosevelt and the Republican party in the ensuing election hung in the balance for weeks. On one side were the trusts with the money bags—on the other the people. What happened? Slowly, but surely, the trust side became the heavier. The trust-buster had succumbed to the threats of the corporation and combine magnates and the dial of progress was turned backward. The assistant trust-buster—Cortelyou, was made chairman of the Republican national committee, redolent with the perfume of trust secrets and anxious for the promised trust contributions to debauch the people who still were innocently believing the day of their salvation from trust plunderers was at hand.

Roosevelt, the arrogant, had chosen. He became as docile as the proverbial sucking dove. The big stick was laid away in cotton batting. The Republican candidate for president was tamed; and the trusts held the whip hand. Mr. Roosevelt was elected, the trusts have had free sailing for three years; and the trust high prices have continued. The people must decide again at the coming election whether "my policies" of false pretense shall win, or whether we shall have an honest administration with real reforms.

Reform Demanded.

Congressman Ashbrook of Ohio is a new Democratic member of the house of representatives, and is anxious for reform legislation. In a ten-minute speech—all the time the Republican managers would allow him—he read the memorial of the National Editorial association for the repeal of the tariff duty on print paper and wood pulp, which was signed and sent to members from every congressional district in the United States. But Mr. Ashbrook says he has discovered that the present congress "has time to burn, time to kill, that ought to be employed for the betterment of all the people and cease to be what it appears to a new member to be—a stand-pat, do-little bunch."

Yet many Republican editors support the do-nothing policy of this Republican congress for partisan purposes, while at the same time they memorialize congress to reform the wood and paper schedules of the tariff law that protects the paper trust. How can they expect the Republican leaders to pay any attention to their demands when they worship at the shrine of such "a stand-pat, do-little bunch?" The people of Ohio should strengthen the hands of Mr. Ashbrook by electing such as he from other districts and the next congress would produce reforms, which the present Republican congress will never do.

Prosperity for the Few.

In spite of the panic and the prolonged business depression there are three institutions that have been remarkably prosperous during the past year. The First National bank, controlled by J. Pierpont Morgan, proposes to declare a special dividend of 100 per cent. The undivided profits of the bank are reported to the comptroller of the currency to be $19,553,900, while the capital of the bank is $10,000,000.

The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad reports the most prosperous year in the history of the company, the net earnings after paying all charges were $10,089,328. The surplus was equal to 38.4 per cent. on the common stock and after payment of 20 per cent. in dividends, still left $4,849,328 surplus.

Another corporation, the Standard Oil trust, has paid dividends for the year of 40 per cent. and still has a vast surplus.

So here we have a bank, a railroad and a trust making millions for those who control them, while ordinary business men have found difficulty in securing the necessary funds to carry on their business and numbers have failed to keep their heads above the troubled business water. Such prosperity for the few at the expense of the many is the boasted Republican prosperity.

THE LIVING ROOM.

It Should at All Times Be a "Livable" Room.

What to do with the living room is a problem that confronts every housekeeper. The living room should be in fact as well as in name a living room—a livable room. It is the room in which the most of our time at home is spent, the hours we have for leisure, the time we have for play, the place where we entertain our friends and it is absolutely essential that the walls and furnishings of the living room should be harmonious in color, suitable in texture, and durable in material.

The rich, soft, solid colored walls are the ideal walls for the living rooms. They make a better back ground for pictures, throw the furniture out in better relief, are less discordant with rugs and carpeting, and indicate a higher degree of taste and culture than do the colored monstrosities which we paste on when we apply wall paper.

Who ever saw roses climbing up a plastered wall growing out of a hardwood floor? Yet, that is what we suggest to the imagination when we paste paper covered with roses on our walls. They are neither artistic nor true. Roses are all very beautiful, but they were never made to climb up interior walls and they do not grow from hardwood flooring. The set figures of wall paper are also tiresome and equally disagreeable and repellant.

The alabastined wall is the only correct form of a tinted or solid colored wall. Fortunately it is the only clean way, and more fortunately it is the only permanent way; the only way that does not involve the endless labor in the future.

In lighting the walls some thought must be given the color. Light colors reflect 85% of the light thrown upon them. Dark colors reflect but 15%. Lighting bills can be saved by choosing a color which will reflect the largest degree of light. In north rooms use warm colors or colors which reflect light. In south and west rooms sometimes the light can be modified by the use of darker colors. Dark greens absorb the light; light yellows reflect it; browns modify it, and so on, through the scale of colors. The color scheme of a room not only is dependent upon the color of the carpetings but it is also dependent upon the light of the room.

Losing a Tenant.

A landlord in the Highlands of Scotland had a "crofter" tenant, who paid him ten shillings a year as rent for the little farm. At the end of the second year the tenant came to the landlord and said that he was not able to pay more than five shillings a year, as crops had been poor. The landlord agreed to this.

At the end of the third year the tenant appeared before the landlord again and complained that things were going so poorly with him that he was not able to pay any rent. The landlord agreed to let him remain rent free. At the end of the fourth year the tenant once more appeared before the landlord, and said:

"Colonel, if you don't build me a barn I'll have to move."

TRY THIS HOME REMEDY.

FOR SPRING FEVER, LANGOUR, KIDNEY DISORDERS AND RHEUMATISM.

"Spring fever," so called, is nothing more or less than thick poisoned blood. The poisons accumulate through the long winter, and on the first warm day the tired, all-in feeling manifests itself, causing aching from head to foot, languor, sleepiness, etc.

Rheumatic pains often harass the nerves, too, while catarrhal poisons and uric acid run riot in the system.

Use the salt water treatment for local symptoms, but a cleanser and tonic is needed by the blood. Otherwise a most miserable summer will torture you. Get the poisons out of the blood before the hot season is here. Thin the blood, stimulate the kidneys and liver, invigorate the nerves, is the advice of a German-American specialist. When asked how, he replied: "Get any honest druggist to mix in a bottle one-half ounce fluid extract buchu, one ounce compound fluid balmwort, and two ounces compound syrup sarsaparilla. A teaspoonful after each meal and one at bedtime will work marvelous changes, thin the poisoned blood, strain out the poisons and regulate the functions.

Sympathy.

"It's a serious thing, Verena," sighed Mrs. Upmore, "to be the wife of a man who holds a public office. It demands so much of his time and keeps him away from his home."

"I know just how you feel, ma'am," said the elderly domestic. "My first husband was the grand imperial outside guard of the Amalgamated and Solidified Order of Fuzzy Guzzlers, and sometimes he was that busy tryin' to remember the signs and grips that I couldn't get a word out of him all day long."

THE CALL OF THE SOIL.

DAYS OF FINANCIAL STRESS MAKE FARM LANDS LOOK RICH.

A staff contributor of a southern newspaper has taken up the question of the return to the farm of many who had forsaken it for the glitter of the city. He says: "It is a well known fact that the history of this Government shows that those men who have been most successful in life and who have left their impress upon its people and its institutions as statesmen, soldiers, financiers—have as a rule been those whose youth was spent on the farm, and it is to such as these that there comes with overmastering power THE CALL OF THE SOIL. More especially does it come with redoubled persuasiveness, greater power and sweeter pleading to the man of affairs when the clouds of financial unrest begin to darken the sky; when the cry of panic causes people to lose their wits and act like stampeded cattle; when with reason or without reason there arises before him the specter of ruin, grinning in his face and waving its gaunt arms in threatening gesticulation.

"The pitiable state into which some men were brought by the recent financial [illegible] which happily is now passed, suggests these reflections. Some were ruined and a very few became insane because of their losses. Two or three took their own lives.

It is when such times come that the statesman, the great financier, and the man of affairs becomes tired of the struggle. He lays down his pen, turns from his desk and listens to the CALL OF THE SOIL.

There are hundreds of cases throughout the United States of those who have money in the banks and are looking for investment in lands. No investment is better or safer. Take, for instance, the lands in Western Canada that can be bought at from $10 to $15 per acre which yield a revenue equal to and often greater than their original cost. Those lands make a certain investment. During the past two months large investments in these lands have been made, some intending to use the lands for farming purposes of their own. Others to resell to farmer friends. The agents of the Government of Canada located at different points throughout the United States have in their possession particulars of districts in which there are free homestead grants of 160 acres each accessible to railways, markets, schools, churches, &c. These are valuable lands. These agents will be pleased to give information to any desirous of securing, and will tell all about the railway rates, &c.

PERHAPS A NATURAL MISTAKE.

Physician Had Reason to Think He Had Lost His Patient.

For many days the German was close to death, but after a time he showed improvement in condition. The doctor told the German's wife that her husband might have anything to eat that he liked.

The German expressed a desire for Limburger cheese, and the wife, being a generous woman and pleased at the improvement, and in order that her husband might have a nibble at any time he had a taste for it, put some cheese in every room in the house. It is easy to imagine the aroma.

The next morning the doctor called at the house, and as soon as he opened the door he asked:

"When did he die?"—Hartford Post.

TOOK TIME.

A Scotsman, having hired himself to a farmer, had a cheese set before him that he might help himself. After some time, the master said to him:

"Sandy, you take a long time to breakfast."

"In truth, master," said Sandy; "a cheese o' this size is na sae soon eaten as you may think."

Might Be Sure of That.

Bobby is the son of a minister and has had the experience of "moving" four times in the space of his eight years' life. Some time ago an elderly minister was visiting Bobby's father and the course of the conversation turned to Heaven and Bobby was asked concerning the abode of the blest. "Yes," said the youngster, with a sigh of deep weariness, "I know. It's the last place we're going to move to."

SQUADRON OF ELEVEN WARSHIPS

TO SAIL FOR ASIA MINOR AND HOLD NAVAL SHOW AGAINST THE TURKS.

WILL OCCUPY SMALL ISLAND IF NECESSARY

Vessels Will Carry Seven Thousand Men and Five Hundred Big Guns—Difficulty Between Nations Arises Out of Installation of Postoffices.

Rome, April 20.—An Italian squadron under command of Adm. F. Grenet will set out, probably Monday, for the purpose of making a demonstration in Turkish waters. The squadron comprises 11 warships and includes the battleship Regina Elena, commanded by the Duke of Abruzzi. Eight destroyers will accompany the squadron. Altogether the vessels will carry more than 7,000 men and about 500 big guns, and their objective will be Asia Minor, some 700 miles away.

It has been decided, if it is deemed necessary, also to occupy a small island off that coast, but it is hoped here that Turkey may see the error of her way and give full satisfaction, so that more energetic measures may be avoided.

Difficulty between the two nations arises out of the refusal of the Turkish government to permit the installation of Italian postoffices in Turkish territory, while at the same time other foreign nations have established and are conducting postoffices there without interference.

With regard to this, however, the Turkish ambassador in Rome has pointed out in an interview that his government has in no instance granted to the countries in question such privilege, although it has "tolerated" the postoffices which they have maintained.

For years it has been felt in government circles that Turkey has been taking advantage of the international situation to act in a high-handed manner toward Italians, showing but little respect for Italian rights.

The government, it is stated, has been indulgent, not wishing to cause complications which might endanger the accord of the powers with regard to the Ottoman or the Italian problems.

In addition, there has been much opposition on the part of Turkey to all peaceful Italian initiative in Tripoli, and matters reached a climax when Italy asked permission to open postoffices in Turkish territory, where other powers already were established, and met with what is considered by the administration here unjustifiable refusal, for, besides being an acquired right, Italy considers that she is entitled to claim it according to treaties between the two countries granting her the privileges of the most favored nation.

MADMAN SHOT BY PORTER

After He Had Killed Three Officers and Wounded a Fourth.

Warrensburg, Mo., April 20.—Three men are dead and another probably fatally wounded as the result of an attempt of local police to arrest F. O. Hawes here Sunday night.

The dead are: James Ryan, city marshal, Night Watchman Basbahan and F. O. Hawes.

The wounded: Night Watchman R. P. Pollock.

Hawes, who was 22 years old, the son of a Johnson county farmer, who returning to his home on a Missouri Pacific train Sunday evening from a trip to a neighboring town, when, it is believed, he suddenly lost his mind. His actions were noticed by the other passengers, and the officers here were notified. When the train arrived at 8:30 City Marshal Ryan and two night watchmen of the town were at the station. Hawes got off the train and as he did so the officers attempted to make the arrest. Hawes drew a revolver and began shooting. At the first shot Marshal Ryan fell dead, shot through the head. Other shots followed and Basbahan fell dead. He was shot through the lungs. Pollock was the last one shot, and he received what is believed to be a mortal wound in the abdomen. Hawes started to run from the scene, but was shot and killed by the negro porter of a local hotel.

FLOOD LOSS IS MILLIONS

TOWN OF CRAIG DESTROYED BY THE HAUSER LAKE DISASTER.

Broken Dam Certainly Will Be Rebuilt—City of Great Falls Not In Danger.

Helena, Mont. — With the little town of Craig wiped entirely off the map, thousands of head of cattle and livestock drowned and scores of valuable ranches greatly damaged, the loss from the flood caused by the breaking of the great 70-foot dam at Hauser lake, it is conservatively estimated, will reach several million dollars.

In view, however, of the contract between the Helena Power Transmission company, owners of the dam and the Wisconsin Bridge and Iron company of Milwaukee, the latter company, it is said, will be liable for all damage resulting from the flood.

After making a careful examination of the dam site Wednesday, since the water receded, A. H. Gerry, Jr., general manager, is of the opinion that the wrecked structure can be rebuilt at a cost of probably less than $250,000. That the dam will be rebuilt at once and the construction of the third dam at Wolf creek which was approved by Secretary of War Taft will not be delayed, is assured by a telegram received in Helena from former Gov. Samuel T. Hauser, president of the Helena Power Transmission company, who is now in New York.

The indications are that the water has receded sufficiently to prevent any great damage at Great Falls. Every precaution has been taken to protect the Boston and Montana smelter, which is situated on the river banks at Great Falls, and it is now believed that the plant will not suffer from the flood waters.

Butte, Mont. — Great Northern Agent Stewart of Wolf creek reports to the local office that the track from Wolf creek east as far as he can see is flooded to a depth of three feet and that for three miles or more it is completely washed out. It is figured conservatively that for at least 20 days no trains can go over the line.

A message received here from the penitentiary told of a break in the levee above the state farm. Hundreds of convicts rushed to the break and aided in closing it. The levees opposite the farm will have to be cut in order to save them.

MISSING CROOK ROBS BANK

ESCAPED CONVICT LOOTS BANK AT CHAUTAUQUA, KAN.

Bandits Secure $3,000 and Depart for Osage Hills with Posse in Pursuit—One Is Recognized.

Coffeyville, Kan. — Two men entered the Citizens' bank at Chautauqua, 25 miles west of Coffeyville, Friday, and after forcing Cashier C. C. Walterhouse and Del Easley, a business man, to enter the vault, locked them in, secured all the currency in sight, amounting to about $3,000, and escaped into the Osage hills across the line in Oklahoma. Four posses started in pursuit and as the roads were muddy it was believed the robbers would be captured. The robbers secured but half an hour's start.

The robbery was one of the most daring ever executed in this part of Kansas, the scene of many daring hold-ups on the part of the Dalton, Starr and other gangs of outlaws who from time to time have made their rendezvous in the mountainous country of near-by Oklahoma.

Cashier Walterhouse had scarcely opened the bank at Chautauqua in the morning and placed his currency on the counter ready for the day's business when the two robbers entered. The only other person in the place was Del Easley. The robbers, both of them well dressed, made their way leisurely to the cashier's window. One of them was a man well known about town, and when he commanded Walterhouse and Easley to throw up their hands, the latter two took the matter in the light of a joke. The serious intentions of the robbers were realized a moment later, however, when they both drew revolvers, and, pointing them at their victims, ordered them to get into the vault. Without further ado Walterhouse and Easley complied. The robbers quickly slammed the door shut, and then leisurely went about their business of Cashier Walterhouse stated positively that one of the robbers was William Tenant, aged 23 years, formerly of Chautauqua, and who recently escaped from jail at Nowata, Okla., where he was being held on a charge of horse stealing. Tenant some time ago borrowed a small sum of money from the bank, and Mr. Walterhouse said that when Tenant entered the bank Friday he supposed he had come to renew the note or to take it up.

MINNESOTA SOLID FOR TAFT.

Republican Convention Instructs for the Secretary of War.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Minnesota Republican state convention Thursday elected four delegates-at-large to the national convention at Chicago and instructed them to vote for the nomination of Secretary of War Taft until he is "selected by the convention."

The action of the convention insures that the 22 votes of Minnesota in the national convention will be cast for the secretary of war, as all the 18 district delegates are under Taft instructions.

Theater Panic Averted.

Saginaw, Mich.—The Bijou vaudeville theater here was emptied in two minutes Friday night without a panic when the building was filled with dense smoke from the explosion of a gasoline lighting plant in an adjoining building. Flames were leaping 60 feet in the air as the audience emerged from the theater, but cool heads prevailed and the exits were kept clear.

Killed by a Copper Cent.

Laporte, Ind.—A large copper cent, swallowed 60 years ago, caused the death Friday of James Huckins, 67 years old, a farmer. The coin became encased in the lining of his stomach. Recently an abscess formed and poisoning ensued.

Worthington, Ind.—Two little daughters of William M. Watts were cremated Friday evening in a barn by a blaze they started while playing. They lived two miles north of town.

CLAPP IS MADE CROW CHIEF.

Minnesota Senator Honored by Montana Indians.

Washington. — Senator Clapp of Minnesota, chairman of the committee on Indian affairs, is now a "Heap Big Indian," chief of the Crow tribe.

He was given a great surprise Thursday by Chief Plenty Coos and his fellow-tribesmen, who have been witnesses before the Indian committee for the past three weeks. The chief marched into the committee room at the head of the band and through an interpreter phlegmatically informed the senator that the treatment that had been accorded the Indians was highly appreciated, and that an appropriate gift was due the white chief of the committee. Chief Plenty Coos then took from one of his followers a huge war bonnet, which had been the chief's insignia of rank and worn by him whenever he went into battle. He said that he was now a man of peace and that the bonnet was of less value to him on the reservation than it would be to the senator in congress, and therefore he wanted the senator to take it.

Senator Clapp was "completely flabbergested," according to his own description of his emotions. He took the war bonnet and thanked the chief.

The decoration would create a sensation in the senate chamber if the senator should decide to wear it there. It is made of eagle feathers, a band of which goes entirely around the head and droops almost to the feet.

FUN FOR FLEET CREWS.

Men from Battleships Have Gay Day at San Diego.

San Diego, Cal. — After two days of pageantry on sea and land there was a restful lull in San Diego's celebration in honor of the American of the officers, including Rear Admiral Thomas, were entertained at a picnic some 30 miles in the country. Boat races on the bay during the morning, a baseball game in the afternoon, free lemonade and fruit, horseback rides, trolley excursions and sight-seeing tours occupied the attention of the 2,000 sailors who came ashore on liberty.

All of the 16 vessels of the fleet at anchorage off Coronado were thrown open to visitors from ten a. m. to five p. m., and the excursion launches running out to sea had all they could do to handle the interested throngs. At night there were fireworks.

Attacks Grain Dealers.

Lincoln, Neb. — Complaint was filed with Attorney General Thompson Tuesday against the Nebraska Grain Dealers' association, alleging that it is a trust and as such is trying to drive independent dealers out of business. The complainant is G. F. Godown, secretary of the Beaver Valley Grain company, at Danbury, who asserts the members of the association, in an effort to deprive him of business, are paying several cents more for grain at Danbury than the market prices and much more than they pay at their elevators in other towns where they have no competition.

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

YOUTSEY HAS HOPES,

But His Friends Are Doing Nothing Toward Getting a Pardon.

Frankfort, Ky.—While the attorneys for Caleb Powers and Jim Howard are endeavoring to induce Gov. Willson to pardon their clients, no effort is being made by attorneys or the friends of Henry Youtsey to secure a pardon for him. Youtsey, however, has hopes equal to those of Powers and Howard, that he will not spend the remainder of his days behind the walls of the penitentiary, although he has been sentenced for life for the part he took in the assassination of Gov. William Goebel.

The whole purpose of the argument on the application of the pardon for Powers and Howard, it is said, is to lay the entire conspiracy, which resulted in the assassination of Goebel, upon Youtsey. So far as is learned no application for a pardon has been made by Youtsey to Gov. Willson. However, Youtsey stands for a parole, as the statutes provide that, after a convict has served five years and has made a good record, he is entitled to a parole. Youtsey has been in prison seven years, nine months and three days, and so far he has never been reported to the prison officials for misbehavior. Youtsey said, when asked if he intended to make an application for a pardon, that his case was entirely in the hands of his friends and his attorneys.

HEIRS OF DEAD PRISONER

Who Picked Up Live Electric Wire Ask Heavy Damages.

Frankfort, Ky.—Because Wm. Davis, a convict sent to the penitentiary here from Louisville, picked up a live wire belonging to the Capital Gas and Electric Co. and was killed, his estate may get $25,000, as the suit against the company for that sum is scheduled to begin here April 27.

Davis was sent from Louisville to the penitentiary on the charge of car breaking and had been in the penitentiary but a short time when he picked up the wire in front of the prison one day and was killed.

The case was to be heard this week, but owing to the most important witnesses being absent, the trial had to be postponed until April 27, and an order was entered to have certain witnesses brought here at that time.

The witnesses are J. J. White, of Campbell county; Ueli Button, of Oldham county; Capt. Lynn, of Lincoln county; Chas. C. Averdick, of Kenton county, and John Hunter, of Ohio county.

Discharged Men Hold Up Street Car.

Louisville, Ky.—Discharged from the service of the Louisville Railway Co. on April 9, George Griffiths and George S. Rickerson held up a Barrett avenue car at the end of the line and took watches and $19 from the crew. Policeman Lammers passed the men on the street, and, becoming suspicious of them, retracted his steps. Griffiths fired at Lammers four times, and the policeman returned it five times. Both men were captured.

Sheriff's Wife Guarded Prisoner.

Frankfort, Ky.—In bringing Logan Sigimore, of Perry county, sentenced to 21 years for killing James Stacy, Sheriff Mack Eversole was compelled to make the trip from Hazard to Jackson on a raft, and his wife guarded the prisoner while he piloted the craft.

Hotel Men Meet.

Lexington, Ky.—The Kentucky Hotel association held its first annual meeting here. Mayor Skain delivered an address of welcome. Speeches were made by H. B. Daugherty, Maysville, and W. W. Lowery, secretary of the Indiana Hotel association.

Board Contracts Opposed.

Frankfort, Ky.—Insurance Commissioner Bell, in written opinion, decided that "board contracts" or "special contracts" issued by life insurance companies are against public policy, and the writing of such policies in Kentucky must cease.

Shoots Off Side of Head.

Lagrange, Ky.—Lonnie Hicks, aged 42 years, shot and killed himself at his home near here. He said that he was tired of living. He picked up a shotgun, held the muzzle to his head and pulled the trigger. The side of his head was torn away.

A Warning From Night Riders.

Science Hill, Ky.—W. M. Lowery, agent for a local fertilizer company, and who sells to planters throughout the white burley district, received the following letter: "Mr. Lowery: You are hereby ordered not to sell any more fertilizer. Night Riders."

Prisoner Pardoned.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson pardoned Tandy Martin, of Knott county, sent to the penitentiary for 10 years for killing J. J. Amburgy in 1906. Martin is an uncle of Senator H. H. Smith, of Hindman, who secured the pardon.

Used Mails To Defraud.

Franklin, Ky.—Bud Turner, of this city, was arrested charged with having used the mails for fraudulent purposes. Turner ordered a pistol from a Chicago company, giving in payment, it is said, a worthless check for $17.50.

WILLSON HEARS APPLICATION

For Powers' Pardon—Attorneys Declare Records Show Him Innocent.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson began formal hearing of the applications of Caleb Powers and James B. Howard, made through attorneys, for pardons for alleged complicity in the assassination of Gov. William Goebel eight years ago.

Attorneys for Powers are urging the exercise of executive clemency in his behalf on three principal grounds:

First—That he was denied bail after his last trial, when there was a hung jury.

Second—That the record shows he is innocent of the charge against him.

Third—That as the law now stands it is impossible for him ever to get a fair and impartial trial before a fair and impartial jury.

Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin, who prosecuted all of the Goebel cases, is strongly resisting the effort of petitioners on the ground that the evidence at all the trials was overwhelmingly convincing that both men entered into conspiracy to cause Goebel's assassination.

Petitions said to be signed by five hundred thousand names from all parts of the United States, urging the governor to pardon Powers, are filed in the executive office.

OPPOSES POWERS' PARDON.

Brother of Slain Senator Declares Youtsey Should Have Been Hanged.

Frankfort, Ky.—Arthur Goebel, of Cincinnati, brother of William Goebel, made his appearance before Gov. Willson to protest against pardons being granted to Caleb Powers and Jim Howard.

Goebel declared it a disgrace that Henry Youtsey, who confessed his part in the conspiracy with Powers, Howard and others, had not been hanged and the others, too.

He closed with a plea to the governor to let the law take its course, bringing tears to the eyes of many when he said:

"There are those, many in number and many have said it to me, even though Powers is guilty he has suffered enough, and should be pardoned. That is mercy.

"If this is to be a question of mercy I ask you to listen to the requiem of the winds which chant over the grave of William Goebel, and to consider that his life and liberty were as dear to him as theirs is to them."

Three Counties Raised.

Frankfort, Ky.—The state board of equalization took final action on the assessment of the counties that follow: Increased Monroe 5 per cent, Carroll 5 per cent, Powell 5 per cent. The assessments of Graves, Pike and Woodford counties were permitted to stand as made by the county assessor.

Killed in a Runaway.

Lexington, Ky.—A telegram announcing that James N. Mathews had been killed in a runaway accident at Huntsville, Ala., was received by Col. John T. Shelby. Mr. Mathews and Miss Fanny Shelby, daughter of Thos. H. Shelby, were married in Louisville early last February.

A Probable Murder.

Rockport, Ky.—It is reported here from Dunde that Estil St. Clair, the young man whose body was found floating in Rough river, was murdered instead of being accidentally drowned. The parents of the murdered man have offered a reward of $500 in an effort to run down the perpetrators.

A Baptist Paper Trust.

Louisville, Ky.—For the purpose of taking over all the Baptist papers in the state, the Baptist World Publishing Co. incorporated here for $50,000. The Baptist Argus and other papers will be absorbed and one big weekly and perhaps a daily issued from this city.

One Wounded in Pistol Fight.

Jackson, Ky.—In a pistol fight between Bill Baily on one side and Geo. Hays and Magistrate Hurst, a Breathitt county justice of the peace, on the other side, near Hurst's store at Wiborst, Baily was fatally wounded. The trouble was over a woman, it is said.

Woman Arrested.

Augusta, Ky.—Mrs. Alf Murphy, of Brooksville, was arrested here by Deputy Sheriff Wm. Smarr on a warrant charging her with attempting to poison the family of Charles Cotty, colored, of Brooksville.

Big Hemp Blaze.

Frankfort, Ky.—A spark from an engine set fire to South's warehouse. Ely's carriage factory also was badly damaged. Over 40,000 pounds of hemp belonging to the Kentucky River hemp mills was destroyed. Loss $6,000.

BOONE CO. RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Judge Cammack and the petit juries were on hand at the appointed hour, last Monday morning, and took up the business of the court where it was left off Wednesday of last week. The suit of G. G. Hughes against A. M. Acra for $10,000 damages for personal injuries, was set for trial that day, but was continued until next term on account of Mr. Acra's attorney, Mr. Bonfner, of Covington, being too ill to go into trial.

The damage suit of Montgomery Anderson against Charles Kottmeyer, both of Constance, was called for trial and the jury obtained before noon Monday. This was a suit for $5,000 damages and grew out of some derogatory remarks the defendant made about the plaintiff one day when commissioners appointed by the County Court were laying out a road between the property of the parties in Constance some time last summer. For the plaintiff, W. E. Vest and Joseph Case were the only witnesses who testified in the case. The defendant offered no proof. Following is the jury that tried the case: Geo. Gordon, Sam Petit, B. C. Graddy, [illegible] Black, B. C. Gaines, J. W. Cleek, Ben Corbin, O. Y. Kelly, R. J. Madden, Henry Aylor, Jas. Kelly, W. Lee Gaines. The jury gave the plaintiff a judgment for $175.

Monday afternoon Deputy Sheriffs Cropper and Hume left for Covington to bring John Meeks from the jail there to answer to the charge of murder, the killing of Albert Clutterbuck. It seems that the accused had changed his mind about the necessity of soldiers to protect him from a mob, and did not request Judge Cammack to apply to Gov. Wilson for a posse. The officers brought Meeks to the Burlington jail Tuesday morning and the hearing of his motion for a change of venue was begun. In support of his motion the defendant filed the affidavits of Lee Eddins, Wm. Larkcone and John Ingram. In opposition to the motion the Commonwealth introduced three or four witnesses. The motion was then argued and overruled, and the defendant filed his affidavit for a continuance because of the absence of C. L. Miller, by whom he said he could prove that Albert Clutterbuck had said that he intended to kill him (Meeks), the threat being communicated to defendant at the close of the Florence fair. This motion was also overruled, and the work of securing a jury was begun. At 2:30 the regular panel was exhausted, 10 jurors being in the box but not finally accepted. The Judge then drew a venire of 50 from the jury wheel and ordered the sheriff to summon them to appear in court this morning at 9 o'clock. Apparently the trial is causing no unusal excitement. The Commonwealth is represented by Commonwealth's Atty. F. C. Green, County Atty. N. E. Riddell and D. E. Castleman; the denfendant, by Attyorney Caldwell, of Newport.

Quite a good crowd was in attendance at the Meeks trial yesterday, several ladies being present. A much larger crowd is expected today.

R. E. Ryle vs. W. L. Riddell, for $10,000 damages, dismissed settled.

A. S. of E. News.

It is said that not to exceed 15 per cent of tobacco crop will be raised in Clermont county, Ohio, this year.

It is said that very little tobacco will be cultivated in Indiana in the counties bordering on the Ohio river.

J. D. Cobb, of Erlanger, who has been a large tobacco dealer, says: 'The surprising thing to me is such a big movement could go on with so little friction. I look for the greatest trouble to come from people moving from the well organized counties into the outlying districts and there trying to raise a crop. I don't believe the American Tobacco Co. has enough tobacco on hand to last them two years, or even one year. I think the cutting out of the 1906 crop will win the fight."

U. G. Saunders, Director of the Burley Tobacco Society for Fleming county, in regard to the 10 per cent of the amount of the sales that is being retained, says: "The facts are that this 10 per cent. that is being held back at present on the 1906 crop is for the purpose of distributing the entire crop when it is all sold. To illustrate, if part of this crop is sold for 15 cents and something should happen that the rest of it would only bring 12 cents and some of the counties didn't get in on the first deal we would have enough reserve on hand to equalize the counties. This 10 per cent has nothing to do with the expenses. We charge the man that we sell to $3 per hogshead on every hogshead he buys above the selling price and that is set aside to finance and pay the expenses of the society, which I believe will pay the expenses."

There is a disposition on the part of some of the land owners in Belleview precinct to return to the cultivation of the osier willow, to which, 50 years ago, hundreds of acres of the river and creek bottoms in that neighborhood were devoted, and which proved a very profitable crop until a small bug appeared, and worked on the willows until they were worthless. A hard fight was made against the destructive insects but they came to stay and hundreds of acres that had been producing fine willows for many years were grubbed and planted in other crops. A few small patches of oslers were kept in existence, and by the fact that the bugs have apparently disappeared, some are encouraged to again try the once very profitable crop, and it is hoped that their fondest anticipations will be realized.

The people in the Big Bone neighborhood and the upper end of Gallatin county are looking forward, with pleasure, to the completion of a good bridge to span Big Bone creek at the point known as "The Fish Trap." A bridge at that point will establish a communication between Boone and Gallatin counties that can not be interrupted by back water at any ordinarily high stage in the Ohio river.

W. T. SMITH.

William T. Smith born in Madison county, Virginia, January 22, 1819, died at the home of his son, James E. Smith, near Burlington, April 13, 1908, just one year and four days after his wife passed away. Mr. Smith was a son of Thos. and Polly Smith, and was one of a family of six sons and two daughters. His parents moved from Virginia to Ohio, afterwards coming to this county about 1837, their first home in Kentucky being in the neighborhood of Richwood, this county. His father and mother were pioneers in this country, Thomas Smith being born February 12th, 1762. [illegible] Smith, January 5th, 1795. Thomas Smith was related to the noted Capt. John Smith, one of the Jamestown Virginia, settlers.

February 24th, 1842 William T. Smith and Miss Polly Gaines, daughter of Richard Gaines, were married. To them one child, James E. Smith, who survives, was born. For sixty-five years they shared the joys and sorrows of husband and wife. Mr. Smith was the last of the family of eight, all except him and his brother, John Henry Smith, dying of consumption.

Mr. Smith had lived on the farm where he died ever since 1844. He was a neat and prosperous farmer, always having everything done in the proper manner at the proper time. In religion he was an Old Baptist, was a close student of the Bible and was well informed and an able defender of the doctrine he believed taught by the scriptures. He was a man well known throughout the county, especially by the older class of citizens, and was held in the very highest esteem by all. He was an excellent neighbor, and he and his wife were noted as entertainers before they were overtaken by physical decline.

But few live to reach the advanced age at which Mr. Smith died, and retain unimpaired until the last their mental faculties. But this was true of him, and until he was in the icy grasp of death his mind was as clear and reliable as that of any young person, consequently it was a pleasure to converse with him in regard to the events of the long past. Physically, he was a most remarkably well preserved man, and was able to go about without an effort, until within a short time of his death, which was a great satisfaction to him, as he was a man who enjoyed the company of his friends.

The funeral services were conducted, last Wednesday at 2 o'clock p. m., at the Universalist church in Burlington, by his favorite minister, Rev. H. M. Curry, in the presence of a very large congregation of relatives and friends.

After the funeral sermon the remains were placed in the vault from which they were interred in the family lot in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery last Friday afternoon.

Mr. Smith will be missed greatly in Burlington, to which place he had made almost daily visits for several years, and where he was the life of every crowd that was favored with his presence. All will reverence and cherish his memory.

At Elliston Saturday a band of night riders went to the depot, took two hogsheads of Joe Turley's tobacco, broke the hoops and rolled it down the steep hill into Ten Mile. Tobacco may be found on every bush for miles.

They then returned to Mr. Turley's barn and burned up another hogshead. There was a note left for Mr. Turley warning him to say nothing about the affair.

At Flingsville on Monday night another band variously estimated from 50 to 200 approached the house of Samson Tomlin who had some tobacco beds. This band was seen organizing just about the time church let out, so Mr. Tomlin was warned of their approach by some unknown party. When the band drew near Mr. Tomlin opened fire, which was returned briskly. Presumably a thousand shots were fired, the house being filled with holes. It is claimed some of the riders were crippled, but of course this will never be known.

One lady who saw the band says: "They came and went as orderly as a funeral procession, no loud talking was heard." Parties passing say that Mr. Tomlin has since removed the canvas from his beds. It seems as though the farmers are determined to have no 1907 crop.—Williamstown Courier.

When Boone county was handed the iron bridge that spans Dry Creek near its mouth, she became in possession of a gold brick as it were. The structure appears to have seen its best days and has entered a decline. At least such an inference is justified by the frequent allowances the fiscal court is required to make to keep it in a condition safe for travel.

Doc Clore[illegible] the operator at Waterloo, reports that the prospects are good for the construction of the turnpike from Belleview to Waterloo. He says the necessary amount of money has been subscribed, and several bids will be made for the work.

The people in Verona neighborhood will get busy in the turnpike business early this spring, and they will make the dirt fly for several months, in which time they expect [illegible] their mileage of macadamized roads.

Three or four parties, it is said, desire the job of carrier on rural route three from Burlington, should it be established.

The Burlington and Gunpowder Baptist churches have united in calling Rev. Stith, of Pendleton county, as their minister.

Dr. W. O. Rouse will be in Cincinnati for the next several weeks taking a post-graduate course at the Ohio Medical College.

The next public schools will be taught under the new school law, but considerable work has to be done before it can be put in operation.

Rupert Rogers and Finnell Peak, two prominent bachelors of Walton neighborhood, were guests of Burlington friends a day or two last week.

Elmer Connelly found two places in the road on his rural route, last week, that he was afraid to tackle, but, fortunately, he was able to evade them.

R. W. Clark, of Cincinnati, is here meeting his old friends and customers. He will not return to Burlington to engage in business as stated last week.

Several ladies have, recently, journeyed to the court-house cupola to view the handsome landscape to be seen from that elevation at this season of the year.

Probably the last stock bills of the season were printed at this office the latter part of last week. The run of that class of work was larger than usual, this year.

The very favorable reports that come from the Union and Hebron creameries are calculated to create a demand for creameries at other points in the county.

Ed Rice, of Idlewild neighborhood, was in town last Friday to receive about 45 hogs for Browbrink, of Lawrenceburg, who will put them on stop at the local distillery.

Dr. W. H. Blanton, of Erlanger, came over last Wednesday to attend the funeral of Mr. W. T. Smith, and to visit his sisterinlaw, Mrs. Sarah Riley, who was quite ill at that time.

The Odd Fellows expect to have a big time at Big Bone Springs next Saturday. Arraugements are being made for the entertainment of several hundred of the members of the order.

A considerable portion of the land that has been broken to date has been too wet, but the farmers grew restless under the protracted wet weather, hence their activity in the furrow.

The show of local horses at the Erlanger and Florence fairs this year ought to be better than for several years, as that class of animals have been bred up considerably in the past three years.

There will be unusual activity in the Belleview tomato district this season, and when that vegetable is ready for the local cannery there will scarcely be teams enough to deliver them as fast as they ripen.

Judge Cason has had the recent order of the fiscal court in regard to working the public roads in 1908 printed, and each overseer will be furnished with a copy for reference during the season of activity.

R. C. Gaines, of Idlewild, has sold to H. S. Tanner his farm of 76 acres on the road between Limaburg and Hebron. Price, $3,800. This is the farm that Mr. Gaines got from Jas. Kelly in their recent land deal.

Last Thursday Atty. G. G. Hughes subbed for his son, Willie, carrier on rural route No. 1. He enjoys an occasional swing around through the country, and especially on such a day as that of last Thursday.

Too much moisture at this season of the year makes the farmers restless. When they get a good start with their crops in the spring they have more confidence in their success, and there is a general good feeling among them.

A band of pretty good musical ability attracted attention by their frequent after-supper rehearsals, recently. The band is composed of young men, who, with a competent instructor, would make a splendid choir.

Herbert Kirkpatrick was on the jump, last week, preparing his last shipment of furs for the season. He handled a great many furs, but on a close margin, consequently his profits are not large enough to pay for a block of stone fronts.

John Baldon, who returned from Denver, Colorado, about two weeks ago, has gone to hard work, which, together with Kentucky grub, and air, has wrought a great improvement in his appearance, and he has begun to get "sassy" already again.

V. W. Gaines, the Idlewild farmer and dealer in livestock, and J. M. Thompson, the Petersburg dealer in livestock, were among those transacting business in Burlington, last Thursday. Mr. Gaines has about recovered from the attack of blood poison in his hand.

The Petersburg cannery is anticipating a very busy season this year, and preparations are being made to handle probably double the amount of tomatoes it handled last year, and to increase its capacity it will use a crimper instead of sealing the cans as it did last season.

In some streams in this part of the country fish are said to have been biting and the sport has been very fine, while in others that look equally as favorable for the presence of the finny tribe not one of them can be found. The cause of this is unknown to the anglers of long experience.

It is now the calculation to open the base ball season at the local park on the afternoon of the first Saturday in May, when manager Kirkpatrick's line-up will meet the strong Bellevue team, which cleaned up an Aurora team so completely on the 11th inst. It will be a battle royal on May 2nd.

Hear that the several farmers' telephone lines which center at Waterloo are contemplating a considerable improvement in their exchange. A large number of lines pass through the switch there, and the operator ought to be furnished with every means to economize labor and expedite his work.

Thomas J. Stephens, of Buffalo, was among the visitors from a distance in Burlington last Friday. He appeared to have wintered in excellent condition. When B. B. Hume first saw him he thought it was "Rastus," of horsetrading fame, and he at once began looking over his stock to determine which one to trot out.

The people who would be served by rural route three from Burlington, as contemplated, are growing anxious about the service, and are very desirous to see it put on at an early date. That route, if established, will serve a large and populous territory, some of the residents of which are quite a distance from a postoffice, especially since the discontinuance of the Wenceda and Sand Run offices.

As the spring time approaches see that your chickens do not bother your neighbor. If they do, do not get angry if they come home headless. An old hen with twelve chickens can tear up a flower bed in six minutes and four seconds that required weeks of careful preparation on the part of the housekeeper. Section 19,296,323 of the Kentucky Statutes says: "Keep your blamed old hens at home."—Paris Democrat.

John Baldon is figuring on moving his saw mill from its present location over on Gunpowder to a site on W. H. Walton's farm near what is known as the Henderson pike about five miles out on the Burlington and Belleview pike. Several parties in that neighborhood want large bills of lumber cut, while several others who are not taken into consideration are expected to have sawing done while the mill is convenient.

There is no diminution of interest from that of the last few years on the part of the breeders of horses and mules in this county. They recognize the fact that a good horse always brings a good price, and that the same holds good in the case of a mule, consequently they have been, for several years, paying more attention to the quality of sires, and the results will become manifest shortly, when, it is confidently predicted, that no county in the State can boast of a better class of horses than that to be found in Boone.

Milton Bryson, who came to the county infirmary a few days ago from Constance, went back there one day last week to get some carpenter tools belonging to Hilton. He returned by the way of Limaburg, wading the creek at each of the fords, and before the old man reached Burlington, his strength was exhausted and he fell by the wayside near G. G. Hughes', where Willie Hughes discovered him, and Good Samaritan like, he brought him into town, when Elmer and Thos. Fowler took him on to the infirmary. It took the old fellow several days to recover entirely from the labor and exposure resulting from the trip, and it was fortunate for him that he was discovered so soon after he went down, otherwise he would have perished on the road side.

Not a drop of Alcohol

Doctors prescribe very little, if any, alcohol these days. They prefer strong tonics and alteratives. This is all in keeping with modern medical science. It explains why Ayer's Sarsaparilla is now made entirely free from alcohol. Ask your doctor. Follow his advice.

The poultry business has assumed considerable proportions in this county in the last five years, and the breeding of chickens and other fowls is receiving attention in every quarter, and there has been a great improvement in the class of fowls to be found in the barnyard. In consequence of the improvement of the chickens, poultry has become a source of considerable revenue in Boone county, and furnishes the table in many a rural home with about all it is necessary to provide from the grocery, and thus it produces a supplemental revenue that is allowing many a hard working individual to accumulate means, who, otherwise, would have to divert the fruits of his labor to the purchase of these necessaries. The hen has been studied closely for several years, and her producing qualities have been increased to a remarkable degree, and some claim that the limit of her possibilities as an egg and meat producer have not been attained, but that they will continue to increase for a long time to come. Recognizing what the hen has accomplished in the last few years, she is bound to be acknowledged a very great factor in economic affairs.

It has been demonstrated in several instances that by using the harrow and the drag on the public roads at intervals during the winter and spring months, the annoyance occasioned by bad roads is reduced very considerably. The time and labor thus spent prove a very profitable investment to those who have to use the dirt roads at this season of the year or a little earlier.

FROM CITY TO FARM

"Ye who listen with credulity to the whisperings of fancy; who pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope; who expect that age will perform the promises of youth, and that the deficiencies of the present day will be supplied by the morrow;—attend to the history of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia."

The Independence of Farm Life

What strikes the casual sojourner most who comes from the city to the country is the total absence of any look of worry in the faces of the people about him. He sees many types of the dwellers in rural districts, and all stages of existence included, and men and women, boys and girls, all seem to be freed from that hungry, anxious look, which shows so plainly in the visages of the dwellers in large towns. When they are through with their work they show it in a sense of having thrown off the cares of the day. In the cities, and especially on the sidewalks and in the cars, the men and women who have been released for a brief respite from their tasks have a hunted and careworn look, apprehensive to a degree.

Strikes, lock-outs, competition, approaching old age, the rises in the price of the necessaries in life, the cost of living, the dread grind that reduces men and women to machines which must regulate their movements by the tick of a clock or the turn of a handle to testify to unerring and slavish punctuality—all these, while they may not so much bring wrinkles before one's time, make the twin wraiths of fear and anxiety look out of the eyes of most of those who carry the burdens of work-a-day life in the metropolis.

What does the mere problem of living mean in the country? We found that out very quickly. Rent, including an ample garden plot and extra ground for potatoes, with all the fruit we could use, including apples, peaches, plums, cherries, grapes and blackberries, with the use of a long and short-distance telephone, all the wood we needed for fuel if we cared to cut it, a house of the rooms with a pump and cistern for kitchen use, and a fine well at the east porch, a yard with shady maples about it, and a lawn of blue grass all around the house—all this for $11 a month.

We could have kept chickens and had a cow and it would not have cost us anything extra. I had the run of the entire farm of 160 acres to hunt on, and in summer time we could get all the "greens" we could use by simply walking into the pastures close by and gathering them.

Meat at the town, four miles away, was ten cents a pound for the very finest steaks, much finer than any I could get in Chicago at any price. When the farmers around us "killed," we could buy meat for from six to eight cents a pound. Butter was 20 cents a pound the year round. Milk, eggs and poultry were cheap, and groceries the same as in the city. With the hiring of a girl at $2.50 a week, and with the addition to the table of our gardening products, the average expense for four of us was from $35 to $38 a month. Did some one say "clothes?" You don't wear clothes in the country, you just use up what you take from the city; and for the most part go clad like Joseph, "in a coat of many colors."

Hickory shirts for a man, brown duck trousers and coat, no hat, collar, cuffs, or tie, or maybe a loose black silk tie for the turn-down collar that goes with the hickory shirt, and that completes a man's dress in the country. My laundry bill for two years for "boiled" shirts and linen collars was about $2.60. All a woman needs is her old clothes, a duck walking suit consisting of a short skirt and a neat-fitting jacket (if she's got a good figure), plenty of shirt waists which can be laundered at home, and good, stout walking shoes. If she is wise enough to cut out the stiff, high collars, her neck will shed all its wrinkles, as a duck's back sheds rain, after she has given her neck entire freedom for six months.

Did some one say "sickness?" You don't get sick in the country. You get out of the habit of it, mostly. Plenty of fruit, vegetables, pure water and open air, have a depressing effect on the drug store trade and doctor's bills. We only telephoned for the doctor once in two years, when the baby was scaring us into a frenzy one night, and the message got mixed and he didn't come after all. And the baby was all right, at that.

What can you do with $35 or $38 in a large city? You can just about get one of those ghastly "joints" called a "modern steam-heated flat," where you either freeze or melt, take your choice. Where there isn't any front yard, and no back yard to speak of. And then comes your "girl," your gas bill, your telephone bill, your laundry bills, your grocery bills, your meat, ice, bakery, vegetable and other bills, your downtown expenses, car-fare; this, that and the other expense until you are driven like a galley slave to make both ends meet, and even then you are in debt usually at the end of the year. And you have been eating poor stuff and drinking impure water, and paying doctor's bills, and you're nervous, anxious and unhappy. What's the use? Honestly, what is there in it for you?

Now you can get a house in the country in a good many localities for even seven dollars a month with room for chickens, a cow and a place to keep a pig. You can have a butcher kill your pig and have your winter meat, or a good deal of it, in that way. You can keep a cow and strike out the butter and milk items. You can keep chickens and knock off the eggs and poultry items. You can have a garden besides, and thus reduce it all to groceries and clothes. And, mind you, this can be done, and still be near enough to a large city to go in and see whatever you want to at the theaters, etc.

So what is the use of keeping your nose to the grindstone just to keep up a "bluff" of living in a certain way?

Of course, if you like that sort of thing, you ought not to be deprived of it. The item of ice in the country means having a little dumb-waiter arrangement run down in the well where you keep your stuff cold all summer with no expense, and little trouble. The item of ice in the city means being under the thumbs of a lot of pirates who treat you like a parcel of beggars. Everything in the city costs right up to the limit. In the country you raise almost everything you need. A good-sized family can make five acres of land near any large city support them all. By near a city, I mean within 40 to 70 miles from town, and that is near enough.

The farmers in our vicinity cared very little "whether school kept or not." They worked or they let it alone, just as the mood happened to possess them. They all of them had good horses and buggies, and in the winter time they got out their sleighs and cutters and so they got about in all seasons very comfortably. If they owned their own farms they were, of course, even more independent than the "renters," but the "renters" themselves were just as well off as to the luxuries and the necessities in the country, as the landed proprietors.

They always had at least two crops out every year, and if one crop failed, which was almost never, the other crop was a success, and they always made some money, at least. They all had fruit on the farms, and raised good gardens. They had chickens and sold their extra eggs and chickens and so paid their grocery bills, and more, too. They had hogs fattening for winter meat, and they butchered a heifer or a steer once in awhile for fresh beef. They had never known in their lives what it was to worry about a bare living. As for "industrial" troubles, that is outside of agriculture, at present. There was no union to fight with. When harvest time came around, each man helped his neighbor, and the improved machinery of to-day made the work comparatively easy. When the farmers worked, they were not cooped up in a smoky, choky atmosphere in the midst of smoke and soot, the whirr of machinery, their lungs filled with grit and iron filings.

They were out in the open, breathing the purest air, and with all the four winds of heaven blowing about them. If it was storming, they did not go out to work; they did not have to. Mostly on rainy days the boys and men in my neighborhood went hunting. Or they sat around the kitchen stove and cracked pecans, hickory nuts and walnuts, ate apples, drank cider and played the fiddle. They were a hustling lot, a good many of them, and they raised crops all right, but they did not kill themselves working. They had a little enjoyment while they went along; and if a circus or a county fair happened along they could all quit and go to see it, for every man was an independent sovereign. They waited for no man's beck or call, and spoke of no man as "the boss," and never had to gallop back after dinner to pull a string or give their name to a "lookout," so as not to get fined for being a couple of seconds late.

When they felt like it, they laid off and browsed around the farms and fixed up the fences. If I happened to run across a neighbor he could always stop and have a little chat with me. Nobody around to "give him the eye" and make him feel like a cheap criminal. And if it was exceedingly hot some scorching July day, you could go into some of the farmhouses and find active, healthy and first-class farmers reading a paper and reckoning they wouldn't go out that afternoon.

They worked hard when they did work, of course; and some of the work was disagreeable. But they could "lay off" whenever they felt like it, and there was no one to say them nay. The proprietor of a farm had absolutely nothing to say as to when or how his "renter" worked the farm. The "renter" gave his time to raising a crop, and divided the crop with the landlord. Sometimes the landlord got half, and sometimes a third. If there were light crops, there was very little actual cash divided, but the man on the farm, and his family, had always had a good living out of it.

When a man owned a place of say 80 to a hundred or a hundred and sixty acres, he could farm some of it and rent out the rest, and take it easy. Or he could, like the man I rented from, rent out his house to one party and his land to the adjoining farmers, and trade in cattle and hogs, feeding them and shipping them into the cities.

After the boys were 21 they were out for themselves, and were perfectly able not only to take care of themselves, but they had learned their "trade," and could support a family. Mostly, the farmer boys marry early, and race suicide is something they know nothing whatever about. Big families are the rule, not the exception. Anywhere from seven to ten children is a good average sizable family in the country. The idea of straggling around with one or two children would seem queer to most of them.

After the crops are in, and especially after corn is "shucked" and cribbed, there is an almost complete lull in farm work. The winter wood is often gotten "up" before cold weather begins, and from the last days in November along early in March there is practically nothing to do on a farm except the everlasting "chores." These consist of feeding the stock, currying and rubbing down the horses, bringing in wood, milking and doing a few little other odds and ends. A family of two or three boys and the head of the household can do all this in an hour and a half for morning and night. The rest of the time for a period of about, if not quite, three months, is just nothing at all but resting by the fireplace or the stoves, reading the papers, visiting, going to the dances or to town, attending court, and hearing the speeches, and in other ways enjoying the leisure time.

One-fourth, therefore, of the average farmer's life on the farm, apart from many extra stormy days, taking it year in and year out, is a vacation. Of course, he may go out and nail up a fence occasionally, and chop a little wood, or do some other mild "stunt." But the crops have been gathered, the fall plowing is done, and there is really nothing for him to do. Some of the more enterprising boys in our neighborhood went into the coal banks along the line of the little streams among the hills and with pick and dynamite unearthed many tons of soft coal, and made good money at it. But this was a business venture separate and apart from farming, and only the huskiest of the hustlers tackled it.

Now just imagine, if you can, any clerk, or working man, or professional or business man, laying off three months in each year. Wouldn't that be something like the happy land of Canaan? I suppose a few hundred thousand of the overworked "city" would hate to think of "holing up" about December first and reappearing about March first to go to work again? Talk about eight hours a day! Why, these farmers have got the entire world beaten on living easy and escaping worry. What do they care if stocks go up or down? They don't own any stock. What difference does it make to them if the trusts corral things? Not a bit. It may beat them out of some money, but the loss is only a few dollars to each district, and there's only a little grumbling about it.

Can you get the farmer into a corner? Not in one thousand years. He can always make a living, and at least a little more. And he can always be independent where the man in the cities must duck, and cringe, and wear his soul out against the stones of hardship and misfortune. The farmer can have a daily metropolitan paper at his gate in most rural districts now, on the day the sheet is issued. He can have his magazines, his piano, his library—all these, and his telephone, and other conveniences.

It is true that he does not get the glare and glitter of city life, but that is purchased with much travail and sorrow, the maximum of toil for the minimum of gain. He is his own master, and there is no visible or invisible whip raised over his shoulders. We saw this very plainly as the farmers about us sent their teams ahead in the furrows, or tossed the shining sheaves of wheat aloft in the July sun.

They represented the sane life; the sanest way of living. If there was the saving grace of social communion in the prairie states, there, too, the farmers would be happier; but statistics show that farmers' wives in the western states, where the farms are scattered and visiting a task, have been unable to stand the isolation and have broken under the strain. But in the eastern and northern states, and particularly in the Mississippi valley, the farmers have reduced the art of living to a science that spells happiness.

Even in our little experiment we saw how simple living was when you were on a farm. For what we paid for a house in the city we could live on entirely in the country. But suppose a man hasn't a trade, or a profession by which he can earn that much? What then? Learn to farm. You can learn enough about it in a year to support yourself. There's no secret to it. Dig and sow. Nature will do the rest.

First Greek Minister to Come Here.

Lambros A. Coromilas, the first minister of Greece to come to the United States, is one of the most interesting figures in the diplomatic circles at Washington. He is a great-grandson of the famous Greek patriot of the same name. Minister Coromilas has himself had some war-time adventures, having been captured by the Turks during the eastern Roumelian trouble in 1886. He speaks English fluently and is extremely fond of history.

ROUT KURD RIDERS

COSSACKS WIN PITCHED BATTLE, THOUGH OUTNUMBERED.

DESTROY THREE VILLAGES

Robber Tribes in Persian Territory Severely Punished—French Repulse Fierce Attack of Berbers.

Tiflis. — The Russian troops which recently invaded Persian territory in the vicinity of Lenkoran for the purpose of punishing Kurdish raiders of the Russian garrison at the Frontier post, Belesuvar, April 13, acted with a promptitude calculated to overawe the tribes of the first class near Belesuvar.

The fight which ensued assumed the proportions of a pitched battle. The Russians were greatly outnumbered, but they pressed the battle with great vigor and routed the Persians, inflicting a loss of 34 men killed and 50 wounded. The remainder of the tribesmen broke and fled. The Russians lost one officer and seven soldiers wounded.

Cossacks Destroy Villages.

The cannonade set fire to the village of Belesuvar, the destruction of which was completed by the Cossacks after a ruthless house to house search for the Russian arms stolen during the raid of April 13.

Pressing their advantage, the Russians bombarded the neighboring villages of Kodzhabeklu and Zarlah and razed both.

The non-combatants suffered great losses.

Home of Robber Tribes.

The theater of war is in the mountain range of Karadagh, which wedges in the Russian boundary, and is the traditional kingdom of robber tribes which boast thousands of fighters armed with modern implements of war and organized with a semblance of military discipline. The robbers had cut the telegraph lines in order to hamper the mobilization of an expedition which Persia is assembling against them at Tabriz.

The Russian expeditionary force now on Persian soil aggregates 400 Cossacks, a squadron of sharpshooters and a battery of machine guns. It was intended to send a much larger force there, but a phenomenal flood of the Aras river hinders the concentration of reinforcements from Baku and other points north.

French Repulse Berbers.

Colomb Bechar, Algeria.—A French column posted on Talzaza hill, which commands the plain of Tamet, was attacked fiercely at daylight by a number of Berbers, who, with nomad Arabs, have been concentrating for some weeks past on the western frontier of Algeria.

Although surprised, the French force rallied and fought desperately, not only beating off their adversaries, but pursuing them for a distance of six miles.

So hot was the pursuit that the Arabs, in their headlong flight, abandoned their dead and wounded.

Several green flags of the prophet also fell into the hands of the French.

This French victory was costly. Twenty-eight men, including an officer, were killed and 100 men, including ten officers, were wounded.

The Berber losses were much heavier, no less than 125 dead bodies being found by the French troops.

The French pursuit was stopped by darkness.

ALDRICH BILL TABLED.

House Committee Votes to Lay Aside Currency Measure.

Washington.—The house committee on banking and currency Friday voted unanimously to table the Aldrich financial bill. It also was decided to give a hearing to Representative Vreeland of New York, who recently introduced a financial bill which is looked upon as a substitute for the Aldrich measure.

The discussion in committee was brief. The only point debated was as to whether or not the committee should make a formal report giving its reasons to the house for its unfavorable action, and the conclusion finally was reached that no reasons should be given. Consequently the committee's report will be a mere statement of the action of the committee.

Pat McCarren Unseated.

New York.—State Senator Patrick H. McCarren, leader of the Kings County Democracy, was unseated Wednesday night as a delegate to the party's state convention in Carnegie hall to select representatives to the Denver national convention.

The convention then selected delegates-at-large and adopted a platform which declared the delegation should be unhampered by instructions.

State Police for Chester.

Chester, Pa.—Following early morning scenes of wild disorder during which two men were slightly injured by bullets and others were beaten by crowds, a request was sent to Gov. Stuart Thursday asking him to send two companies of the state police to this city at once to preserve order. The governor granted the request.

REALIZE VALUE OF PRINTING.

Churches Show Appreciation of Great Importance of Literature.

One of the present day signs of the church's appreciation of the importance of publicity is shown by the amount of literature that is distributed every Sunday by clergymen of all denominations to those who attend the service. Most Catholic parishes throughout the greater city publish a monthly magazine of from 12 to 20 pages, and many Episcopal churches issue weekly bulletins of at least four pages. In one of the Trinity chapels last Sunday a special pamphlet of 16 pages, with eight illustrations and two maps, was distributed at the door, and an advertisement on the back showed that it was the 805th "leaflet" of its kind issued. While most of this literature is by way of an appeal for funds and a greater personal interest in religious matters, not a little of the text is educational along church lines. The musical director of St. Patrick's cathedral has evolved a plan, through this same avenue of print, of teaching the congregation to phrase two hymns properly by furnishing the hymn cards that are left in each pew with an index of signs marking the congregation's part of the hymn, that of the choir, and one as to the proper places of breathing. Print is also called upon here for another purpose of the same general import, for on the swinging leather doors—just where they will catch the eye—are tacked typewritten lists of books suitable for Lenten reading. It would seem that the church, like trade, realizes the value of print.—New York Press.

Caterpillars Brought by Hailstorm.

An army of 200,000 caterpillars has appeared in the Krugersdorp district, which recently suffered severely from a hailstorm.

Old colonists connect the visitation with the recent fall of hail, and they recall instances where plagues of insects have invariably followed a phenomenal storm.

It is suggested that the stones carry some germ which is launched into life when the melting process begins, and farmers who have penetrated deeply into the mysteries of the veld trace the periodical visitations of huge swarms of butterflies and moths and even of the dreaded tick to the evolution of a germ in the hailstone deposited on the ground.

Venerable Free Staters now resident in the district have vivid memories of frightful storms in the late '60s, and in the early '70s, when similar caterpillar plagues devastated the crops in the conquered territory, and they also recall the interesting fact that when the black insects arrived the locusts disappeared.—Rhodesia Herald.

Pressed Flower Habit Killed.

"Where are the pressed flowers of yesteryear?" lamented the sentimental girl. "The picture postcard craze, alas, has destroyed the pressed flower habit as well as the art of correspondence. Before postcards began to flood the world my globe-trotting friends very often backed up their description of some new place visited by inclosing a pressed flower or a leaf indigenous to that particular soil or plucked maybe from some historic spot. It was a pretty sentiment, but it has been squelched by the picture card. Nobody who travels takes time to write letters now, consequently there is no way of sending back pressed flowers."—New York Sun.

Electricity Made Big Change.

Ten years ago New Yorkers were not seriously opposed to the "shades of night." They took these shades as a matter of course and made little effort to raise them. Since electrical artists have shown what can be done with the twinkling, incandescent globe, however, New Yorkers are against darkness of any character. As a result that city is now the most brilliantly illuminated in the world, and its population is spending more than $50,000,000 annually to keep it so.

HOSPITALITY REWARDED

God Gives a Son to Shunammite Woman.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Edson.)

Scripture Authority — 2 Kings, 4:8-17.

SERMONETTE.

True piety finds its expression in genuine hospitality.

Doors opened to admit the faithful servants of the Lord let in the blessing of God as well.

To give to supply the need of one who is engaged in God's work ... give to the work ... such giving never goes without its reward.

God can find shelter and food for his servants in most unexpected places.

The entertainment of this plain, unassuming prophet, poor and despised, except to the few in Israel who were faithful to God, was not going to bring social prestige to this Shunammite woman, in fact her hospitality perhaps was going to cost her the regard of many of the "swell set" of Shunem. But enough of the light of righteousness and truth had shined into her heart to make her understand that there was more honor in entertaining one of the humble servants of God than in filling her house with a choice company of her rich neighbors.

To-day we need to learn the joy and blessing of true hospitality. "When thou makest a dinner or supper," said Jesus, "call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbors, lest they also bid thee again and a recompense be made thee. But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind; and thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."

The good heart is sensitive to goodness in others. This Shunammite woman "perceived that Elisha was a holy man."

The good heart also delights in fellowship with goodness. It was a real joy and privilege for this Shunammite woman to receive the spiritual blessing which Elisha the prophet was able to bring to her and her husband.

If this Shunammite woman had been absorbed in the latest fashion plates, or been gadding about to afternoon card parties and social teas, or the matinee, she never would have had eyes to see this man of God as he passed to and fro by her home.

This Shunammite woman never dreamed that her kindly service was to bring to her the treasure for which her heart longed most. And yet is it not a literal fulfillment of the declaration of Scripture that if we "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, all these things shall be added unto us?"

THE STORY.

THERE was a certain woman of Shunem in the land of Israel who, as Scripture says, was great—great as concerned the possession of this world's goods; great as to abilities, for she was a wise woman and ordered the affairs of her husband's home after the most careful manner of the eastern housewife; great as to her womanly virtues, and the kindly deeds which she was constantly performing for her neighbors and friends; great as to her piety; but, above all, great in the burden of sorrow which rested upon her heart—a sorrow which she hid from her husband and the world, a sorrow which when it strikes deep into a woman's heart is greater than any sorrow which a woman may know—the sorrow of a childless home.

When as a bride she had come to take her place in the splendid home which her husband had provided for her it had been with the joyful thought that children would come to bless and make bright the home. To her, as with all women in that eastern land, the childless home was a reproach and the crowning honor of wifehood was motherhood. But all through the long years of her wedded life this joy and blessing had been denied her, and it seemed as though her heart must break with the burden of its grief.

Her husband, conscious of the yearning of her heart—for bravely as she tried she could not hide it altogether from his fond, loving eyes—sought tenderly to be not only husband but son to her, and tried to fill her life with activities and pleasures which would take her mind from her grief. And she being too true a woman to be swallowed up of her sorrow, found relief in the performance of kindly deeds which endeared her to neighbors and friends and made her name great in Shunem.

Now it chanced one day as she went about her gentle ministeries that an errand of mercy took her to the other side of town, where a widow woman and her three children dwelt in poverty. In passing through the market place she observed a solitary figure sitting in a secluded spot. His cloak or mantle was drawn closely around him, but from without the folds of the garment which enveloped his head there looked a strong face, whose penetrating eye seemed to take in every detail and movement of the busy place. Knots of people gathered here and there talked in low tones and the furtive glances which were cast in the direction of the silent figure indicated plainly that it was the stranger who was the subject of conversation. But no one, moved by friendly impulse, seemed inclined to speak a kindly word of greeting to the stranger or bid him welcome. All this the woman noted and then, as she passed along on her way, she saw a man emerge from one of the booths of the market place bearing in his hands some of the barley cakes he had purchased there. These he placed in the hands of the silent figure who rose to receive them.

"Evidently the servant of the stranger," the woman thought to herself as she watched the two pass on their way, eating their frugal repast as they went.

"Have they no friends?" she asked herself, "that they thus come to Shunem and depart without anyone asking, 'whence comest thou? or whither goest thou?' It was a goodly face which the stranger had," she continued to herself as she went on her way. "Who can he be?"

To this last question which arose in her mind came a partial answer that day as she visited the widow, for she found that the latter, while out picking up sticks with which to make a fire over which to cook the little cakes of oil and meal for herself and her children had met this stranger and his servant, and he had spoken such words of encouragement and blessing to her that she had been greatly helped, and finding that she was of a branch of the tribe of Levi, he had promised to see that her son was entered in one of the schools of the prophets, where he could prepare for the priestly service.

From that time on the Shunammite woman watched for tidings of this stranger, and over the pathway which he had passed she found many a poor and humble one to tell of the deeds of kindness which he had shown them as he had passed by.

So it came to pass one day that as she beheld the man and his servant passing by her own home she went forth to meet him and constrained him to tarry and refresh himself after his long and wearisome journey. This he did and, as many an one has found since then, she came to know that the entertaining of one of God's servants brought blessing upon her household.

She had a great yearning for goodness and her greatest delight was to sit under the teaching of the prophet Elisha and receive from his hands that spiritual teaching which she needed. This feeling her husband came to share with her, and there was no more welcome guest in any home in all the land of Israel, not even the king himself, than was the prophet Elisha in the home of this Shunammite woman and her husband.

But goodness and kindly service never go unrewarded by God, and it came to pass as the prophet came and went the longing grew upon him to pour some special blessing into the life of this home whose hospitality he had enjoyed.

"What shall it be?" he asked his servant Gehazi, with whom one day he talked the matter over. "Would they that I should speak to the king that he shew them kindness, or to the captain of the hosts of Israel?"

"Nay, not that, my master," exclaimed Gehazi, "for they dwell in security and plenty in their own land in Shunem. But verily she hath no child."

"Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord; and the fruit of the womb is his reward," exclaimed the prophet, quoting the words of the Psalmist. "It shall indeed he so in this case."

A full year has passed since Elisha's last visit to Shunem, for service in other parts of the kingdom have kept him busy, but one day he turns his steps thither, accompanied by his servant, Gehazi.

"Let us go up, for this Shunammite woman rejoiceth in a son," he exclaimed. "She hath shewn great kindness unto others, and God hath rewarded her in accordance with his word. Let us carry God's blessing up to the child."

And Elisha found it even in accordance with the word he had spoken, and the mother greeted him with words of rejoicing, saying:

"The Lord hath made me to rejoice, for he hath taken away my reproach and hath given me a son."

"May the Lord ever keep thee faithful to the sacred mission of motherhood," responded the prophet, fervidly.

THE PAINTING SEASON.

Good results in painting at the least cost depend largely upon the material chosen. Paint is a simple compound and the ingredients can be easily tested. The solid part or pigment should be White Lead. The liquid part should be Linseed Oil. Those best informed on painting always buy these ingredients separately and have their painter mix them fresh for each job. Before the mixing the test is made.

Place a pea-sized bit of White Lead on a piece of charcoal or piece of wood. Blow the flame against it and see what it will do. If it is pure White Lead, little drops of bright, pure metallic lead will appear, and with patience the White Lead can be completely reduced to one globule of metallic lead. This is because pure White Lead is made from metallic lead.

You may test dozens of other so-called White Leads and not be able to reduce one of them to lead. If they will not change wholly to lead but leave a residue it is clear that adulterant is present.

If you should have your painting done with such materials, no matter how cheap they might seem, it would be costly in the end.

National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City, are sending on request a blowpipe free to any one about to have painting done, so that the White Lead may be tested. With it will be sent a handsomely printed booklet having as its frontispiece the "Dutch Boy Painter," reproduced from the original painting. This little painter has become noted as the guaranty of pure White Lead.

A FORGOTTEN ROMANCE.

"Do you remember, Jane, 20 years ago, a moonlight night, when I whispered, tenderly: 'Jennie, I love you,' and you answered, passionately: 'John, you nose looks so funny and swollen. Do you suppose something's hitten it?'"

Discipline Above All.

Near Settat, in Morocco, during a fierce engagement, a soldier of the French foreign legion was struck by a Moorish bullet and fell flat on his face. "He is dead," said his corporal, leaning over him. Lifting a battered face, the legionary groaned: "No, corporal; not dead, but badly hurt." "Where is your packet of lint?" demanded the corporal. "I have forgotten it," said the soldier, trying to wipe away the blood. "Two days' arrest," shouted the corporal, and lifting the wounded man onto his back he staggered to the nearest doctor amid a hail of bullets.

Afraid of Reverses.

"Why did you turn that young man down?" asked the genial younger partner. "He looked willing and capable."

"He might have been all that," growled the crusty senior, "but I'm told he is an inveterate joker."

"Well, where's the harm in that?"

"It's this: The first thing he'll do if I take him on will be to take me off."

Contentment comes neither by culture nor by wishing; it is reconciliation with one's lot, growing out of an inward superiority to our surroundings.—McLean.

COFFEE EYES.

It Acts Slowly But Frequently Produces Blindness.

The curious effect of slow daily poisoning and the gradual building in of disease as a result, is shown in numbers of cases where the eyes are affected by coffee.

A case in point will illustrate:

A lady in Oswego, Mont., experienced a slow but sure disease settling upon her eyes in the form of increasing weakness and shooting pains with wavy, dancing lines of light, so vivid that nothing else could be seen for minutes at a time.

She says:

"This gradual failure of sight alarmed me and I naturally began a very earnest quest for the cause. About this time I was told that coffee poisoning sometimes took that form, and while I didn't believe that coffee was the cause of my trouble, I concluded to quit it and see.

"I took up Postum Food Coffee in spite of the jokes of Husband whose experience with one cup at a neighbor's was unsatisfactory. Well, I made Postum strictly according to directions, boiling it a little longer, because of our high altitude. The result was charming. I have now used Postum in place of coffee for about 3 months and my eyes are well, never paining me or showing any weakness. I know to a certainty that the cause of the trouble was coffee and the cure was in quitting it and building up the nervous system on Postum, for that was absolutely the only change I made in diet and I took no medicine.

"My nursing baby has been kept in a perfectly healthy state since I have used Postum.

"Mr. ———, a friend, discarded coffee and took on Postum to see if he could be rid of his dyspepsia and frequent headaches. The change produced a most remarkable improvement quickly."

A train from the north pulled into the station at Charlottesville, Va. An elderly man thrust his head out of a window of a day coach and summoned a little colored boy. The following colloquy ensued:

"Little boy, have you a mother?"

"Yassuh."

"Are you faithful to your studies?"

"Do you go to Sunday school?"

CURE AT CITY MISSION.

Awful Case of Scabies—Body a Mass of Sores from Scratching—Her Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"A young woman came to our city mission in a most awful condition physically. Our doctor examined her and told us that she had scabies (the itch), incipient paresis, rheumatism, etc., brought on from exposure. Her poor body was a mass of sores from scratching and she was not able to retain solid food. We worked hard over her for seven weeks but we could see little improvement. One day I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and we bathed our patient well and gave her a full dose of the Resolvent. She slept better that night and the next day I got a box of Cuticura Ointment. In five weeks this young woman was able to look for a position, and she is now strong and well. A Gardening Nation.

In Sweden a gift is made once a year to each school pupil of trees or shrubs to be planted about the home. By law each parish must grant a certain amount of land to be devoted to the purpose of school gardens. There are scores of horticultural societies which employ gardeners to give the public free instruction and advice on fruit and vegetable culture. The natural resources of the country are being increased in this way to a wonderful extent.

WANTED THE WORLD'S OPINION.

Prisoner Had to Have That, Though He Went Without Luxuries.

A certain prisoner landed in jail almost penniless. He was a man who had figured in a number of the town's shady transactions and his name was pretty well known. A few days after his incarceration he wrote to a friend asking for a monthly allowance of ten dollars to be continued during his term of imprisonment. The friend, remembering past favors, remitted the amount each month during a period that covered two trials and the long time intervening. One day it occurred to him to inquire into the manner of expending the allowance. He supposed it was used to buy occasional extra meals, a few cigars and newspapers, but just as a matter of curiosity he asked for particulars. He found, to his astonishment, that the prisoner had never ordered an extra meal and had not smoked a cigar all the time he had been in jail.

"Then what in thunder," demanded the man, "have you been doing with that ten dollars a month?"

"I subscribed to two press clipping bureaus," replied the prisoner coolly. "You don't suppose, do you, that I am going to pass through this, the most critical time of my life, without finding out what everybody has got to say about me?"

TROUBLESOME STOMACHS.

So many digestive disorders afflict men and women now that a select prescription has been secured from a great Battle Creek specialist who offers it freely to those who cannot take sanitarium treatment. Its use for a few weeks is said to completely restore the digestive functions, increase the strength and cure nervousness, insomnia and all symptoms of a distressing nature due to such disorders. Mix these three ingredients together, shake well and take one or two teaspoonfuls after each meal. One ounce compound essence Cardiol, two ounces essence of Pepsin and two ounces syrup of Ginger. One of our best-known druggists, to whom the above was submitted, states positively that a more effective and harmless prescription could not be filled by any one, and that it is familiarly known as the "Rockefeller Cure." Prominent, up-to-date druggists will get the ingredients from their jobber, although most of them keep them in stock.

A Boy on Clergymen.

Bishop Potter, at an ecclesiastical dinner in New York, read a Coopers-town schoolboy's essay on "Clergymen." The essay, which created much amusement, was as follows:

"There are 3 kinds of clergymen bishups, recters and curates. The bishups tell the recters to work and the curats have to do it, a curate is a thin married man, but when he is a recter he gets fuller and can preach longer sermons and hecums a good man."

The Poet's Error.

"Of course," said the poet's friend, "he has his faults, but he's a true poet. He gives his life to the service of the muses—"

"Yes," put in the critic, "but seems to make the mistake of supposing that Bacchus is one of the muses."

The political pot in the Republican camp in the county appears to be boiling to an exciting heat, and next Saturday will witness the gathering of the clans at Burlington to determine who shall be delegates to the district and State conventions. Gallatin county is making a rapid sale of the Equity tobacco. Recently the board of control sold 125 hogsheads of the tobacco and last Saturday sold 677 hogsheads more, bringing more money to that county than the tobacco of any one year for a long time, the organization of the Society of Equity being the factor in this profitable sale. Some of the tobacco sold was of the commonest quality and formerly hardly paid for shipping to the city markets, and this brought 9 cents per pound. This sale was the crop of 1908, of which the county had about 1500 hogsheads.

The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion,
PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $5 discount on the two seasons—paying only $35 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $20 will be collected.

This Stallion is a Mahoghany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone County as his colts speak for themselves. A ring of this Stallion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

Care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur. Positively no business done on Sunday. Parties breeding must follow up the season.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733

PROPERTY OF

High Vine Horse Company,

WALTON, KY.,

In the stud at the stable of Edwards & Best, Walton, Ky., at $20 to insure live foal.

Edwards & Best, - - Managers.

W. L. Gaines, President.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733,

Foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667. Grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730. Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2282, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1665. Second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60. Third dam, Maxey by Granger Fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No 77.

A number of prominent citizens of the locality of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine saddle horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was brought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20.00 to insure.

High Vine was shown at various county fairs, last fall, and was a prize winner at all of them, taking first in the Sweepstakes Saddle and Harness ring at Erlanger, aud defeating the great Chancellor gelding at Sauders. He has proved to be a fine breeder, and his colts will be ready sellers at fancy prices. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and keeping.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from breeding of 1908, the time and place of the show to be announced later.

With no tobacco to occupy the attention of the farmers after corn is planted, the patrons of the Petersburg and Burlington r. f. d. routs and everybody else, who are interested in having a bridge across Woolper at Plattsburg, should join hands and purse, and make a mighty effort to bridge this most dangerous crossing, thereby insuring an everlasting continuance of our rural route service and unsurpassed convenience to everyone who ever has to cross Woolper at this point. This is one of the worst creek crossings in the county and is in such a condition that there is no way to drive around it and no way to remedy it but with a bridge. It will take a bridge about 150 feet long to span this crossing, and Mr. Mills, of Covington, who was down there and made a survey, said he could put in an iron bridge for about $2,500. This looks like a big sum of money to try to raise, but if you will stop to think that there are 150 or more patrons of these two rural routes, who are likely at any time to be deprived of one of the greatest conveniences that this great country of ours has ever known, if this crossing is not bridged, besides a number of other prominent farmers and business men in the county, who would be directly benefited by a good bridge on this prominent thoronghfare, it looks like the required amount could be raised if some good man would get busy and make a thorough canvass of the entire territory. It is surely worth one good strong effort. So let's all put our shoulders to the wheel and lift together.

M. BIDDELL, Chairman.

According to reports politics in Kentucky last Saturday were the hottest in the history of the State. Senator Bradley says hell would not compare with the conditions in Louisville that day. Wonder how the Senator knows?

William Wolfe, of Richwood, informed the RECORDER, one day last week, of the bad luck of Rev. Davis, who use to preach for Richwood, Union and Burlington Presbyterian churches. He was playing with a pet dog that belonged to his son, when it bit him, and a few days thereafter the dog developed a case of rabbies. Rev. Davis was treated at a pasteur institute and says he never felt better in his life.

The taking of the master commissionership from James A. Duncan, clerk of the Boone circuit court, just about puts him out of business as an officer, as the fees arising from the office of circuit court clerk will not more than pay his board if that. To say the least his removal, for which no cause is assigned, has started a wave of indignation that is growing in volume as the public becomes acquainted with the fact.

A Camera in the Country

Various devices are used at different times by city people who happen to reside in the country for any length of time. Sometimes a cheap phonograph is purchased, with its raucous blare of "rag-time" melodies, and blatant monologue; sometimes a pianola is harnessed to the piano, and muscular music ground out by means of liberal "knee action;" sometimes the baleful "game" of croquet is employed to eke out the hours of those to whom time drags heavily. But for us, a harmless, necessary "kodak" was a never-failing source of pleasure and amusement all during our stay on the farm.

We never thought of going on a walk or a drive without carrying along our pictorial recorder, in case anything new or strange crossed our line of vision. Our walks were a daily occurrence, rain, hail or sunshine, but when the weather permitted we carried the kodak. Our drives were more infrequent, being a matter of sending in to town for a "rig" and making an all-day trip of it. And in this latter way we covered the country for many miles on all sides, traversing the river bottom roads and coming into towns where the houses were so old that the wind and rain and sun had bleached and then browned them until they looked like frame mummies more ancient than the human ones tenderly old in Egyptian tombs.

A kodak is an amusing little beast, and can no more be depended on to do the same thing twice than a rabbit, and no two of them are alike. You may borrow one, as I did once, and it may turn out excellent pictures regularly. You may buy one, and it may acquire the habit of taking some good and some bad ones. Each lens, so they say, is turned out exactly alike, but alas for human skill, each lens isn't alike. It is one of the joys of amateur photography that you can never be sure of any particular results. Sometimes on a "perfect" day, with all the care in the world, the pictures will be flat failures. On other days, gray days, maybe, when you had no license to expect any results at all, the picture-taking will turn out to be a screaming success.

The best general rule in using these little machines is to follow directions slavishly and not expect anything. In this way you can every once in awhile surprise yourself with the pictures you will get. Sometimes the sun will be watching you, and just as you are about ready to "snap" the slide, the victim all posed expectantly, will dart into a convenient cloud-bank and stay there for an hour. The sun can be depended upon to do this every time it gets a chance; don't tell me that heavenly bodies are not endowed with a sense of malignancy. I have seen a cloud that rose on a comparatively clear day make the most unseemly haste to get behind a bank of clouds when there was only one cloud-bank in sight, and lay there for hours and hours until it was too late to take pictures, and then go down with a red grin on it as much as to say "got you that time." The best way is to hide the camera when you first start out, for if the sun sees it you are apt to have trouble.

When you have studied the little book of instructions that goes with the kodak you will find invariably that there was something you overlooked when you first started out. Thus, after taking one picture, it is necessary to turn the crank around several times in order to get the next number on the "spool" ready for exposure. The directions plainly indicate this; but every once in awhile you forget this and try to blend the composite of a flock of sheep with a woman spinning at an old-fashioned spinning wheel, or something equally as blendable. And then when such a picture comes out there is the spectacle of a flock of sheep trying to spin an old lady into a woolen stocking, or a flock of spinning wheels trying to spin an old lady into a sheep, or a flock of old ladies trying to spin a sheep into a spinning wheel.

Always remember to turn the crank until the next number comes plainly into view. Another pesky nuisance is that the plagued thing won't always give out a clear "click" as you move the slide. Beware of this, for it means that you are not taking pictures at all, but just going through the motions. When you take out such a roll of films to "develop" you are simply wasting your time on a pack of "jokers," for there hasn't been a single impression taken. We once traveled on foot seven miles to take a family group and some individual pictures, and all we got from the 12 "exposures" was a dozen beautifully assorted blurs.

A camera is one of the best things in the world to teach self-control. The man or woman who will use one a year, the same one, and not resort to the family shotgun or the ax to demolish the machine for its devilish ingenuity in getting out of order and playing its fantastic capers, is not only a wonder, but a person thoroughly capable of bringing up children as they should be brought up. Sometimes a kodak will stick in its case, and perhaps a little dampness in the atmosphere has caused it to swell out and refuse to budge. After heaving away at it for an hour, skinning your finger and making you wonder if this is really a good world or not, it is in order for your wife to take hold of it and lift it out with perfect ease, looking at you meanwhile with pain at your evident state of mind as depicted in your corrugated brow. Now that kodak had deliberately let go just then for some ulterior reason of its own, and it would have held on if you had kept at it, forever. It wasn't because of any little catch or anything like that, nothing mechanical, but one of those little occult demonisms, like the family scissors deliberately crawling away and hiding in the ice-box.

In taking animals, it is well to remember that a horse or a cow is not all head. This will be driven into the intelligence after taking a few snapshots of these interesting animals and having them show up with heads like the pyramid side of a house and bodies that taper off to diminutive proportions. Take these brutes profile, never "head on," and you will get better results. Sometimes, of course, just as you are getting the most pleasant and intelligent look on a cow or a rooster, it will turn its head or pick at its feathers and spoil the effect. But this is one of the things which is to be met with fortitude.

Speaking of cows, we never failed to get a cow in all of our pictures. There were so many cows in the neighborhood, and a cow is such an inevitable accompaniment of all rural scenery, that we very soon became reconciled to the appearance of the phant cow in our pictures. These kodaks have a most "reachy" habit in regard to perspective, and while you may think you are only taking a lone tree, or a family group, you may be taking in a line of land that pretty nearly includes the whole township in the direction in which the machine is pointed. And somewhere on this angle there will be a cow. Either lying down or standing up, or grazing, or chewing the cud, or getting milked, or driven in or out to pasture, or trying to worm through a fence, or some other thing, and when you get the picture back from the reproducers, or develop it yourself, you can always bet on the cow.

We never had any particular trouble with sheep, or hogs, or horses. They are not nearly so apparent as cows are in the country. Sheep are fine objects, and give very fine results in the way of "snap-shots," either grazing on the hillsides, standing in groups or huddling at the approach of a human being, or lying in the shade of the trees at noon, they are always picturesque. But it is one of the cardinal principles of using a kodak to have your object in the sun, and the "camera fiend" should have his instrument of torture shaded; so that a great deal of ingenuity is needed at times to get your animal out into the sun and just where you want it in order to prepare for a successful "snap."

Sheep are very suspicious and panicky creatures, and are apt to stick their tails up and go "baaing" over the hillsides just when you have teased them into an attitude of woolly curiosity. This is one of the uncertainties of the sport and requires sturdy patience and invincible good humor to counteract. A horse is different. A horse is one of the vainest animals in the world, next to man, and rather likes to have his picture taken. But as for intelligence, a horse is the most addlepated brute in existence. He will shy at a bale of hay, run back into a burning barn from which he has just been dragged, and snuff at a water trough as though it was full of bumble bees. But he prances out to have his likeness "took" much as though he thought he was the pick of his tribe.

The best time for taking pictures, so we were informed by our little book, was between ten and four; but we discovered that this dictum had its limitations. For instance, some of the most sketchy and beautiful effects we got in landscapes were taken after four o'clock, and even after five, and the results gave a hazy, shadowy feeling in the little pictures which was almost as good as a miniature etching. On a few of the gray leaden days, we got some of our clearest pictures, and on some of the absolutely cloudy days we got some of our most notable failures. It was a veritable lottery so far as we were concerned, for we never knew when we were going to get good results or poor ones. As a fairly accurate thing to go by, we could tell that when we were most anxious to get good pictures they turned out miserably, and that when we were not caring very much about it we got "dreams."

The most interesting work was in taking pictures of our neighbors and our neighbors' children. In taking a child, care should always be taken not to try to get the child's attention attracted. If that is done, some of the weirdest effects in human physiognomy possible will be the result. The children will have that half-scared, half-shamed look which is so common to regular photography, and will be, at the moment of "snapping," as absolutely unlike themselves inside and out as it would be conceivable to imagine. And that is one of the mistakes of photography. To take a picture right of a human being it should be taken with the mask off. Children wear masks when they are noticed, or told to look this way or that. Men and women wear masks excepting when they are alone. The result is that children should have their pictures taken when their attention is strictly attracted elsewhere than on the photographer, and grown persons should have their pictures taken from ambush.

Every biped from the age of 16 upwards is thinking about himself or herself when facing a photographer, and the mask is on. Did you ever notice the difference that sleep, or death, makes in a person's features? Well, the lack of self-consciousness is the same as the mask, and never until people are painted or photographed without their knowing it will either portrait-painting or photography have fairly decently after all.

"Flash-light" pictures we never attempted. There is a limit in everything, and amateur, or even professional, "flash-light" photography, so-called, is the limit of limits. They give a ghastly jovial expression to some faces, and a chalky, corpse-like deadness to others, and a group of "flash-lighted" mortals is certainly raphy be anything but make-believe arts.

We got some good pictures of the children when they were not looking, and some excellent pictures of the men in the fields, and elsewhere, when they were off "guard," but just as sure as they were "snapped" when they were ready, good-by to any natural expression. Taking babies was one of the extreme "lottery" features of the pastime, and, when taken indoors, was usually a dim outline of a hazy patch of white dress. But the parents always avowed it was as life-like as anything they ever saw.

Landscapes were our best hold, for a landscape can be depended on to keep still, and always wears its perfectly natural expression, according to the season which happens to be passing just then. We got pictures of quaint wooden bridges, covered and built without a single bit of iron in them, all mortised and pegged with wooden pegs, and enduring through many years. We took old mill-dams, where the water had run since the days of the deer and wild turkeys, and great oaks that had witnessed the hegira of the Indians westward as it had waved over the flames of their early campfires.

Landscapes where water is a feature of the scenery take usually the best, something about water seeming to aid in bringing out the finer qualities of a land scene, as a bit of silky ribbon will enhance the picturesqueness of a woman's face. We had some river and lake pictures that had the very breath of outdoors in them, the rushes bending with the moving winds and distant cloud-shapes clearly, though whitely, defined. It was certainly a fascinating and costly experience. You got so that you wanted to take a "snap" of everything you saw; and when you sent your films away to be developed and printed it cost almost as much as it would to keep a yacht. The craze grows on you, and your judgment gets wobbly; and you keep getting deeper and deeper into the clutch of the unseen enemy.

We found that of all the seasons autumn gave us the best results as to sharp outlines and clear effects; possibly this was because the air was clearer then. Summer ranked next as to satisfactory photographs, and winter effects were sometimes very good indeed and often blurred.

We often tried to photograph the bird, but I regret to state that most of these pictures were failures. The average bird, outside of owls and herons, are extremely volatile, head up and tail down, or head down and tail up, here one minute and there the next, that we despaired of taking them successfully. The best way to photograph the average bird is to have him mounted and photograph him afterwards. I got a very fair picture of a catbird once, as those to whom the catbird was duly pointed out were free to admit, but as a rule "photographing" the birds was a sad waste of time, energy and money. I would creep cautiously up to a robin sitting on its nest and take its picture, and then, when the picture came out, it would be an elegant picture of everything but the nest and the robin. As for a moving bird, it was about as easy as photographing a brook trout in the water.

On the subject of birds' nests, separate and apart from the birds themselves, that is a sorrowful page in our experience as "camera fiends." I have crawled up to the top of an apple tree to take an oriole's nest and, after using up half a dozen films, come down scratched and breathless, but with the proud consciousness of having "done it" that time. Then when the pictures came back, each of them would represent a speaking likeness of the top of an apple tree, or other tree, with a large wad of placid sky in the background, but of the nest not a straw nor a hair. It was the same as to nests on the ground. I would chase a bobolink from its nest in the pasture and draw back the grass so as to get a perfect exposure. Then I would snap that nest four or five times and the net result, after "development," would be a towzled tuft of meadow grass with a dark spot in the center. But I never got a decent bird's nest in all my trials, and I tried the catbird, the jays, robins, bobolinks, warblers, orioles, thrushes and others.

THE POET IN HARD LUCK.

Why One of the Tribe Is Not Writing "Odes to Spring."

I rise as 5 a. m. now, but I haven't time to write a poem to "rosy morn." The other day, while admiring the beauties of nature, a farmer caught me and has been plowing over me ever since. It is my first experience with the Georgia mule, and I do not find that animal tractable. Besides, it is a pity to plow up the daisies, glittering with the dew of heaven! And, then, the mule does not appreciate poetry; in fact, when I recite it, there is always a kick coming. As I had no visible means of support—other than six poems on "Spring" on my person, the farmer attached me under the vagrant act, and so made a mule manager of me. The mule does not even understand Latin, and I have decided to waste no more Greek on the unappreciative animal. I don't think plowing and poetry agree.—Atlanta Constitution.

Tree an Old Man's Friend.

Charles Nickolson, Sr., has a pecan tree of which he is justly proud. In 1855 he was brought to Texas as a slave. When he was set free he bought a small farm and there was one pecan tree on it. He planted a few more trees, but they were small or common pecans.

While young and strong he raised cotton and corn and made a living, but no money to save. To-day he is no longer able to work the field, but devotes his attention to pecan trees. One tree bears the largest pecans grown in America. They can be found at the department of agriculture, Washington, where he sent a few.

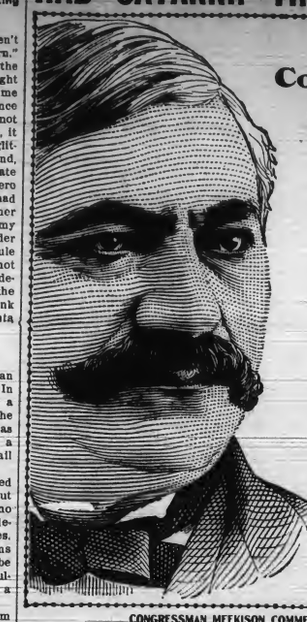
Last year he sold $54 worth from this one tree. He gave his friends some and planted more. The young trees he is selling rapidly at one dollar each and the other day said he had none left.—Westfield Correspondence Houston Post.

Telephonic Intelligence Service.

Early next fall there will be in operation along the St. Lawrence river, between Montreal and Quebec, a telephonic marine intelligence service, the like of which is not to be found anywhere, and for that reason it has many remarkable and interesting features. It will enable vessel owners to keep fully informed of the movement of their craft and when desirable to communicate orders to the captains. It will permit the captains to keep posted in the conditions existing along the river and in this manner to avoid any unusual danger. There will be a number of stations erected along the stream and at each station will be erected a mast 65 feet high with a cross spar 25 feet in length, placed about 20 feet from the top of the mast. From this cross-spar signals will be displayed, one side for down-stream and the other for up.

Devoted to Army's Work.

Adjt. Emma Westbrook, now in charge of the Salvation Army barracks in West Pontiac, Mich., was one of the seven women who came with Commissioner Railton from England, in 1880, to found the Salvation Army in America. She has just passed her fifty-fifth birthday and has been in the army service 33 years. Although she is entitled to a pension and retirement she refuses to take either, and has just declared her intention to remain in the work as long as she has strength for the duties.



Old Custom Revived.

A singular revival is taking place in Paris for wearing the tooth of a wolf or badger set in gold as a mascot. An old superstition connected the wearing of such ornaments as provocative of good fortune. The custom of wearing a thumb ring is also being resuscitated, and at this present time a charming young actress on the English stage is demonstrating the vogue, partly, no doubt, because it is in keeping with the period in which she is living in the play, and partly in recognition of the fashion Paris is patronizing.

HAD CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.

Congressman Meekison Gives Praise To Pe-ru-na For His Relief From Catarrh.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON COMMENDS PE-RU-NA.

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison.

OTHER REMARKABLE CURES.

Mr. Jacob L. Davis, Galena, Stone county, Mo., writes: "I have been in bad health for thirty-seven years, and after taking twelve bottles of your Peruna I am cured." Mr. C. N. Peterson, 132 South Main St., Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes: "I cannot tell you how much good Peruna has done me. Constant confinement in my store began to tell on my health, and I felt that I was gradually breaking down. I tried several remedies, but obtained no permanent relief until I took Peruna. I felt better immediately, and five bottles restored me to complete health."

A SINCERE RECOMMENDATION.

Mr. D. C. Prosser, Bravo, Allegan Co., Mich., writes: "Two years ago I was badly afflicted with catarrh of the stomach. I had had a run of typhoid fever, was very depleted. I could find nothing I could eat without causing distress and sour stomach. Finally I came to the conclusion that I had catarrh of the stomach and seeing Peruna advertised, began to take it. It helped me soon, and after taking three or four bottles I was entirely cured of stomach trouble, and can now eat anything."

She Did Her Duty by Him.

One Monday morning the colored "wash lady" did not arrive at the usual hour to do the weekly washing of a family residing in a Pennsylvania town.

When she appeared some time later the mistress of the house descended to the kitchen and was greatly edified by the woman's explanation.

"No'm"—carefully removing a hat ornamented by a voluminous black veil—"I wasn't sick. I had to stay home to receive my diseased brother's remainders that was sent from Pittsburg day before yisterday."—Lippincott's.

Willing to Oblige.

The poor but nervy young man was after the hand of the heiress.

"Young man," roared her irate father, "never darken my door again."

"All right, sir," replied the suitor, blandly, "I'll come around to-morrow and give it a coat of bright red paint. That will be much better than darkening it."

And the next instant the poor but nervy young man was being chased by a Scotch coachman, a French chauffeur and an English bulldog.

BABY'S ITCHING HUMOR.

Nothing Would Help Him—Mother Almost in Despair—Owes Quick Cure to Cuticura.

"Several months ago, my little boy began to break out with itching sores. I doctored him, but as soon as I got them heated up in one place they would break out in another. I was almost in despair. I could not get anything that would help him. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and after using them three times, the sores commenced to heal. He is now well, and not a scar is left on his body. They have never returned nor left him with bad blood, as one would think. Cuticura Remedies are the best I have ever tried, and I shall highly recommend them to any one who is suffering likewise. Mrs. William Geeding, 102 Washington St., Attica, Ind., July 22, 1907."

A MOTHER'S FAITH

Elisha Restoreth Son of Shunammite Woman.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. A. Dixon.)

Scripture authority: 2 Kings, 4:18-37.

SERMONETTE.

Sorrow and bereavement which turn one to God have performed a blessed ministry.

Faith that is not content to rest until it comes into the very presence of the source of help is the faith which obtains.

Fortunate indeed is he who in the hour of knoweth whither to turn for help. The Shunammite had learned to know the prophet of God before the great sorrow broke upon her life, so that when it did come she lost no time in reaching his presence. So should it be with us. We should become acquainted with God now so that in the day of trouble we shall know whither to flee for refuge and strength and help.

Bereavement is glorified by submission and made victorious through faith.

When the boy was dead the broken-hearted mother took and laid her boy on the prophet's bed, thus botokening not only faith that the prophet would help in her need but submission to the loss which had befallen her. When we can take our dead and give them up to God, recognizing that he who has given has right to take away, then are we ready to reach up in faith and receive the blessing which God would give to us through our grief.

It was a long, hard journey to Mount Carmel, where the prophet dwslt, but faith and love never find any road too long or too hard to travsi.

It is the faith which clings and cries, "I will not leave thee," which obtains the blessing.

The staff in the hands of Gehazi was powerless to bring life into the dead body, but the throbbing life of the prophet stretched upon the cold body of the boy was the potent factor which could bring from God the desired blessing. The mother's faith was proved by her journey to Mount Carmel, and her clinging to the prophet until he should come to her home. The faith of the prophet waa proved by the surrander of his dignity and comfort and the getting right down alongside the cold, dead body, where he could give of his life to the warming into new life of that dead boy. The reason the servants of God so often fail in their ministry is that they are contant with long-distance methods instead of that heart to heart, face to face contact which makes the cold, indifferent parson feel the throbbing, loving interest of the other, and thereby interprets to that needy one what the love and life of God really are.

Jesus made the long, hard journsy from heaven to sarth, that He might lay His bruised and bleeding body alongside the body of the world dsad in sin, and thereby Hs called it into life, a thing which all God's servants sent before Jssus came into the world were unable to do. Let this example of Jesus which the act of Elisha so forcibly typifies stir us to like endeavor.

THE STORY.

THE boy was dead! In an agony of despair and grief the mother lifted her face to heaven, but no word or cry escaped her lips.

All that afternoon she had held the little fellow and, hoping against hope, she had watched the life ebb slowly awsy, and when the last faint gasp had come and she felt the little form limp and lifeless in her arms, and knew that he was beyond all human aid she lifted one mute, agonized appeal upward and then with bowed head sat in the darkness and gloom of her grief, hugging close the little form whose coming a few years before had brought such light and joy into the home.

After the first shock of the awful grief had passed and the mother had recovered her power to reason once more she gradually became conscious that she must do something. Precious as the form of her boy was, she knew that she could not continue to hold him thus. But must she lay him awsy forever? Had the joy and blessing of the little life come to her for these few brief years only to be lost forever? She could not have it so!

A feeling of rebellion arose in her heart. How could God be good and kind and then take awsy? Had the prophet asked his God to send her a son that he might inflict upon her heart the agony of losing him again? Why, if God cared, had He not sent the prophet again in the hour of her need and kept this sad thing from coming upon her? And then she recalled again how through the years she had longed for a son and how that blessing had come in response to the intercession of the prophet, who desired to repay her for the kindness she and her husband had shown towards him.

She recalled how upon subsequent visits of the prophet he had spoken his words of blessing upon the little fellow and had counseled her regarding his up-bringing. Over and over again he had urged her to bring him up in the fear and admonition of the Lord, pointing to the apostate condition of the nation and showing the countless evils which had come because of the godlessness of the people. And all that Elisha had said unto her she had sought to do.

The boy had grown finely and was just budding into that period of life where the boyish is fast merged into the more manly traits of young manhood. And then had come this awful blow, like a bolt out of a clear sky. He had gone out to his father in the field that morning in the joyous vigor of his young life, and had been brought back to her ——— by the fierce rays of the relentless sun. And now he was dead and all that remained to her was the still lifeless form which she held in her arms.

"Nay," she half cried, "I have the memory of the precious life, and how sacred and blessed it is. Because this sorrow has come, would I that I had never known the joy of motherhood? Nay! Nay! Ten thousand times nay!" And the thought subdued the rebellious risings of her heart and brought a calmer, sweeter train of thought. And then came the thought of the man of God whose prayer and benediction had brought her the precious son.

"Ah, if he knew, perhaps it would be different," she whispered softly to herself. "Surely his God is able to do all things."

"Why then sit you here thus?" came the accusing voice of conscience.

In obedience to the voice she arose with her burden.

"The room of the prophet is a sacred spot in my home. There I will lay him and then I will go and find this man of God. He shall come and bring yet further blessing to my home."

Only a mother's love could silence the objections of the husband, who felt the dangers and hardships of the journey were too great for her. Only mother's love could have girded her with strength for that long, racking ride over the rugged road to Mount Carmel and back again.

But faith and mother love conquered and the home where lies the little form silent and cold comes in sight again. She looks up expectantly into the face of the prophet, who strides silent and thoughtful at her side.

"We are almost there," she exclaimed. "It is well."

Elisha looked at her searchingly. He knew not what he would do. He knew not what God was ready to do for him and this woman. But he felt that her faith was drawing him on and on to the place of service.

"Yea, Gehazi hath passed on ahead with my staff," he said, for he had sent his servant on before them in haste, telling him as he went to place his staff upon the face of the young child.

"Nay, but thou art come," she exclaimed.

At that moment Gehazi came forth from the house to meet them, a look of doubt and fear telling them even before he reached them that his mission had failed.

"The child is not awaked," he said.

"But thou art here," exclaimed the mother with sweet and calm assurance turning to Elisha, "and thy God will hear thee."

Was Elisha to be buoyed up upon the faith of this mother. Yea, surely, for at the words there welled within his heart a new inspiration. The mother's faith had brought him into the place of service. The mother's faith should join with his own in showing forth the glory and power of God.

Thus in such spirit they entered the house.

And behold the child was indeed dead!

"Ah, God, let it be my life for the child's life, if need be," Elisha cried in anguish of spirit as he stretched himself upon the little cold body and laid his face against that of the child and breathed into his nostrils.

God honors the spirit of sacrifice. Heart-throb brings answering heart-throb, and the utter surrender of the prophet to the need before him brought the answering touch from God.

The boy would live!

Ah, the joy and gladness of that moment. The mother fell at the feet of the prophet and worshiped the God who had done this wonderful thing, and then she took her son, her living son, and went out.

The years have passed. The man of God who entered so largely into the lives of this Shuuammite mother and her son is dead.

"More than ever shall we need to prove true to the God whom Elisha served," softly spoke the mother as her great hearded son leaned over her chair, for they had been talking concerning the sad event.

"Yea, mother, surely my life belongs indeed to Elisha's God. By thy faith and his was it purchased and thy wish shall be my commission."

LIQUOR LAW IS HELD VALID

ILLINOIS STATUTE UPHELD BY THE SUPREME COURT.

Local Option Measure Passed by the Legislature Last Year Is Declared Constitutional.

Springfield, Ill.—The supreme court Thursday handed down an opinion in the John McBride appeal case, holding that the local option law which was passed by the legislature last year is constitutional in every respect. The court is unanimous in its decision. Every point on which the law was attacked is gone into by the court, and no section of it but what is pronounced valid by the supreme court. The supreme court holds that the title is not defective; that the law does not interfere with interstate commerce; that it does not confiscate property, because the saloon keeper invests in furniture and fixtures knowing that he is liable to have his license revoked at any time under the old law, even, and that the new law does not create any new offenses.

The higher court also holds that the United States stamp is prima facie evidence that the man is engaged in the sale of liquor; that in case of elections without notice, for which it provides, such elections, if held, would be invalid, but that this does not invalidate the act itself. The supreme court holds that the legislatnre may create districts like a county or township, and that if the voters in the district shall decide that intoxicating liquors shall not be sold in the district then a village or city in this district created cannot permit the sale of liquor. The sale of liquor for medicinal purposes by druggists is never regarded as the saloon business, says the supreme court.

Regarding the returning of the saloon licenses creating a debt, the supreme court holds that when a man gets a saloon license and cannot use it, the municipality issuing the license is morally bound, though not before the passage of the law, legally bound, to pay it back to him.

One of the principal objections was that the law permits the legislature to delegate legislative powers to the people by permitting people in localities to adopt the law. The supreme court says that from the beginning to the end the supreme court of this state has held that to be legal.

YOUNG ROOSEVELT IN BALLOON.

Theodore, Jr., Makes an Ascension with Capt. Chandler.

Washington.—Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., with Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, the president's military aide, and Capt. Chandler of the signal corps, in charge of the experiments with army balloons, made an ascension Wednesday from this city. Shortly after the start an accident was narrowly averted by the throwing out of ballast, after which the balloon went up and began the journey in a northerly direction.

The Associated Press at 10:10 o'clock Wednesday night received the following dispatch from Capt. Chandler at Wilmington, Del.:

"Signal corps balloon landed safely four miles north of Delaware City, Del., 5:15 p. m. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Capt. Lee passengers. Chandler, pilot."

ALTON IS DEFEATED AGAIN.

Supreme Court for Sixth Time Decides School Case.

Springfield, Ill.—For the sixth time the supreme court in the celebrated Alton school case has reversed the findings of the Madison county circuit court and remanded the case with instructions to return a verdict finding that the mayor and city council and board of education of the city of Alton are unlawfully keeping the two children of Scott Bibbs, a colored man, from attending the white school in that city nearest the Bibbs home.

This case has been in the courts for ten years and former Gov. and United States Senator John M. Palmer of this city was one of the original attorneys for Bibbs.

THE GREAT MAN'S OCCUPATION.

Nothing Very Serious in His Mind* Just at That Moment.

The multi-millionaire was being shaved. As he lay back in his chair, looking upward, his grave face gave the impression that he was in deep study.

"Ah," whispered one of the barber shop loiterers, "I'll wager a dollar against a toothpick that he is thinking of railroad mergers."

"No," said another, "he is thinking about hear raids in Wall street."

"Bet he is pondering over the rebate system," echoed a third.

"I'll ask him."

Walking over to the chair, he said politely:

"Beg your pardon, sir, but to settle an argument, would you kindly tell us what mighty question you are studying over?"

The multi-millionaire turned his lathered face around and smiled. "I was just studying two flies doing handsprings on the ceiling," he chuckled, and the trio of guessers looked so sheepish they failed to hear "Next" when it was called to them.

ON THE GLAD HIGHWAY.

"Say, hoss, you hasn't er dime in yer clothes, has yer?"

"No, my man, I have not. But how did you guess it?"

Had Done His Best.

Representative Adam Bede of Minnesota is credited with the story of the boy with the disreputably dirty face, who was sent to the town pump by the teacher, with the scriptural injunction, to "wash and be clean."

He returned with the chin and lower part of his face looking rather pale, but his cheeks and forehead remained as dirt-hued as before. The children roared at his comical appearance, and, when the teacher asked him why he had not cleaned his entire face, he answered:

"I washed and wiped as high up as my shirt would go."

A Dreadful Secret.

Wife—Have you any secrets you keep from me, dearest?

Husband—None, darling.

Wife—Then I am determined I will have none from you, either.

Husband—Have you secrets, then?

Wife—Only one, and I am resolved to make a clean breast of it.

Husband (hoarsely)—Go on!

Wife—For several days I have had a secret—a secret longing for a new dress, with hat to match, for my birthday.

That fetched him.—Tatler.

BUILT RIGHT.

Brain and Nerves Restored by Grape-Nuts Food.

The number of persons whose ailments were such that no other food could be retained at all, is large and reports are on the increase.

"For 12 years I suffered from dyspepsia, finding no food that did not distress me," writes a Wis. lady. "I was reduced from 145 to 90 lbs., gradually growing weaker until I could leave my bed only a short while at a time, and became unable to speak aloud.

"Three years ago I was attracted by an article on Grape-Nuts and decided to try it.

"My stomach was so weak I could not take cream, but I used Grape-Nuts with milk and lime water. It helped me from the first, building up my system in a manner most astonishing to the friends who had thought my recovery impossible.

"Soon I was able to take Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast, and lunch at night, with an egg and Grape-Nuts for dinner.

"I am now able to eat fruit, meat and nearly all vegetables for dinner, but fondly continue Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper.

"At the time of beginning Grape-Nuts I could scarcely speak a sentence without changing words around or 'talking crooked' in some way, but my brain and nerves have become so strengthened that I no longer have that trouble." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

PAT'S MIND WAS LOGICAL.

Quick to See One Strong Point as to Victim's Identity.

Previously to entering the railroad yards an able-bodied loafer picked up a small, glittering object from the sidewalk and, without examining it very closely, pinned it to his coat, says the Philadelphia Ledger. Three minutes later he collided with a slowly moving freight train, was hurled against a post and picked up insensible. The train dispatcher, notified by telephone, called up Patrick Doyle, the yardmaster's assistant, and said:

"You'd better search his pockets, Doyle. Find out who he is, notify his friends and report to me:"

A few moments later the report came:

"There's not a line of writing on him," said Patrick, "but we've identified him by the badge on his coat. He is a Lady Maccabee."

HOW TO TEST LINSEED OIL

There is nothing that will make paint go wrong on the house more quickly than poor oil. It is as bad in its way as adulterations in the white lead. Petroleum oil cheapeners may be detected by placing a drop of the oil on a black painted surface. If one sees the characteristic iridescence or play of colors which kerosene exhibits, it is evidence of adulteration. Corn and fish oil can be detected by the smell.

Adulteration in white lead can best be discovered by the use of a blowpipe, which National Lead Company will send with instructions free to anyone interested in paint. Address, National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York.

"Come on, son," said the old farmer, after the daybreak breakfast, "and we'll get out in the fields and start plowing."

"But I can't plow to-day," protested the youngster, "I have chills. Why, dad, I am shaking all over."

The old farmer grinned and took a fresh chew.

"All the better, my son. If you can't plow you can scatter the seed. All you have to do is to hold them in your hand and every time you shake it will send them in all directions. Better than a patent seeder, begosh."

BOONE CO. RECORDER.

CIRCUIT COURT.

When the RECORDER went to press last week the work of selecting the jury for the trial of John Meeks for the murder of Albert Clutterbuck was begun. After having examined about 125 men the jury was obtained last Thursday shortly after noon, and the hearing of the testimony was begun and consumed the time of the court until Friday at noon. Immediately after the noon hour the arguments were begun, there being one for the defense and two for the prosecution lasting until 4:45 p. m., when the case was given to the jury which retired to its room where it remained a short time when the court adjourned it until after supper. About 7 o'clock the jury returned to its room and at 7:15 reported it had made a verdict and returned into the court room, when foreman B. H. Berkshire read the verdict consigning the defendant to the penitentiary for life. Following was the jury:

B. C. Graddy, of Bullittsville; W. C. Gaines, Petersburg; H. G. Cropper, North Bend; Frank Scott, Rabbit Hash; Charles Portwood, Waterloo; J. C. Bedinger, Richwood; B. H. Berkshire, Petersburg; William Carpenter, Burlington, and Otto Rector, Petersburg.

Upon the first ballot taken the 12 jurors voted that the defendant was guilty. A ballot was then taken to decide up the punishment and ten voted for life imprisonment and two for 21 years, but after a short discussion the two went over to the ten and the verdict was written and signed.

Meeks testified on his own behalf but no other witness was put on the stand by the defense.

The verdict in the Meeks case is for the longest time of any ever returned by a Boone county jury. The death penalty has been imposed several times, but Meeks' is the first verdict for life.

In regard to the public buildings the report says: "We have examined the public buildings, and we find the infirmary is kept in a clean and healthy condition, and we recommend that the plastering be repaired where dropped off and the ceiling of the inmates' kitchen be scraped off clean and painted, and, also, the walls of said kitchen be painted, and the outside of wash house be painted; and also recommend that superintendant's kitchen be repapered. We also recommend that bolts be taken out of the jail window grates and rivited tight. We find the building is kept in first class order. We find the court house is in comparatively good order."

Saturday being the last day of the term Meeks was brought into court and sentenced to the penitentiary for life. The execution of the judgment was stayed 60 days to allow him time in which to take an appeal, and upon his request he was remanded to the jail in Covington.

Robert Walton, against whom two indictments were returned at the recent term, was fined $15 on one and the other was filed away. The court gave the young man a good lecture and ordered the collection of the fine stayed during his good behavior, and then released him.

Just before adjournment Saturday afternoon the court entered an order appointing D. E. Castleman master commissioner of the Boone circuit court. B. W. Adams, A. B. Renaker, T. J. Walton, A. C. Corn, J. W. Cleek, C. C. Roberts, R. L. Huey are his bondsmen.

The grand jury report says that it examined 54 witnesses and returned into court 15 indictments. It is reported that the law is being generally well observed in the county.

The attendance at court last week increased as the Meeks trial progressed and the circuit court room was well filled during Friday.

The Kentucky Children's Home Society.

Is non-Sectarian. It seeks to place in good homes the homeless, destitute children of the State, regardless of the church affiliation of the parents. The Society carefully endeavors to find suitable homes for its wards. After their placement the Society maintains a systematic watch-care over them, removing them when the relations are discovered not to be for the best interests of the child. Foster parents are required to love, clothe, feed, educate, and give religious advantages as to a natural child. The most needy child is the most earnest sought. The unfortunate child cannot escape the efforts of the Society to relieve it. Every part of the State is becoming well organized for the Society's operations. The mountains are a fruitful field for child saving. In the year 1896, the Society began its work in Kentucky. In the brief period of eleven years one thousand and seventy-six children have come under the guardianship of the Society and have been placed in family homes. In addition two thousand children have been benefitted through the Aid Department. The National Children's Home Society of which the Kentucky Children's Home Society is a branch now embraces 29 States, and has placed in homes 35,000 children. Beyond the current expenses funds are now greatly needed to enlarge the work. To aid in our work of the purest and most generous benevolence we earnestly seek a contribution annually from every good citizen of the State.

"He that hath pity on the poor lendeth unto the Lord.

A petition has been signed by nearly all of the Democratic candidates for office in Grant county asking that the executive committee be called together to fix a time for the coming primary. It is said that most of the candidates favor an early primary.

Republican Mass Convention.

Pursuant to a call published in the RECORDER for the last several weeks, the Republicans of Boone county to the number of 186, met in mass convention at the Court-house in Burlington, last Saturday at one o'clock. The convention was called to order by J. G. Tomlin, chairman of the County Committee, who made a speech appropriate to the occasion, and then called for nominations for temporary chairman, when G. L. Miller, of Big Bone, on behalf of the Fairbanks followers, nominated A. M. Edwards, of Walton, and J. H. Stevens, of Petersburg, on behalf of the Taft followers, nominated G. G. Hughes, of Burlington. Chas. Ransler, Presley Adams, J. M. Baker and C. C. Hughes were appointed tellers to count the vote for chairman. The vote being counted and agreed upon was announced 100 for Edwards and 84 for Hughes. Mr. Edwards took the chair, and Charles Ransler, of Walton, was nominated and elected secretary without opposition. On motion of G. G. Hughes the temporary organization was made permanent. The chair then appointed the following committees:

County Committee—G. L. Miller, B. F. Zimmer, J. C. Hume.

On Delegates—J. M. Baker, J. H. Stevens, George Blyth.

On Resolutions—J. G. Tomlin, Elihu Alden, J. O. Griffith.

The committees retired to prepare their reports, and during their absence, W. R. Miller, of Big Bone, addressed the convention, declaring it to be composed of the finest looking set of men he ever saw together. During his remarks he announced himself a candidate for sheriff. At the close of Miller's speech the committees reported, each report being adopted without opposition.

The committee on county committee reported the following as members of that committee:

Petersburg—Jonas Stevens.
Belleview—Chas. Kelly.
Burlington—Charles Craven.
Florence—Charles Tanner.
Big Bone—John C. Miller.
Walton—J. G. Tomlin.
Verona—J. C. Hume.
Union—Dr. Senior.
Constance—B. F. Zimmer.
Beaver—J. O. Griffith.
Bullittsville—Fred Moore.
Rabbit Hash—Zack Kelly.

The committee on delegates reported the following as delegates to the State Convention: J. G. Tomlin, J. C. Hume, G. L. Miller, J. H. Stevens, Elihu Alden, A. M. Edwards. Alternates: W. R. Miller, Jonas Stevens, Al England, J. O. Griffith, Lou Thompson, Eugene Kelly.

Before the adoption of the report of the committee on resolutions J. G. Tomlin made a brief speech. The resolutions are as follows:

Resolved, That the Republicans of Boone county in mass convention assembled, approve and indorse the wise and progressive administrations of President Roosevelt and Governor Willson. President Roosevelt's policies are the policies of the Republican party and the party is fully competent to make its nomination and to carry out its policies. Further than to recommend a successor and to have the full influence of his great name and opinion, we do not think he should allow, if he has allowed, the use of patronage to further the candidacy of any man for President.

Resolved, That Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, has all qualifications, experience and availibility to make an ideal candidate and President, and we therefore instruct the delegates of Boone county to vote as a unit for him upon all questions affecting his interest.

To the extent that a political machine has been established in this district, we instruct our delegates to use their influence to destroy it.

Upon the adoption of the above resolutions the convention adjourned.

It was the largest Republican convention ever held in the county, and showed that considerable work had been done by the leaders.

The proceedings of the convention were conducted in a quiet, business-like manner, and in a way that was fair to both sides.

Mrs. J. C. Revill sent to the RECORDER a few days since two programs of school "exhibitions" given at the Boone Academy, the first on March 10th, 1841, at 7 o'clock p. m.; the other on September 3d, 1841, at 4 o'clock p. m. and 7 o'clock p. m. The first program consisted of 44 and the second of 57 selections. Very few of the pupils whose names appear on these programs are now living. On the first appear the names of the following, who are living, together with the subject assigned each: W. B. Craven—Unhallowed Pleasures; J. T. Craven—Settlement of Boston; N. Craven—Homage to Merit. Of the pupils on the second program, but two are now living: J. W. Chambers, whose subject was Senaca Lake, and H. A. Riddell (now Rice) whose subjects were The Ladies, The Removal of the remains of Napoleon from Helena. She took part in a dialogue also. The programs do not disclose the names of the teachers. Boone Academy was a one story brick building of two rooms, and was raized to be succeeded by the Morgan Academy building, which was torn down a few years ago. Besides the names mentioned above the following appear on the programs: J. W. Chambers, T. W. Frazier, S. H. Smith, M. M. McCoy, W. K. Percival, N. Hawes, V. T. Chambers, T. F. Roberts, C. W. Barnard, R. F. Coleman, M. A. Hawes, C. S. Green, C. Buchanan, J. C. Garnett, J. A. Dickerson, G. E. Hamilton, J. W. Murphy, L. C. Bradley, W. W. Calvert, W. Wake, J. D. Willis, W. B. Grubbs, T. C. Graves, C. S. Collins, L. L. Sandford, A. H. Houston, P. L. Thornley, W. E. Hamilton, U. Turner, J. Riddell, R. Minor, T. E. Lightfoot, W. Riddell, T. J. Utz, G. W. Huey, S. L. Sandford, E. Grant, J. P. Coleman, S. A. Hagarty, S. S. Collins, Z. Tousey, B. Rice, W. S. Graves, W. A. White. These programs were neatly printed, and were discovered in a Bible that belonged to Mrs. Revill's mother, Mrs. Mary Runyan, where they had reposed, doubtless, for 67 years.

Otis Taylor, about 23, who lived with George Houston on Big Bone creek a mile or so below the Springs, was killed by lightning as was also the horse that he was riding last Thursday about 12:30. The unfortunate man was returning to the field to resume plowing that afternoon, riding one horse and leading another, there being no indication of any storm approaching. He had gone out of sight of the house when someone there noticed a forked streak of lightning which was followed by a heavy crash of thunder. Shortly thereafter the horse that the young man had been leading was seen running at the top of its speed about the pasture. An investigation was begun and in a few minutes it was discovered that Taylor and his horse had been killed by the lightning, which struck him in the top of the head, in a manner pulverizing his skull without breaking the hide. A mere sprinkle of rain followed the fatal flash of lightning.

The local board shall order the removal of such animals at any other time when they appear to be prejudical to the public health, safety, or comfort. No privy vault, or cesspool shall open into any stream, ditch or drain except common sewers. No human excrement removed from privy vaults within a city or town shall be deposited on the ground within one mile of the corporate limits of any city or town, and only then upon a written permit from the health officer of the county in whose jurisdiction the territory lies.

Rule 3 City or county boards of health shall exercise especial supervision over the location, drainage, water supply, heating, ventilation, plumbing and disposal of excreta of the schools, school houses and all public buildings within their jurisdiction, and where any hygienic faults exist it shall be the duty of said board of health, upon notification of proper authorities, to immediately examine the same and advise such changes as will result in a correction of any existing defects.

Editor of the Recorder:

It seems from the columns of the RECORDER there is some feeling existing, even in old Boone, in regard to the fight of the tobacco growers for higher prices for their product. I have been a "dumper" and therefore know there is a certain kind of satisfaction in dumping. I know I received more money for my tobacco because the other fellow took his off of the market, and I thought what a good thing this pooling is, and I was anxious for the other fellow to keep it going. Of course that is what I thought when I let my selfishness (the most detestable quality in man) get the better of me. But, finally, I began to think in this manner: There is a disease prevalent in the tobacco growing district; this malady was propagated by the tobacco trust and was continually sucking the life blood of the growers. Then some one discovered a remedy for the disease, a few farmers began to take it, but others thought it a quack medicine and refused to do so. I was one of the latter. A peculiarity about this medicine, is it had no soothing effect on the man who took it, but rather the contrary; but it immediately began to help the man who did not. His overloppise was considerably increased especially near the location of the pocketbook. The next year more farmers took the medicine, yet I would not take it. But was not long in discovering that while only a few doses were taken the first year by the other fellow I felt a great deal better, but after the second year's taking by the other fellow I felt like I had taken a health giving treatment at the baths. At last my moral nature began a conflict with that other thing which makes more men little than any other thing in the universe. At last the farmer won. There is a great religious doctrine which teaches the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, I have therefore concluded that it is morally wrong to let my brother take those bitter cakes for me, and I have concluded to take one dose of "No Tobac" during 1908. In regard to the action of the Boone County Fire Insurance Co. I think it was correct. The officers are aiming to take care of the interests of the insured, not one in twenty of whom are tobacco growers. If I should undertake to raise tobacco during 1908, thus inviting trouble, they would not be doing right by the members of the company if they did not cancel my policy. DUMPER.

The following taken from the Trimble county Democrat of last week, will be read with sorrow by Mr. D. C. Peck's old Boone county friends:

"Wednesday morning the handsome country home of D. C. Peck, of Pleasant Retreat, was destroyed by fire. It is not known just how the fire originated but it is supposed to have caught from a chimney in the ell of the building. The flames had made such headway before being discovered that all efforts to extinguish them proved futile, and the whole structure was soon a flaming mass, making the efforts of those trying to save the personal property hazardous, and almost impossible. Only a few things were saved, the clothing and nearly all the household goods being destroyed. Frank Horton and family living in the same house, also lost almost all of their household goods and clothing. Mr. Peck carried some insurance, but the loss is considerable. All sympathize with him and his daughter upon the loss of their beautiful home."

There has been very few people about town since circuit court adjourned, as farmers are too busy to spend much time away from home.

Col. G. C. Graddy, deputy revenue collector at Petersburg, came up last Saturday to keep the Taft men out. He remained over until Sunday.

An Appreciation of Affection.

Most men appreciate affection, and are disappointed when they fail to find it demonstrated in their wives. They appreciate it in equal degree with the wife who likes to be assured that her husband's every thought is for her happiness. A man is not only called upon to sacrifice many of his bachelor enjoyments when he becomes engaged, but when he is married he has still other trifles to forego, says the New York Weekly. It is for the pleasure and joy of having a wife and home of his own that he is more than proud of his partnership. Everything works so smoothly that he is happy, very happy; and still there comes to him a special thrill of sweetness when his wife puts her arm around his neck and whispers in his ear that she loves him—loves him very much. No girl could await the adoration of her lover with greater joy than a man does the tenderness showered upon him by a loving wife. But just as some men grow lax in their attentions to their young wives, so do too many young wives forget to keep ever burning the furnace of their loves upon the domestic rearth.

The progress of the enormous new system of water works of New York city has made necessary the creation of a large new aqueduct police force, for the patrol and protection of the watershed. The chief of the force is a popular college graduate and society man. The news of his appointment brought applications to take the civil service examinations from 300 college men, who are attracted by what they regard as a vacation in the beautiful scenery of the Catskills, with $100 a month as gratuity. The physical examiner of the civil service commission pronounced the candidates the finest body of men, physically, he had ever examined, and the young men came away from the mental tests grinning, and declaring that they were "easy." The aqueduct force ought to be able to rob the city police of its title of "the finest."

The Pathos of Fate.

The imperial glory that once was Spain's long since passed from her, and it is reported that pathetic and tragic admission of the fact is to be made in Madrid by dismantling the Pantheon of the Spanish colonies and dispersion of its valuable collections among the libraries and museums of the city, says the Boston Herald. The site is needed for other purposes; the fact political which the building symbolized no longer exists; and the sooner present and future generations are rid of a reminder of past national waste and maladministration, the better. Thus the argument runs. Greece, Rome, Carthage, Spain and Holland, each have had their day of empire on the sea. Will London ever witness such a scene as Madrid is to see? And Berlin after London?

Defective designing was the cause of the collapse of the cantilever bridge across the St. Lawrence river at Quebec several months ago, according to the report of the royal commission appointed to make an investigation. The designer used the standard formulas in computing the strains, but in the opinion of the commission he should have modified them, as the bridge was larger than any that had hitherto been attempted on the cantilever principle. It is easy to say this now, for all engineers know more about the subject than before the falling bridge demonstrated that the old formulas were incorrect. But it is important to future bridge-builders, as well as to the public, that an adequate explanation of the Quebec accident has been found.

The English advocates of woman's suffrage have made their demands a real political issue. A resolution in their favor was recently adopted by the convention of English Liberals. Their bill was read a first time in the house, practically without opposition, though it will go no further. Press dispatches tell of a really worried London police, assert that the cabinet ministers never know what will happen to them next, and aver that Mr. Asquith never leaves home save in the company of two detectives. Even he has capitulated to the extent of receiving a deputation of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies and admitted that their case was presented "with unusual precision and persuasiveness."

It is the same old story. North, south, east and west the farmers are short of help. If the men looking for work would add to their applications "No objection to going in the country" they would probably have choice of any number of jobs.

The fact that New York has a parrot that swears in six languages is being rather widely advertised. It is certainly queer how very fond New York can be of its various forms of wickedness.

LANDSLIDE BURIED CANADIAN HAMLET

PART OF MOUNTAIN RUSHES TO THE RIVER AND TEARS PATH OF DESTRUCTION.

SOME ALIVE UNDER ROCKS AND EARTH

Thirty-One Lives Known To Be Lost—Disaster the Result of the Spring Rains, Which Have Been Melting the Snow and Ice.

Ottawa, Ont., April 27.—An appalling catastrophe occurred at daybreak Sunday morning by which the little French village of Notre Dame de la Salette, on the Lievre river, a tributary of the Ottawa river, about 90 miles northeast of this city, was partially destroyed by a landslide. According to the latest estimates, 31 lives were lost.

The place is remote from railway and telegraphic facilities, and what details of the occurrence are known to the outside world were brought by men who left the scene Sunday morning before all the bodies were recovered.

The death list may he even more appalling. The Lisvre is a narrow canyon-like stream flowing between towering walls of clay which lies on a lower strata of rock. Spring rains percolating through the earth caused the soapy mass to slide from the rock bed, polished smoothly by glacial action. The slide occurred without warning, a piece of territory half a mile long and extending back a hundred yards from the river, and on which were two dwellings, suddenly gave way and crashed right across the river, completely blocking the channel and overwhelming a row of six houses and other buildings on the opposite bank, situated at a lower altitude.

The ground which slid away formed a sort of hill, about 100 feet higher than the surrounding territory. Of the known dead 11 bodies had been recovered at latest reports, but 30 coffins and a corps of doctors and undertakers left for the scene Sunday evening. In several cases entire families were wiped out almost instantly while asleep in their beds. As in all French villages, practically all the families are intermarried, so that nearly every resident of the place has lost some relative. The scenes among the survivors of the catastrophe were heartrending in the extreme, but work was begun at once, with assistance from the surrounding districts, in digging out the bodies, some of which, however, may never be recovered. The stream is completely blocked by the great mass of earth and the water damned up, which is causing an immense flood, threatening further destruction along the river.

CHILD GAVE CLEW

That Led To the Arrest of a Brutal Murderess.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 27.—Through information furnished the police department by a 10-year-old girl, Mary Prudenta, Superintendent of Police Taylor ordered the arrest of Mrs. Nicoletta Perretti, aged 32, of 8707 Ernig street, who is charged with brutally murdering Carmela Manciuzze, aged 70 years, of 5925 Woodland avenue, last November. The police believe now they have cleared a deep mystery that has baffled the entire detective force for more than five months.

Mrs. Manciuzze was found by her husband on his return from work, November 4 last, with her throat cut from ear to ear, and her skull crushed, and $700 that she had carried was missing. No clew was left by the murderer.

A day or two ago 10-year-old Mary Prudenta went to Detective Ulrich Palmer and told him that she had overheard the Perretti woman confess to her mother that she had killed an old woman a few months ago. The mother confirmed the story.

Sunday night, in Superintendent Taylor's office, the accused woman was confronted by Mrs. Prudenta and the child. At first she denied having made the confession, but later on admitted it.

Newsboys Gave the Alarm.

Joliet, Ill., April 27.—Another mysterious fire even more serious in its results than that of three weeks ago swept through a part of the business section of Joliet Sunday morning, resulting in losses of over $700,000 and the complete destruction of Joliet's largest department store, known as the Boston store. Shortly after 6 o'clock Sunday morning three newsboys noticed smoke coming from the windows on the fourth floor of the Wiener block, in which the Boston store is located. The firemen on their arrival found that the entire inside of the building was a mass of flames. The blaze had apparently started near the elevator shaft in the basement.

Robbed the Church.

New York, April 27.—While worshipers at the Church of Our Lady of Mercy, Brooklyn, were celebrating the dedication of their new church with a parade, some thief slipped into the church and stole the day's collections.

Cotton Mills To Close.

Spartansburg, S. C., April 27.—The closing down of the cotton mills of North and South Carolina July 1, which was decided upon at a meeting of representatives of all mills here, will throw 30,000 or more out of work.

DUC DE CHAULNES IS DEAD

HUSBAND OF THEODORA SHONTS SUCCUMBS TO HEART DISEASE.

Tragic End of Love Romance—French Nobleman Passes Away in Arms of His Wife.

Paris.—In the presence of his bride of less than three months, Emmanuel Theodore Bernard Marie d'Albert de Luynes d'Ailly, ninth duke of Chaulnes and of Picquigny, and marquis of Dangeau, died suddenly from heart failure at 11 o'clock Thursday night in his apartments in the Hotel Langham, in the Rue Boccador. The physicians summoned to attend the duke in his sudden seizure officially gave the cause of death as embolism of the heart.

The duke for years had suffered from a weak heart and for some time had been subject to fainting spells. Several times after his arrival here he consulted Dr. Henri Iscovesco in an effort to obtain relief from his ailment.

The duchess was holding the duke in her arms when he expired. She was overcome by grief and could not be persuaded by some of her American friends, who visited the apartment, to leave the bedside of her dead husband and kept vigil there throughout the night.

The duke and duchess, who was Miss Theodora Shonts, youngest daughter of Theodore P. Shonts of New York, were married in New York February 16 of this year. The wedding was a brilliant social function and the end of the brief honeymoon was sudden and tragic. Since the arrival of the couple here a month ago they had lived comparatively quietly at the Hotel Langham, taking an occasional automobile ride in the afternoon and in the evening dining with intimate friends or going to the theater.

FOUR MINERS DIE; 100 ESCAPE.

Explosion in Shaft at Ellsworth, Pa., Almost a Catastrophe.

Pittsburg, Pa. — Four men were killed, three seriously injured and 100 others had a narrow escape from death Thursday when an explosion occurred in mine No. 1 of the Ellsworth Collieries Company at Ellsworth, Pa., Washington county. The dead are foreigners. Their bodies were mangled and badly burned. It is supposed the accident resulted from an accumulation of gas in a new entry becoming ignited in some manner at present unknown.

Deputy Mine Inspector J. W. Loutitt arrived at Ellsworth late Thursday afternoon, where he is making a complete investigation. Unusual presence of mind is said to he responsible for about 100 miners escaping from the mine. Although the concussion threw them to the ground, all retained their composure and after great difficulty reached the surface.

Crime of a Jealous Man.

Belvidere, Ill.—Maddened by the knowledge that another man was paying attention to his sweetheart, Mouris Bengston Thursday morning shot Miss Sigrid Appleholm, probably mortally wounding her. Rushing from the house into the highway, he then put a bullet through his heart.

Oldest Man in Canada Dies.

Winnipeg, Man.—John McNabb, the oldest man in Canada, died on the shores of Lake Manitoba. He was born in western Canada in 1800 and would have been 108 years old in August. He had been in the employ of the Hudson Bay company from boyhood.

Miners to Vote on Strike.

Springfield, Ill.—The coal miners and operators of Illinois have reached the parting of the ways, so far as the joint scale committee is concerned, in the settlement of the wage scale, and it is now up to the rank and file of the united workers of the state to determine by referendum whether a strike shall be ordered to compel the Illinois Coal Operators' association to pay the wages of shot firers employed in the mines. This action was determined upon by the miners Friday afternoon.

EX-BRITISH PREMIER DEAD.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman Passes Away at London Home.

London.—Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, former British premier, died Wednesday at his official residence, 10 Downing street. The end was peaceful.

The death of Sir Henry after a lingering illness of more than two months did not come as a surprise. Although the doctors' bulletins had not declared his condition critical, that fact was perfectly understood and the public had been expecting the announcement of his death at any hour during the past fortnight.

Sir Henry Compbell-Bannerman was born September 7, 1836. He was the youngest son of the lato Sir James Campbell of Stracathro, Forfarshire, some time lord provost of Glasgow. He assumed the additional name under the will of his maternal uncle, the late Henry Bannerman of Hunton Court, Kent, who bequeathed to him a large estate.

For nearly 40 years he sat for the same seat—the Stirling burghs—and his record of office goes back to 1871, when he was financial secretary to the war office, which post he held a second time from 1880 to 1882.

Sir Henry became premier in 1905, and the election of that year gave him the largest majority ever given a British premier.

During his term as premier, as, indeed, throughout his entire life, Sir Henry showed a dogged determination that won him many adherents and countless admirers.

MINNESOTA LAWYER SUSPENDED

Capt. Hart Disciplined for Criticising the Supreme Court.

St. Paul, Minn.—A special supreme court appointed by Gov. Johnson, consisting of five district judges of the state, Friday rendered a decision suspending Capt. Francis B. Hart, a Minneapolis attorney, from practicing as an attorney and counsellor-at-law in any of the courts of Minnesota for a period of six months. The charges against Hart, upon which petition for his disbarment was based, arose from his letters to Gov. Johnson and Chief Justice Start of the supreme court in December last, passing severe criticism upon the supreme body regarding three cases decided by that body in which he was counsel for the defeated parties.

Dynamite Shatters Town.

Eagle River, Wis.—Six hundred pounds of dynamite in a burning warehouse, 400 feet from the business section of this city, exploded Friday. Six business buildings were wrecked. Fronts of other buildings were blown in and all of the structures are partly demolished. No one was killed in the explosion. The damage is estimated at $15,000.

England Keeps Famous Flag.

London.—The flag of the American frigate Chesapeake, which was taken by H. M. Shannon June 1, 1813, and which recently was sold at auction in this city, has been presented to the Royal United Service museum by William Waldorf Astor. This is the first intimation that Mr. Astor was the purchaser of the flag, though it was announced at the auction that the agent who secured the trophy was acting on behalf of an American. Mr. Astor also gave the museum the famous bugle of Balaclava.

WIND WORKS HAVOC

TORNADO IN LOUISIANA, ALABAMA AND MISSISSIPPI.

ABOUT 225 ARE KILLED

Atlanta, Ga.—A wind of cyclonic proportions swept over portions of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama late Friday, leaving a trail of dead and injured. The number of killed is estimated at about 225 and the number of injured at over 800, with many portions of the afflicted districts to hear from.

Many of the dead are negroes. Perhaps a dozen white persons were caught in falling buildings and either fatally injured or so seriously disabled as to require medical attention.

The loss of life was chiefly in the quarters of colored persons, where the wind destroyed their cabins, hurying the occupants in the debris, or in the farming sections of the country, where trees were uprooted, telegraph and telephone poles torn up and general destruction was wrought.

Many Small Towns Wrecked.

In Louisiana it is estimated that a score of small towns were destroyed or partially wrecked. They include Amite City, Arcadia and Independence. Belle Grove, Melton, Lorman, Pine Ridge, Quitman Landing, Fairchilds Creek, Purvis and Lumberton, Miss., are reported seriously damaged hy the storm.

In Alahama, Dora was the chief sufferer. This town is also known as Bergen. Four or more persons were killed, among them the wife and daughter of Section Master Moore. Fifty persons at the lowest estimate were injured. Those most seriously hurt were carried to hospitals in Birmingham, Ala. One woman, a Mrs. McCully, died on the train. Two other members of this family were seriously injured.

At Bergen cars were blown from the railroad tracks and considerable other property destroyed.

Alabama Town Suffers.

Reports also say that the storm struck Albertville, Ala., late in the afternoon and destroyed nearly the entire northern portion of the town. A cotton mill was blown down, the storm ranging northward, doing much destruction to life and propelty. An unconfirmed report from this section gives the death list as from 30 to 35 with scores of persons injured. A train was sent from Birmingham, carrying physicians and a squad of state militiamen to the district. Aid is also pouring in from all other directions.

From Meridian, Miss., comes a report that Mrs. John Minnece and her child were killed outright and John Minnece was seriously injured, while a number of other persons were hurt, and there was considerable destruction of property.

Richland and Lamourle, La., were struck hy the storm and nearly a fifth of their population injured.

Winchester, Miss., Wiped Out.

Winchester, Miss., a small town, is reported wiped out, though only two persons are known to have been killed.

Natchez, Miss., reports 60 are known to be dead in the northern Louisiana storm. Hundreds of plantation cabins are reported destroyed in this section.

Three Places Destroyed.

Hattiesburg, Miss. — The towns of McCallum, Purvis and McLaurin, Miss., were practically wiped out by a storm which swept over this section Friday and it is heileved that 100 persons have been killed in this section. Over 150 injured have been brought to the hospitals here for treatment and others are being brought in every hour. Every business house in Purvis and a majority of the residences were destroyed. Many families are destitute and it is estimated that $15,000 will be needed for the immediate relief of the sufferers.

Hospital Burns; Patients Saved.

Big Rapids, Mich.—Fire Tuesday afternon destroyed Mercy hospital here, a $75,000 establishment erected 28 years ago. All of the patients and the 40 Sisters of Mercy who were in the building escaped without injury.

There were, fortunately, when the fire broke out, but 25 or 30 patients in the institution, an unusually small number. Starting apparently from a defective chimney, the fire was first discovered near the roof. It spread rapidly, but there was time enough to remove carefully all of the patients. The structure was entirely destroyed except a small addition.

Tourists Visit New Volcano.

Naples.—Three hundred American tourists landed here Wednesday from the White Star steamer Cretic and visited the new and imposing crater of Solfatara, near Pozzuoli, which recently has become active.

British Defeat Mohmands.

Simla.—In consequence of an attempt made by the Mohmand tribesmen to cut his lines of communication, Sir James Wilcocks, the commander of the British force sent out from Peshawur against the raiding natives, attacked the enemy Friday morning with two columns, comprising all his available troops. After a sharp fight the British troops dislodged the tribesmen from their positions. The British casualities are given at 60; the losses of the Mohmands are not known.

HOW HE SHOT THEM.

Made Little Difference to Sportsman Where His Birds Were Hit.

"Down in Florida, where I spend the greater part of the winter," said the sunburned New Yorker, "they are not so particular about observing the game laws and the little niceties of hunting as we are up north, I had frequently seen water fowl shot without giving them a chance to rise. Coming up to Jacksonville a big German got on the train at Port Orange with a nice string of duck. He sat next me in the smoker and I struck up a conversation with him.

"'Nice lot of ducks you have there,' I said.

"'Yah,' he replied.

"'Where did you get them?' I asked.

"'Down py de inlet up de creeks,' he said.

"'I suppose you shot them on the wing,' I ventured, remembering the trick of the pot hunters.

"'Nopody shoots dem on de wing, und in de feet, und in de head, eferywhere. Dere dey are. You can examine dem und see for yourself.'"

How I Cured Sweeny and Fistula.

"I want to tell you how I saved one of our horses that had a fistula. We had the horse doctor out and he said it was so bad that he did not think he could cure it, and did not come again. Then we tried Sloan's Liniment and it cured it up nicely.

"One day last spring I was plowing for a neighbor, who had a horse with sweeny, and I told him about Sloan's Liniment and he had me get a bottle for him, and it cured his horse all right, and he goes off now like a colt.

"We had a horse that had sweeny awfully bad and we thought it was never going to be any good, but we used Sloan's Liniment and it cured it up nicely. I told another neighbor about it and he said it was the best Liniment he ever used.

"We are using Sloan's Sure Colic Cure and we think it is all right."

Nothing to Get.

Gelett Burgess was talking at a theatrical supper in New York about the Lark, his delightful little paper that failed.

"Nearly all good papers fail," said he. "I have an aged friend who runs a splendid paper in a small western village. The last copy my friend sent me had this editorial paragraph marked in blue pencil:

"'Burglars entered our house last night. To the everlasting shame of the community, for whose welfare we have labored 38 years, be it said, they got nothing.'"

Perversion of Type.

The Sunday school teacher was entertaining her class with what she had fondly planned to be a "social evening." To her disappointment she found that all spontaneity had been left at home with the boys' everyday clothes, and conversation dragged hopelessly until her bull terrier came into the room. He sniffed about from one shy hand of welcome to another, when suddenly a boyish voice, gruff with emharrassment, burst forth: "I had a bull pup like that oncet, but he growed up into a bloodhound."

The Oldest Professions.

An old friend of the family had dropped in to see a young lawyer whose father was still paying his office rent.

"So you are now practising law," the old friend said, genially.

"No, sir," said the candid youth. "I appear to be, but I am really practising economy."—Youth's Companion.

JAGGED AND TIED TO A BOARD

Are Prison Inmates While Brutally Lashed With Bloody Strap.

Frankfort, Ky.—To make clear his position as to the charge against him that he had not maintained the discipline desired by the Hoge-Montgomery Co., who have a contract on convicts in the state prison here, George P. Chinn, of Harrodsburg, who was removed as warden of the penitentiary a few days ago, gave out a statement declaring that treatment accorded to the prisoners was sickening.

He says that so rigid is the discipline required that more than 1,200 lashes had been applied to a single prisoner.

He says that the strap used by the guards in their brutal work was a three-edged affair, and that when he went into the place as warden, and had it destroyed, that it was covered with blood.

He says that a defenseless prisoner who was lashed because he was unable to complete his task was taken to a remote corner of the cellroom, strapped to a board, a sheet stuffed into his mouth and given twenty lashes, and so brutal became the treatment and so fearful were the convicts of the lash, they actually cut off their fingers in order to be sent to the hospital when they saw that it was impossible to complete the day's labor that had been assigned them.

A rigid investigation of the charges will be made, not only by state officials, but by the grand jury.

COUNTER CLAIM

Frankfort, Ky.—Through a telegram received here information is conveyed that William F. and Roger Lillard, of Anderson county, among the largest dealers in cattle in Kentucky, had the judgment of $7,000 given by the district federal court here against the Kentucky Distillers and Warehouse Co., of Louisville, confirmed by the United States court of appeals at Cincinnati. The company sued Lillard Bros. for $10,000 to cover pay for slopping cattle at Cedar Brook Distillery, Anderson county, and they filed a counter claim for $19,000, alleging that the company permitted 64 head of cattle to starve to death.

Lawyers Will Not Secure Fee.

Frankfort, Ky.—Attorneys Perry and Middleton, of Louisville, will not secure a fee for defending Murderer William Van Dalsen, who was recently hanged at Louisville for killing his sweetheart, Fannie Porter. The court of appeals decided that the property turned over to them by Van Dalsen was not his property. There was no effort or intention on the part of Van Dalsen to deceive his attorneys, as the transfer of the property to him was made in good faith.

Ready For Riflemen.

Frankfort, Ky.—The state has closed a contract for the lease of the Ueltschi property at Kennebec Station, which will be used as a state rifle range this year. It is the same property used last year as a state rifle range. Capt. Jackson Morris, assistant secretary of state, will coach the team. Everything is in readiness for the practice work to begin May 15.

KILLED IN A PISTOL FIGHT

Was Former Leader of United Mine Workers of Kentucky.

Central City, Ky.—In a desperate revolver battle between James D. and John Woods, brothers, and John McGann, former chief of police, James D. Woods, former president of the United Mine Workers, of Kentucky, was instantly killed; his brother John desperately wounded, and McGann shot, but not fatally.

The shooting took place at a railroad crossing. The men renewed an old quarrel, and, after a few words, began firing. When the smoke cleared away James Woods was lying on the ground with five bullets in his body, dead. His brother lay nearby with a bullet in his bowels, and the ex-policeman had a bullet in his hip.

The shooting was the result of an old grudge, covering a period of several months. The city council of Central City recently became deadlocked over the election of Wryme Wooten to succeed McGann as chief of police. This and other personal troubles promoted the duel.

CHARTERS OF FOUR TOWNS

Lexington, Ky.—Through a clerical error charters of cities of the second class have been technically shorn of a section which provides the number and qualifications of members of general councils, the manner of their election and the rules covering them.

The cities of Lexington, Covington, Newport and Paducah are equally affected. The error dates back to 1906 and can not be corrected until another meeting of the legislature.

It is the opinion of Lexington's city solicitor, Col. J. Embry Allen, that neither the election of members of the four present councils or the acts of the four councils since the passage of the 1906 annexation act is affected.

This unique state of affairs—probably without precedent—was brought about by the mistaking of the figures "11" for the "Roman letters "II."

Masked Men Rob Bank.

Bandana, Ky.—Four masked robbers after taking possession of the Cumberland Telephone Exchange compelled Assistant Cashier B. H. Hahs, of the Ballard County bank, of Bandana, to unlock the bank and open the safe for them. The robbers got away with $3,000, leaving Hahs and the telephone operator bound in the telephone exchange.

Awarded $500 Damages.

Frankfort, Ky.—A hump on the shoulder of Mrs. Ora Williams, of Louisville, when being jostled from her seat by the sudden starting of a street car will cost the Louisville Street Railway Co. $500, as she was awarded that sum in damages by the court of appeals.

The Chief Gete Even.

Louisville, Ky.—In the trials of Geo. Franks, Jas. Harris and Thos. Bailey, suspected felons, Chief Haager sprung a surprise. He recognized them as the men who attempted to hold him up in Chicago five years ago. They were sent to the workhouse for one year.

Indiana Company Gete Contract.

Versailles, Ky.—The city council awarded the contracts for the installation of waterworks and sewer systems in Versailles to the Shefold Co., of New Albany, Ind., at $32,000 for the waterworks and $20,500 for the sewers. There were four other bidders.

Slain Kentuckian Is Found.

Lexington, Ky.—The body of Payton Strunk was found in an isolated section of Pulaski county with a gunshot wound through the heart. No clew to the murderer has been found, but evidence of a struggle was shown.

Slays Stepfather.

Lexington, Ky.—After abusing his stepson, Samuel Smith, 17, C. C. Wallace was shot and fatally wounded by the boy. The shooting was caused by trouble between Wallace and his wife, Smith siding with his mother.

Soldiers To Aid Authorities.

Pineville, Ky.—Company I, Second Kentucky regiment, left this city for the scenes of the "night riders'" activity. It is said that the company will proceed to Trigg county to aid the authorities there.

IS ALL DECEPTION

AMBIGUITY THE NOTE OF THE OHIO PLATFORM.

Policy of Attempting to Deceive the People is Plainly to Be Seen—Republican Leaders at Their Old Tricks.

As the platform adopted by the late Republican convention of Ohio was approved by President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft, the tariff plank of that platform, therefore, may be regarded as the prototype of the tariff plank of the coming national convention, if the same Republican faction control it as controlled the Ohio convention.

As many people believe that what Mr. Roosevelt declares, must be the gospel truth, and that similar avowals from Secretary Taft are of the "me, too," variety, it becomes of importance to investigate just what was promised on the tariff issue in that Ohio platform which said:

"A revision of the tariff by a special session of the next congress, insuring the maintenance of the true principle of protection by imposing such customs duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit, to the end that, without excessive duties, American manufacturers, farmers, producers and wage-earners may have adequate protection."

The only promise in that plank that can be understood is that the next congress shall be called in special session for tariff revision. What kind of revision, whether to revise the tariff higher or revise it lower, is not stated. It promises the trusts they will still be protected by duties that will equal the difference between "the cost of production" at home and abroad, and on top of that protection "a reasonable profit."

Fancy the Republican standpatters of the next congress, if they have a majority, considering "the cost of production." How will they find out and from whom will they inquire what is the difference of the cost of production of trust products here and of similar products abroad? Judging from the past the trusts alone will furnish them such inside information. The managers of those corporations that control the steel, the cotton, the woolen, the pottery, the glass and the other products of the trusts protected by the tariff will thus again fix the tariff schedules. Under such a revision of the tariff there would be the same disgraceful spectacle as occurred at the Arlington hotel in Washington in 1897 when the Republican members of the ways and means committee were receiving the trust managers and attorneys with their prepared schedules that were adopted by the committee, in many cases almost without change from the way the monopolists demanded.

There is good evidence that the Republican leaders, whatever their promises may be, intend to revise the tariff higher, by adding schedules of maximum rates some 20 or 30 per cent more than the present high rates, which are to be called the minimum tariff rates. The leading members of the present ways and means committee of the house of representatives have so stated and no Republican leader has gainsaid them.

The Republican plan of confusing and deceiving the voters of the country by an ambiguous tariff plank is an old trick; it has been worked in Iowa to defeat the "Iowa idea;" it was used in Massachusetts to blind the eyes of Republican partisans. Hon. William L. Douglas, who was elected governor of Massachusetts on the tariff issue, described it when he said:

"The Republican party of Massachusetts has retreated under the shelter of an ambiguous phrase from the high ground which it occupied last year. Either the leaders of the party were insincere last year, or they are insincere this year. What does 'present action' mean? Does it mean free hides, free coal, free iron, free wood pulp, free lumber? Does it mean reciprocity with Canada? Does it mean anything that the people of Massachusetts, irrespective of party affiliations, are so generally demanding? Those leaders who talk so vaguely of 'present action' are in reality opposing tariff reform. Their action consists in adopting ambiguous phrases to deceive the people; in 'standing pat' on the Dingley schedule, and in ringing the alarm bells of the trusts."

The ambiguity of the Ohio platform plainly shows that it is the intention to again deceive the people.

As to Publicity.

It will be remembered that at one time President Roosevelt was all for "publicity" as a cure for the plundering of corporations. Congress gave him the means and the power to carry out his ideas, but for some unexplained reason after obtaining from the bureau of corporations exhaustive reports on many of the trusts the president has not taken the public into his confidence by publishing what has been discovered. Representative McCall of Massachusetts, an honest and old-fashioned Republican, thinks publicity desirable and gives Tom Lawson and the magazine writers credit for what they have done in that direction. He criticises President Roosevelt for doing things he has done and leaving undone what he should have done, when lately interviewed on present conditions by saying: "I am one of those who doubt whether the world is any happier, or is likely to be any better, in consequence of the particular things that the government has lately been doing."

SAME OLD PLATFORM PROMISES.

Stand of Illinois Republicans on Tariff Revision.

The Illinois Republican convention, under the guiding hand of that sly old standpatter, Speaker Cannon, adopted a tariff plank in their platform beginning with a stump speech that eulogizes the present high tariff as the cause of prosperity. It does not explain, however, why this tariff did not continue its beneficent work so as to prevent the panic or the present business depression. The tariff plank bears the earmarks of the standpatters of the Protective Tariff League, tempered by the fear of Payne and Dalzell that tariff revision is coming and the only hope for continued protection to the trusts is to try to so moderate the demands that the voters can again be fooled into support of the Republican standpatters and their allies, the tariff protected trusts.

It is very interesting to see the standpatters now so anxious—on paper—for tariff revision. Uncle Joe's platform tells us the secret that: "The benefits conferred by the present tariff have produced an industrial situation that suggests the possibility of securing by the revision of the tariff additional benefits for the people of the United States through a wise continuance of the policy of protection." Of course, there is a possibility" that a Republican revision of the tariff might inure to the benefit of the people, but it is very improbable. But this Republican platform admits that the tariff has not given the people a square deal for "it is now apparent that in order to maintain the scientific accuracy of the tariff, remove inequalities and prevent injustice, some new schedules must be added to the law, some of the present rates must be lowered and some must be repealed altogether."

Whether the people of the protected interests would benefit by such a revision will perhaps never be known, for it would be evident folly for the people to intrust tariff reform to the Republican party which has notoriously protected the trusts at the expense of the people. It is evident that the Republicans of Illinois so love protection and the campaign contributions from the trusts that they have no intention of discarding the policy of protection, for the platform further says: "We believe that the people of the United States will profit by a new tariff, but it must be a Republican tariff, a protective tariff." That shows how hard it is for standpatters to surrender to the inevitable and how impossible it will be for Republicans, such as Speaker Cannon and the other leaders who now control congress, to give relief from trust plundering under any revision of the tariff they would vote for.

That can be readily seen by anyone who will take the trouble to read this Illinois Republican platform, which has evidently been carefully prepared by the standpat faction of the Republican party as a more explicit pattern for the national convention to follow than the Roosevelt-Taft platform adopted by the late Ohio convention. Both platforms declare for revision "after election," but neither declares for tariff reduction. In fact, the Illinois convention declares for "minimum and maximum rates—the minimum rates giving full protection," which must mean that the minimum rates of the proposed new tariff law will not be any less than the present law provides and on top of that much higher maximum rates to be charged on imports from those foreign countries that exact high rates on American products.

That can only mean revising the tariff higher. Democrats are all agreed that the tariff must be reduced, so that the tariff will not protect the trusts that sell cheaper to foreigners than to our own people. It is hardly possible that those Republican voters who believe in a reduction of the high rates of the present tariff and who have waited so patiently for their own party to undertake it, will longer be fooled by such specious promises that on their face are intended to deceive.

Tariff Hocus Pocus.

One of the best arguments against any tariff bill ever made was that of Senator Beveridge in his reply to Senator Newlands, on January 5, 1908. Mr. Beveridge declared that congress could not of itself find out the facts and make the classifications necessary as a condition precedent to framing a just tariff bill (See record, page 1595). Yet the people's representatives alone are authorized to frame such a bill. If they cannot frame a just tariff bill, why should they frame any at all? If the committee on ways and means cannot discover and correct the inequalities of the iron and steel schedule, the wool schedule, the cotton textile schedule, the wood schedule, the pottery schedule, and two or three others which do all the real damage, then popular government is a failure, indeed.

This Beveridge bill is a snare and a delusion. It was conceived in sin and born in iniquity. Its object is to allow the trusts to continue to charge our own people not only the difference between the price of any article abroad and the price at home, but to sell steel rails and other products from 20 to 50 per cent cheaper abroad than at home. It will not fool anybody outside of Indiana, however. It is too Falstaffian—too gross and palpable a fallacy.

Tariff revision right after election, says Mr. Fairbanks. We trust that the vice-president has had the politeness to consult the speaker of the house in this matter. The announcement, besides, would carry more weight.

The happy young couple left at once for their home near Burlington to receive the congratulations of their many friends. Rev. Arthur Terpenning, a young man employed by the long distance telephone company, had the misfortune to have his left arm broken in two places, Wednesday, while assisting in erecting a large pole on Geo. Power's land near town. The telephone company is changing the long distance line from the outskirts of the town, to avoid the shade trees, to the outskirts of Walton, and in raising one of the poles young Terpenning slipped on the green clover in the field and fell, a large cross-arm of the telephone pole falling and striking him across the wrist, breaking the bone in two places. The heavy piece of timber also struck him across the back and inflicted painful internal injuries. Terpenning was taken to Dr. B. K. Menefee's office and his wounds dressed, and then he was conveyed to the Atlas Hotel, where he is now confined. Terpenning is a fine young man of attractive qualities. He resides at Highland, New York. He appears to be very unfortunate as less than a month previous he accidentally ran a piece of wire into his right eye, almost destroying the sight. He is rapidly improving and is receiving every attention to hasten his recovery.

A large log barn shedded on all sides, and the property of William Hedges, who resides about 3½ miles south of Burlington, was destroyed by fire about 5 a. m., last Sunday, together with a lot of corn, harness and farm implements. Mr. Hedges discovered the smoke issuing from the barn immediately upon rising that morning. She called her husband's attention to it and he hastened to the barn and discovered the fire was under a pile of about 1,000 pounds of hay in the loft. He got a bucket of water and threw on it, when he thought he could throw the mass out of the loft with a fork, but when the hay was lifted the fire was given air and the blaze was soon beyond control, and a hot fire was soon in progress. Mr. Hedges' loss is about $500 with an insurance of $175 in the Boone county company. Mr. Hedges has no idea as to the origin of the fire as no person had been about the building since the evening before, so far as he knows.

The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion, PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $5 discount on the two seasons—paying only $35 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $20 will be collected.

This Stallion is a Mahoghany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone County as his colts speak for themselves. A ring of this Stallion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

Care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur. Positively no business done on Sunday. Parties breeding must follow up the season.

In offering William Penn for public service at the small fee of $10, we believe that we are presenting to the public a rare opportunity of obtaining some of the best blood in a horse that will transmit to his get quality, disposition, size, speed and magnificent conformation. He is an exceptionally fine saddle horse, going all the saddle gaits in a very attractive manner. He is a quiet, fearless driver that has speed enough at either the trot or pace to make a race horse. He is a very handsome horse with a disposition that is perfect. We could take up more space in giving a long description and pedigree of his ancestors, and what they had done, but William Penn will prove for himself that he will transmit to his get the rare qualities that he possesses. Pasture furnished at $2 a month.

MIKE, Jr.,

The breeding jack, is black with mealy points, 8 years old, 15 hands, and a sure foal getter. Sired by Mike, 16 hands (the Boddie jack); dam, Bourbon Belle by Bourbon Chief, 16 hands.

William Penn, the handsome combined stallion, and Mike Jr., the breeding jack, will make the season of 1908 at our farm 3½ miles southwest of Union, Ky., each at $10.00 to insure a living foal.

We cordially invite public inspection of our stock at any time, and we feel sure that you will find them to be exactly as represented.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733

PROPERTY OF

High Vine Horse Company,

WALTON, KY.,

In the stud at the farm of W. Lee Gaines near Richwood, Ky., at $20 to insure live foal.

W. L. Gaines, President.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733,

Foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667, Grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730. Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2282, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1665. Second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60. Third dam, Maxey by Granger. Fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

A number of prominent citizens of the locality of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine saddle horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20.00 to insure.

High Vine was shown at various county fairs, last fall, and was a prize winner at all of them, taking first in the Sweepstakes Saddle and Harness ring at Erlanger, and defeating the great Chancellor gelding at Sanders. He has proved to be a fine breeder, and his colts will be ready sellers at fancy prices. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and keeping.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from breeding of 1908, the time and place of the show to be announced later.

High Vine Horse Company,
Walton, Ky.

A crowd of Rebekahs from Petersburg and Aurora came down, Saturday night, and visited Evergreen lodge of this place. Lunch was served at 11 o'clock in the I. O. O. F. hall. All had an enjoyable time.

Last Saturday evening about one o'clock a large body of horsemen were seen approaching town from the direction of McVille. Guards were immediately stationed around the town and at the tobacco warehouses as it was thought a band of night riders were about to raid the town. But our fears were groundless, for on their arrival it was seen that instead of carrying rifles and torches they were carrying ball bats and other paraphernalia usually carried by a first class ball club. The name on their uniform, "Live Oaks," signified that they were the boys that had come to clean out the B. B. club, and put a blot on an otherwise clean record. Both teams started off well but in the fifth inning our boys found their opponents pitcher and by hard hitting put 6 runs over the plate, leaving the visitors in the roar. The following is the result by innings:

Batteries—Sandford and McCarty; Wingate and Hodges; struck out, by Sandford 9, Wingate 4; three base hit, Sandford; two base hits Sandford and Clore; one base hit, Clore 2, Botts 1, Sandford 1, Rogers 2, Cook 3, Presser 1, Stucky 1; Live Oaks—Wingate 1, R. Hodges 2, Scott 1. Umpire, Brady; time of game, 2 hours. Next Saturday will be the tug of war, the strong Shamrocks, of Aurora, play here. Come out and see a good game.

Oh what visions cheered his eyes as his eager spirit hastened to his home beyond the skies. Another effort is being made to raise money with which to bridge Cooper creek at Plattsburg. When rural mail route No. 1 was applied by the Burlington office was established about three and a half years ago, the inspector, before recommending the route, understood that he had a promise that the ford at Plattsburg would be improved. Now if the Postoffice Department were to send an inspector of the rural routes and see that the ford at Plattsburg, instead of being improved, has been permitted to get cosiderably worse than it was at the time the rural route was established, there might be considerable trouble to retain the present very efficient mail service.

Letter From California.

San Diego, April 29, 1908.

To the Boone County RECORDER and its readers:—I will endeavor to write my friends a few lines through the good old Boone County RECORDER. I feel quite lost at times here, so far from my good old Kentucky home without the RECORDER to read.

I left Kentucky about one year ago for my health, coming to Arizona, where I spent about seven months, and being greatly benefited I returned to Kentucky. After staying in the East some three months and found that, for my interest in the way of health, I should return to this climate. So I left home on the 10th day of March for Phoenix, Arizona, where I spent one month. Not feeling as well as I would like at that time, I decided to make a change, hoping for better results, I came here, the southern part of California.

San Diego is a beautiful city of 45.000 inhabitants, and one of the finest Seaports on the grand Paeific Coast This is one of the finest climates one ever experienced—good, old summer time 12 months in the year, and seldom any rain at all. I have not seen rain enough fall since I left home to wet one to his shirt sleeves. They raise very fine fruit of all kinds down here—all done by irrigation. I have been here some three weeks, and during that time there have been 38 war vessels at this place. I was out 27 miles upon the ocean, was on two of the largest ships, Connecticut and Missouri. Not being very well I got somewhat seasick and was glad when I got on shore again.

I am enjoying the warm sunshine here very much, but am not enjoying health so well. I am some better than when I left home, and have not got discouraged, and believe I will soon be able to say I am well once more. For sixteen months I haven't really seen a well day, but hope I will soon. For all of this beautiful, magnificent climate and country, I wouldn't, if in my power, give one week of good health. I can sympathize with any one who is in poor health, and hope these few lines will reach the readers of the RECORDER and find all enjoying a good time.

Not raising tobacco in Kentucky this year the boys will have plenty of time to fish. I wish some of those fishermen were here and see how they catch fish. I have been out on the beach and seen persons catch some so larg they would call for help to get them ashore. It may seem strange if such were caught on Gunpowder creek.

If these few lines reaches the RECORDER readers, I will write another letter in the future and try and give an idea of this country.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Antonia Berkshire Parker, wife of A. B. Parker, passed peacefully to rest at her home in Petersburg, Ky., April 1st, 1908. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Milo Atkinson, of Covington. She made the "Good Confession" when about 25 years of age and was baptized by Rev. David Wahl at Madison, Ind, and ever afterward endeavored to live a Christian life. She was one who had many friends, for to know her was to love her; she was patient and loving to all, during her weeks of illness, when nearing the end, with friends, beloved relatives, five sisters and her only daughter, Sara, who with a mother's love, she entreated to be a true, good woman, and to live a Christian life, for in it only would she find sweet peace, the gift of God's love. She had been a sufferer for several years. While the loved ties were as strong as death, yet she was ready for God to release her imprisoned soul, and death was the only door from suffering to rest from life's warfare to happiness and peace, from time to eternity, when the Christian's faith and trust are realized in Jesus. His sweetest promise matured, making the happy exchange to a home where Jesus is Pie and Diamonds Forever.

The charge that the present acute depression in the diamond industry, both in its mining and retail phases, is due to the sudden cessation of the American demand is too well founded, it may be feared, to be disputed. America is the great market for South African diamonds. Our national appetite for diamonds has hitherto been something like an anaconda's taste for rabbits. Whether this is an indication of a high degree of national culture, associated with great wealth, remarks the Springfield Republican, it remains for our European critics to say. It is certainly true that the panic in American [illegible] is to fall directly out of the diamond market and to bring about that acute crisis which is now agitating the diamond trade in London directors' meetings, Amsterdam cutters' shops and South African mines. Viscount St. Aldwyn's hopeful remarks to his fellow-shareholders of the Bank of Africa seem to have been based entirely upon the assumption that, with business recovery in the United States, "the natural appetite of American women for diamonds" will again "triumph," and then the diamond market will be as good as ever. That seems reasonable, no doubt. Pie for the American man, diamonds for the American woman! We will have them or die.

A Fleet Without a Base.

When the "battle fleet" starts across the Pacific and reaches the Hawaiian Islands it ought to find Pearl Harbor a fortified navy yard for repairs. Not a ship can be repaired there. At Pago Pago and Guam there should be fortified coal depots, but these are wanting, after more than ten years' control and known need. In the Philippines there is not a dry dock which can take in the larger battleships and no repair shops adequate to the fleet. Neither the floating dry dock there nor the repair shops are protected by fortifications. From the time the fleet leaves San Francisco until it enters New York, if the battleships are docked it will be under another flag. If they are repaired it will be in the friendly navy yards of other powers. What would be thought of a railroad, asks the Philadelphia Press, which provided no repair shops for its locomotives when the time was certain to come when other repair shops would be closed to it? Yet this is sure to come in war to our fleet. It can cross the Pacific in peace. In war it will cross the Pacific aware that it can neither dock nor repair.

If there is anything on which Germany is reliable authority it is education. The fatherland is so devoted to promoting the intelligence of the people that illiterates in Germany are exceedingly rare. There is special force, therefore, in the announcement from Berlin that the advisability of following the example of the United States in the matter of thoroughness of technical and manual scholastic training is under consideration. This was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Pabst, director of the Leipsic teachers' seminary, and the dispatch, noting that the auditors were enthusiastic, added: "The lecturer showed moving pictures of school scenes in the United States, where, he said, the technical training of the youth attained such perfection as to be almost inconceivable." That is a tribute the significance of which no one can question. When a distinguished German teacher lauds the superiority of American educational methods the compliment is of the superlative order.

China is making progress, even if slowly in some respects. The government recently regained control of a railroad enterprise for which a concession had been granted to foreign capitalists, and will carry out the undertaking with home talent and Chinese cash. This may prove less expeditious than would be the original plan, but it shows that at last the Chinese are waking up to the value of such means of transportation. And now a petition has been put in for the government to construct a line from Peking to a point where connection will be made with the Trans-Siberian railway, which will permit direct passage from the Chinese capital to Moscow, Russia Or, asks the Troy (N. Y.) Times, is this part of a clever Russian scheme to get access by rail to a Chinese port without going through Manchuria, where there has been some unpleasant experience?

JAP WARSHIP SUNK

MORE THAN 200 DROWNED

About 150 Members of the Crew and Cadets Are Rescued by Two Other War Vessels—Many Officers Perish.

Tokyo. — More than 200 men, including the captain and many other officers, perished early Thursday when the training cruiser Matsushima was sunk by the accidental explosion of a projectile. According to a report from Admiral Yoshimatsu, commanding the training squadron, the disaster occurred while the vessel was anchored at Makung, in the Pescadores islands. About 150 of those aboard the Matsushima were rescued by the cruisers Hashidate and Itsukushima.

Cruiser Immediately Sinks.

The Matsushima immediately sank until only the bridge was visible. Efforts at rescue by boats from the cruisers Hashidate and Itsukushima continued for a long time, saving the lives of 141 men, including some officers. The majority of the officers were not saved, and at the time of the admiral's report the cadets numbered 53 out of a complement of 300. The sons of Baron Chinda, vice-minister of the foreign office, and of Prince Oyama, field marshal, are among the cadets who it was feared were lost, also Capts. Name, Yoshmori and Yashiro. The cause of the explosion was unknown.

Seek Facts Before Report.

Washington. — Baron Takahira, the Japanese ambassador, was just about to start for the state department Thursday when he was shown the dispatch from Tokyo telling of the loss of life by the explosion on the cruiser Matsushima. It was the first news the ambassador had received of the tragedy and he expressed deep regret over the occurrence. With their usual caution and conservatism the naval officials at Tokyo evidently are obtaining all the information possible before giving out any full report of the disaster. No report of the explosion reached the navy department during the morning from the American naval attache at Tokyo. Naval officers who at once looked up the record of the cruiser drew the conclusion that her loss was not a heavy one to the Japanese navy.

Vessel a Small One.

She was of less than 5,000 tons displacement and of a type which has not been followed since her construction. The peculiarity of the Matsushima was her armament, which consisted of one 12-inch gun mounted on her poop deck. In addition she carried 12 four-inch guns and a battery of smaller caliber and four above-water torpedo tubes. She was built in 1890, being designed and constructed at La Seyne, France. Her principal historic record consists of her part in the war between Japan and China, when she was the flagship of Admiral Ito in the battle of the Yalu river. She also participated in the battle of the Sea of Japan. Two sister ships were built, the Itsukushima in 1890 and the Hashidate in 1891. The cruiser had no armor. She is classed as a protected cruiser, having a protected deck of 1½ inches thick.

AID TORNADO SUFFERERS.

Work of Relief in Afflicted Southern States Is Organized.

New Orleans. — The work of relief for the tornado sufferers in Louisiana and Mississippi is now so thoroughly organized that it covers every part of the wide territory affected by the storm. At Hattiesburg, Miss., Thursday Red Cross officials took charge of the care of the 160 or more severely injured in Hattiesburg hospitals. It is planned to concentrate as many of the badly injured as possible at Hattiesburg in order to better care for them. Some of the injured will be cared for at Lumberton and other towns.

Low Fare Helps Railroads.

Des Moines, Ia. — With the two-cent fare law in operation for the greater part of the period, the eight representative railroads of Iowa show a net gain of $353,057 in passenger earnings for the year ending January 1, 1908. Notwithstanding a falling off $386,000 in the gross earnings for the same period, the conclusion is drawn that the reduction in price of mileage has benefited the railroads as well as the people.

FLEET AT MONTEREY BAY

CITIZENS BEGIN ENTERTAINING THE BLUEJACKETS.

Passage of United Atlantic and Pacific Fleets Through Golden Gate Will Be Stirring Spectacle.

Monterey, Cal.—The Atlantic fleet of battleships steamed in here Friday to give Monterey peninsula a place in the history of the American navy's record-breaking cruise around the world. The residents of Monterey and Pacific Grove and all the other settlements of the vicinity made the occasion of the arrival a holiday. They lined the water front when the fleet dropped anchor at six o'clock in the morning and lingered long to view the beautiful marine spectacle of the 16 ships drawn up in divisional formation.

A great variety of entertainments ashore, both for the men and the officers of the fleet, marked the first day of the battleships' stay and the visit of the squadrons promises to be a thoroughly enjoyable one.

New orders were issued covering the entry of the fleet through the Golden Gate into San Francisco bay on Wednesday, May 6. The revised plans provide for the most picturesque naval display in the history of the nation. It is now ordered that all of the vessels of the Pacific fleet shall join the Atlantic battleships outside the Golden Gate and steam with them through the harbor entrance to the anchorage in the bay where the review of the navy is to be held. Practically the entire fighting force of the navy, with the exception of a few newly-commissioned ships in the east and a few gunboats in Philippine waters, will be in the great column of white and buff vessels that thread their way between the headlands of the gateway—Point Bonita on the north and Point Lobos on the south.

Forty-six vessels will be in line and the long column will stretch as far out to sea as the eye can see. The variety of fighting craft will range from the massive 16,000-ton Connecticut down to the little destroyer Fox of only 154 tons.

ANXIETY FOR MR. CLEVELAND.

Former President Said to Have Cancer of the Stomach.

New York.—Considerable anxiety was occasioned Friday by widely circulated rumors that the condition of ex-President Grover Cleveland, who has been ill for several weeks at a hotel in Lakewood, N. J., had assumed a grave phase and that slight hopes were entertained of his recovery.

The Evening World gave prominence to reports current at the offices of the Equitable Life Assurance society, of which Mr. Cleveland is a voting trustee, that the former president's physicians had diagnosed his illness as cancer of the stomach and had decided that there was no hope of their distinguished patient's recovery.

Grover Cleveland.

Positive denial of these statements were not obtainable. Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, who has attended Mr. Cleveland for years, said that his patient was "all right" and that all his reports from Lakewood were favorable. In answer to a question as to whether Mr. Cleveland was suffering from cancer of the stomach, Dr. Bryant said that as a physician he could not make public the diagnosis in the case of any of his patients. Any information on such a subject, were it to be given to the public, should come from the family, he said.

DARING EXPRESS ROBBERY.

Two Bandits Overpower Messenger and Get Four Bags of Money.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Two train robbers, who evidently boarded the New York & St. Louis express on the Pan-Handle railroad at the Union station in this city when that train left at 10:05 Thursday night, overpowered the express messenger and got away with four bags of currency, containing an amount of money as yet unknown.

The robbery was committed near Walkers station, about 11 miles west of the city. The train was brought to a sudden halt by an emergency signal from the bell cord and when Conductor William Lafferty went forward to learn the trouble he found the express messenger, N. Roshen, bound and gagged and so frightened that he could not give any connected report of what had happened.

SPEAKER CANNON YIELDS

WILL PERMIT ACTION ON TWO IMPORTANT BILLS.

Anti-Injunction Law and Amendment to Sherman Anti-Trust Act Will Come Up.

Washington.—Two important measures are to be reported to the house from the judiciary committee very soon. These are the bills concerning abuse of the injunction and amending the Sherman anti-trust act. Speaker Cannon, through Representative Watson of Indiana, the Republican "whip," let Representative Townsend of Michigan know Thursday that he would permit action on these measures at this session of congress.

This action grew out of a step taken by Mr. Townsend to obtain the signatures of enough Republican members to call a caucus to commit the majority favorably on such measures.

The statement was made Thursday by a prominent Republican in the house that a movement is on foot, backed by between 30 and 40 members of the majority, to refuse consent to the passage of any financial bill at this session until assurance has been given that something will be done towards placing wood pulp on the free list.

Consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill was resumed in the house. Mr. Townsend of Michigan offered an amendment increasing from $50,000 to $350,000 the appropriation for the enforcement by the interstate commerce commission of that clause of the Hepburn act directing the commission to cause to be made examinations of the accounts of the interstate railroads of the country to determine whether that law is being violated, and to make public the results of such examinations. After a debate lasting four hours, the amendment was agreed to.

The house disagreed to the senate amendments to the district of Columbia and pension appropriation bills and sent those bills to conference.

NINE MEET DEATH IN CRASH.

Fatal Collision on an Interurban Road Near Ypsilanti, Mich.

Detroit, Mich.—Two large interurban trolley cars on the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago railway, a part of the Detroit United railways system, running from Detroit to Jackson, collided head-on Tuesday afternoon while running about 45 miles an hour, 25 miles west of here, near Ypsilanti. Nine men were killed and about 30 men and women injured, some of them seriously.

A mistake in orders on the part of Motorman Isa Fay of the limited car, who was crushed to death beneath his vestibule, is alleged to have caused the collision. It is charged that he overran his orders. His home was at Jackson, Mich.

The dead are: Motorman Isa Fay, Jackson; John Paget, Detroit; Charles Carmen, Detroit; George E. Howard, Detroit; Jack McMullen, Syracuse, N. Y.; Barbo..ao Gronni, Detroit; three unidentified men.

BANDITS LOOT BANK OF $8,000.

Scandia State Institution Robbed by a Gang of Six Men.

Crookston, Minn. — Robbers burglarized the Scandia State bank Wednesday and secured about $8,000. They terrorized the inhabitants by "shooting up" the town, and made good their escape.

There were at least six men in the gang, and the front door of the bank was forced by crowbars. The explosion when the vault door was dynamited awakened William Merdink, a merchant who resides over his store in a building adjoining the bank. Others were aroused by a second explosion. Merdink got on the roof of his building, and when the robbers left the bank opened fire, sending 15 bullets after them. The robbers fired a fusillade of shots. One robber was injured, as bloodstains were found.

Slocum when the vessel was destroyed by fire in New York harbor on June 15, 1904, with a loss of more than a thousand lives, was presented Thursday to the president by a committee of the American Association of Masters, Mates and Pilots. 90 BUSHELS OF OATS TO THE ACRE.

WHAT MR. KALTENBRUNNER HAS TO SAY ABOUT HIS GRAIN CROPS IN CENTRAL CANADA.

Writing from Regina, Saskatchewan, Central Canada, Mr. A. Kaltenbrunner writes:—

"Some years ago I took up a homestead for myself, and also one for my son. The half section which we own adjoins the Moose Jaw Creek; is a low, level and heavy land. We put in 70 acres of wheat in stubble which went 20 bushels to the acre, and 30 acres of summer fallow, which went 25 bushels to the acre. All the wheat we harvested this year is No. 1 Hard. That means the best wheat that can be raised on the earth. We did not sell any wheat yet, as we intend to keep one part for our own seed, and sell the other part to people who want first class seed, for there is no doubt if you sow good wheat you will harvest good wheat. We also threshed 9,000 bushels of first class oats ont of 160 acres. 80 acres has been fall plowing, which yielded 90 bushels per acre, and 80 acres stubble, which went 30 bushels to the acre. These oats are the best kind that can be raised. We have shipped three carloads of them, and got 53 cents per bushel clear. All our grain was cut in the last week of the month of August before any frost could touch it.

"Notwithstanding the fact that we have had a late spring, and that the weather conditions this year were very adverse and unfavorable, we will make more money out of our crop this year than last.

"For myself I feel compelled to say that Western Canada crops cannot be checked, even by unusual conditions."

Information regarding free homestead lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta may be had on application to any Canadian Government Agent, whose advertisement appears elsewhere. He will give you information as to best route and what it will cost you to reach these lands for purposes of inspection.

Menu Thoroughly Varied.

James McNeill Whistler once visited an artist in Paris who was not overburdened with this world's goods, and was surprised at the sumptuous lunch provided. On being asked how he managed to live so well, his host replied: "I have a pet monkey, which I let down from my window by a rope into that of my landlady, and trust to Providence. Sometimes Jacko returns with a loaf, sometimes with a ham. His visits are full of surprises. One never knows what may appear."

Ominous.

"Well," demanded the senior partner, "what of that?"

GUESTS AT GOD'S TABLE

Elisha's Barley Loaves Miraculously Multiplied.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

SERMONETTE.

God will always make the offering fit the need.

It is the good things we pass along, not the good things which we keep, which are multiplied many fold.

According to God's arithmetic the more we give the more we have for ourselves.

First consecrate thy gift to God, then let him direct in the distribution thereof. Thus shall thy offering be multiplied many fold. This devout man of Baal-Shalisha brought of the first fruits of his fields that the man of God might be fed, and lo, he hath fed not only the prophet but the hundred needy sons of the prophets gathered there.

Too often we make certain our own needs are satisfied before we are willing to make our offerings to God. It is this reversal of the Scriptural order which not only destroys the power of the gift but loses us the blessing. Remember God's claims upon you first, and not only will your offering be multiplied to the blessing of others, but verily that which remaineth unto thee shall be sufficient for thy needs.

"Will a man rob God?" is a question asked of old. And the sad answer rings down the ages: "Yes, he will and does." But in robbing God man robs himself. In his blind selfishness he clings to what he has and misses the treasures God would pour out upon him.

Listen! "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

There was a dearth in the land. Why? Undoubtedly because the people had withheld from God, and had consumed time and thought and substance upon the gratification of their own desires and lusts. But there was one man who withheld not from God and blessing came to that man and his offering.

There is a dearth in the land to-day in respect to the kingdom of God. Why? Because God's people are withholding the first fruits from him and he cannot send the blessing. If people would reverse the order of their giving, and remember God's claims upon them before they sought to gratify their own desires and needs, not only would there be an increase in the offerings to the Lord, but the offerings would be multiplied by God so that there would not be room to receive his blessing.

THE STORY.

THERE was a dearth in the land, especially in that portion of the country surrounding Gilgal. Successive crops had failed owing to little or no rain falling, and the people were much distressed. In their impoverished condition they were unable to make the accustomed offerings to the school of the prophets located at Gilgal, and as a result the students enrolled there had but a scant living. As a result of this, there was much discouragement and not a little murmuring, and it seemed inevitable that the school must close. But in the darkest hour of the experience the prophet Elisha had come and had cheered and encouraged them to hold on yet a little longer, declaring that if the school should close it would be a reproach upon the land, and the religious influence which the school exerted would be destroyed.

"The land is apostate enough already without our leading it still further into forgetfulness of God. Yea, is not the present distress of the land due to the wandering of the people from God? And what will follow if even the religious teachers and leaders are scattered? Rather, let us wait patiently until the Lord provide deliverance."

Thus they had been encouraged to wait patiently, and Elisha had remained with them, sharing their scanty fare and setting them an example of sublime faith and patience. And so the days had passed. But the situation had grown darker and darker. To be sure the land was beginning to bring forth its fruits, but harvest day was yet far ahead, and the supplies in the school were practically exhausted.

"Yes," disconsolately murmured one of the students to a fellow member one day after the last bit of flour in the barrel had been used, "we have no more here to eat, and who is there to provide for our needs? Can it be supposed that the people who are likewise suffering should bring to us what they will need for themselves?"

"But the first fruits belong to the Lord and to those who minister in the Lord's service," was the response.

"True," exclaimed the first speaker, "but what seem the people to care for the claims of God upon them?"

"And for that very reason let us not by our conduct make it appear that neither do we fear God."

"But our last meal is gone, and we shall starve even while we wait."

Thus was there murmuring and discouragement throughout the school, and it seemed as they went supperless to bed that night that there remained nothing for them to do but abandon the school and shift for themselves. Even the prophet was perplexed and seemed at the end of his resources, for as he left the students after the evening worship, he said:

"Except the Lord spread his table for us we shall eat no more here in the school of the prophets at Gilgal."

And the students as they separated for the night were uncertain whether the words of the prophet betokened discouragement and doubt, or hope of what God would do. Some whose faith was strongest held the latter view, and waited eagerly for the morning, but when no breakfast was followed by an equal lack of food for dinner, even these began to question and doubt. Since the night before when the prophet had declared that except the Lord spread the table for them they would not eat, he had remained in seclusion in his apartment, and it was whispered about that he was giving himself to prayer.

Thus matters stood when along in the afternoon a dust-covered traveler was seen slowly approaching leading an ass upon whose back even in the distance could be discerned the sheaves of wheat.

"Some one is bringing of his first fruits," joyfully shouted one, and they all took up the cry, so that Elisha, who was still tarrying within, came forth to see what the commotion was all about.

"See yon traveler," they cried; "he comes bringing an offering."

Eagerly and breathlessly they waited, but as he approached nearer and at last turned up the lane which led to the school, they saw how paltry was the burden of the ass, being little but the loose grain in sheaves, and their countenances fell and they began to question in their hearts how they should all be fed from such a meager supply.

"Twenty small, round, thin cakes of barley bread, and the unthreshed grain in the sheaves," muttered one of the students, standing near when the ass was unladen and the offering had been laid at the feet of the prophet, and he turned away in a disgusted manner, as did the rest of the students.

"Enough for the prophet, but where-withal shall the hundred students gathered here be fed?" they said one to another.

No one stood near the prophet now save his faithful servant and the man who had brought his offering. And so busy were the students with their low muttered complaints as they talked together and slowly edged farther and farther away from the prophet that they did not see him as he placed his hand upon the head of the man whose offering he had received, nor hear as he blessed him in the name of his God. But a surprised exclamation from Elisha's servant arrested their attention, and the group of discouraged and hungry students turned to see the servant pointed to the barley loaves and heard him ask in astonishment:

"What? Should I set this before an hundred men?"

"Yea," they heard Elisha say, with calm assurance, "give the people that they may eat."

Twenty barley loaves, scarcely enough for ten men, to be distributed to a hundred? What could it mean?

"Nay, my master," now spoke up the man who had brought the gift, "these are for thee, and are scarce enough to supply thy present need. Waste them not by scattering them among so many, for there shall be scarcely a crumb for each man."

"Give the people that they may eat," was the only response of the prophet, addressing himself again to his servant, "for thus saith the Lord, 'They shall eat, and leave thereof.'"

"They shall eat and leave thereof," repeated the group of students, incredulously, as they watched the servant obediently take the 20 loaves in his hands and pass through their midst, giving to each man as much as he desired.

They ate as only hungry men can eat, and when one man's supply was gone, he found the servant of the prophet ready to serve them with more. So they all did eat and were satisfied, and behold when the fragments were gathered they had more than at the beginning. Then did they recall the words of the prophet spoken the night before, and said one to the other:

"Surely we have feasted at the Lord's table and have left thereof."

For Connecting Tracks and Paving.

Wood blocks laid alongside rails are preferred on asphalt-paved streets in Frankfort, Germany, to any other system of connecting the street tracks and the paving. The blocks are laid over the whole space between the rails and for some distance outside the rails.

Superstition Attached to Fish.

The haddock has a superstition attached to it. On each side of the shoulders, near the gills, it has a dark spot, fabled to be the impression made by the finger and thumb of St. Peter when he took it up and found the penny in its mouth to pay tribute to Caesar with.

Round About the State

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

IGNORANCE OF THE LAW

Upon Part of Mountain Bigamist Secures Clemency—Willson's Pardon.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson pardoned Grover C. Allen, of Mt. Vernon, Rockcastle county, convicted of bigamy and sentenced to the penitentiary for three years, because Allen, being an uneducated boy, thought he had secured a divorce from his first wife when he married the second time. Gov. Willson says young Allen is legally but not morally wrong, and while he deserved punishment for acting on verbal information, he does not think he should serve a term in the penitentiary for committing so grave a mistake.

The governor also pardoned Chas. Zuhalke, of Paducah, sentenced for eight years for robbery.

Walter Goodwin, of Lyon county, a messenger for the troops, arrested in that county recently for carrying a revolver and sentenced to ten days in jail, was pardoned. The governor intimates that on account of his peculiar vocation as messenger for the troops it was necessary for him to carry a revolver.

AFFECTS OTHER LINES.

Warrants At Cadiz For White Men, Charging Banding Against Negroes.

Cadiz, Ky.—Walter Goodwin, employed at the iron works at Center Furnace, in the western part of this county, came before County Judge Bingham and swore out warrants against 12 men of the same place, charging them with banding and confederating together for the purpose of intimidating. For some time strong feeling has existed among the white laborers of this furnace against the negro employes. Goodwin says these men had organized to run the negroes away from the furnace. Goodwin further stated that this trouble had nothing to do with the tobacco war now existing throughout this section, as not more than one or two of the men accused are members of the tobacco association. A message stated that Gen. Williams and 16 soldiers, who left Murray, were headed for Center Furnace.

Daviess County Bank Assigns.

Owensboro, Ky.—By reason of poor collections and lack of sufficient cash to carry on its business the Daviess County Bank and Trust Co. filed a deed of general assignment in the Daviess county court, naming Henry Cline as assignee. S. T. Anderson, president of the bank, declined to make a statement concerning the assignment. The bank has been declining deposits and suspended cash payments several days ago. It has a capital of $50,000 and deposits of over $600,000.

Carpenters Strike.

Paducah, Ky.—Owing to a disagreement with contractors union carpenters struck here. The contractors demanded that the carpenters take no contracts. They refused to do so and the contractors declined to sign the wage agreement. The carpenters were out last year for four months, finally winning. The union has 150 members.

Guards To Get Pay.

Frankfort, Ky.—The members of the Kentucky State Guards, who were on duty here during the three months that followed the assassination of Gov. Wm. Goebel, will soon get their pay. As soon as Gen. Johnston can certify the pay rolls $12,000 will be distributed.

Family Poisoned.

Nicholasville, Ky.—The family of T. R. Davis, near here, was poisoned by eating cakes in which Mrs. Davis had mixed arsenic, through mistake. The poison had been purchased as medicine for a horse, but in some unknown way become mixed with baking powder.

Winchester, Ky.—The case of L. B. Cockrell, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Celia Banks, against the C. & O. railroad, asking for $20,000 damages for her death, was finished in the circuit court. The jury brought in a verdict for $5,000.

Death Verdict For Murderer.

Reward Offered For Prisoner.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson has offered a reward of one hundred dollars for Hiram Brandenburgh, who escaped from the jail at Booneville, Owsley county, while waiting to be transferred to the penitentiary to serve 18 years for manslaughter.

Fined for Libel.

Frankfort, Ky.—Alvin H. Seekamp, of Booneville, who was indicted for publishing a libelous statement in the Criterion April 11 about former Gov. Bockham, pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $1,000 by Judge Stout.

Divorcees Barred.

Louisville, Ky.—After appropriating $118,000 for the work, the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Methodist church adjourned their national convention here. It was ruled that no divorcees may belong to the society.

CHARGES OF FRAUD

Filed in Connection With Mayfield Woolen Mills Litigation.

Louisville, Ky.—Fraud and misuse of stock is charged in the petition of intervening stockholders of the Mayfield woolen mills. R. T. and Ira Davis and Mary Jennings, holding $30,000 worth of stock, declare that A. B. Hulgreth, A. H. Duncan, James Simpson and others bought $382,000 worth of stock in the concern, giving their notes, and that when the mills seemed to be a losing venture they recalled their notes. It is also charged that during the reorganization of the company they each real[illegible] fraudulently.

Chancellor Miller allowed these charges to be filed and told Receiver R. J. Robbins to make his report and show whether the company is ready to dissolve its receivership. This had been prayed for by the majority stockholders, whereupon the charges were filed and a permanent receivership demanded.

DROPPED HIS GUN

As He Reached For a Marriage License—Magistrate Fined Him.

Louisville, Ky.—Magistrate Frank Hoffman is not yet out of the toils. The grand jury returned three indictments charging him with withholding money from the state. This is the second time that the state has tried to convict Hoffman on the charge.

In one of the cases it relates that Hoffman fined Jim Kelly $20 for carrying a concealed deadly weapon as he was about to marry Kelly. The unfortunate bridegroom reached for his license and a gun dropped to the floor, whereupon the magistrate fined him $20, none of which the state claims to have received.

Will Represent Kentucky.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson announced the appointment of three men to represent Kentucky at the conference of governors of the various states to be held at Washington in May. Those who will represent Kentucky are John B. Atkinson, of Earlington; Col. Andrew Cowan, of Louisville, and J. W. Porter, of Lexington.

Death At Wedding.

Louisville, Ky.—As the strains of the Wedding March were ringing out for Edward Dressel and Miss Emma Klemm, Jacob Dressel, 71, father of the groom, died at his home here. He had been ill, but when the pair went to Christ Evangelical church to be married he sank rapidly and died within a few minutes.

Without Phones.

Harrodsburg, Ky.—After a wrangle lasting over a year between the city council and the East Tennessee Telephone Co., the exchange in this city was closed, leaving the town and county without communication. The council met and ordered the company to remove its poles and wires from the streets.

Physician Warned.

Lancaster, Ky.—The night riders have made no actual raids in this locality, but one physician, who had planned to cultivate tobacco on a part of his farm, six miles from town, received a letter telling him he had better not grow the weed unless he would like to have a call from these midnight visitors.

Soldier Preacher Dead.

Louisville, Ky.—Rev. Walter Scott Campbell, 66, a prominent minister of the Christian church and a union veteran of the civil war, died here. He was a native of Harrison, O., and a son of the late Rev. Geo. Campbell, a pioneer Christian minister of Indiana and Ohio.

Quite Considerate.

Paducah, Ky.—"It is better that we destroy your plant beds than wait to destroy your tobacco," was the word "night riders" left after scraping the beds of A. Kemper and John Conn, well-known farmers of Livingston county.

Indictment Quashed.

Lexington, Ky.—Because of defective wording, the indictment brought against Enoch R. Megrue was quashed and the grand jury returned two others, one charging grand larceny and the other unlawful conversion of property belonging to John E. Madden.

Killed By Frost.

Lexington, Ky.—Reports from the several counties in the Blue Grass region are to the effect that grapes, strawberries and garden truck suffered much from the heavy frost. Orchard fruits are safe.

CHANGES IN THE SAHARA.

Slow-Moving Caravans Superseded by Motor Car.

With the limitless desert we associate the caravan. Its mention brings before our mental vision the image of the long line of humped animals silhouetted in the clear atmosphere and swinging forward with rhythmic, if ungraceful motion. We think of these common carriers as in Abraham's time. In western lands the change from burros and the mule pack-trains seems natural enough; we should expect that the puffing locomotive of the steam railway would follow the trail over the mountains, through gorges and canyons, across valleys, and finally obliterate it. A score of such changing pictures rise before our eyes, and in reading of transportation improvements, the shortening routes, we recall how literally the pioneer railroad builders followed the trails. In these days we seldom see a pack-train without wondering how long it will be till the railway replaces it.

Yet how rarely the sight of the caravan causes the same reflection. For ages the camels have wound across the billowy seas of sandy plains; what is there to suggest that they will not continue to carry the commerce of arid regions for ages still to come?

First, then, the motor car is to be reckoned with in the transformation. It is used by British engineers and military officers in the Soudan. Various Egyptian desert roads are available for it. On the edges of the Sahara long automobile trips are not infrequent. Some use will develop for passengers, some for mail and probably also for light freight. But it will not supplant the camel caravans or anticipate the railway lines. Its functions have not reached that point. We feel nothing incongruous in the sight of a big red motor car, a roadster, carrying its load of engineers across the vast stretches of Egypt and the Soudan or the edges of the Sahara, for we associate this vehicle with the personality of its occupants. But the locomotive and the chain of cars are associated with the landscape of the region traversed and the leisurely camels seem much more a part of the regions of drifting sands than do the trailing column of smoke, the fire-spitting engine, and the loosely jointed train.—Scribner's.

Fewer Deaths from Consumption.

Dr. Fraenkel, of Berlin, in a paper recently read before the Society of Medicine of that city, gave striking figures concerning the war waged by medicine against consumption. In 1881 the death rate from this dire disease was 32.5 in every 10,000, and the latest return shows that it has been reduced to 17.25. This satisfactory state of things Dr. Fraenkel attributes partly to the discoveries of Koch, and he divides the honors equally between prophylactic methods and the system of isolation now widely practiced in Germany.

Cement Dwellings for Laborers.

According to the Cement Age, a South American agent who has been in this country in the interests of the municipal governments of San Paulo and Rio Janeiro, states that it is the intention of these municipalities to build cement houses in large numbers for the accommodation of the laboring element in the population, who in the past have been badly housed at exorbitant rentals. Rio Janeiro alone will build 5,000 houses at a cost of approximately $9,000,000.

Propose Study of Tea.

The Chinese board of agriculture is considering the advisability of establishing a department for the study and encouragement of tea cultivation, with branches in the provinces where tea is now produced.

New York City Banks.

Twenty years ago the fact was made much of that New York city boasted 100 banks and trust companies. Today, however, the greater city has no fewer than 212 institutions of this character.

BOONE CO. RECORDER.
W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

Morgan Academy.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

My Dear Sir:—The program of the Morgan Academy School Exhibition of 1841, presented to you by Mrs. J. C. Revill, has awakened long dormant memories, and put me in a reminiscent mood.

I wonder how many of the lads and lassies who attended there 60 years ago are still living and bear it in kindly remembrance. Very few I fear.

My own impression had always been that my school experiences began at Morgan Academy under Sackett Mead about 1843 or '44, but the record you furnish seems to make it earlier, i. e. 1841. I was certainly a very little boy at that time and must have gone under and escort and care of my elder brother. Mr. Meade must however, have been the teacher, as I have no recollection of any predecessor of his.

The names on the program bring up childhood memories. While my own elocutionary effort as there recorded, or to use the vernacular, the piece I spoke, "Sonica Lake" I think I could with commendable accuracy repeat to this day. So I must be the individual referred to in the program.

As to the institution itself, some where during the first quarter of the last century, a gentleman whose name was Allen Morgan, located in Burlington, and subsequently died there, leaving a small estate, consisting, I think, of some land in the mountains of Kentucky, and possibly a small personal property which at his death he bequeathed to trustees as an endowment for an educational institution at Burlington. A board of trustees took charge of the matter and a two room brick building was erected about a quarter of a mile north of the town and a school opened and named after its founder "Morgan Academy."

Morgan Campbell, the well remembered Burlington tailor, use to jestingly denounce the institution as having come between him and his inheritance, he having been named after Allen Morgan, and by right should have been his heir.

My own memory of the Academy goes back to 1843 or '44, soon after Sacket Mead took charge. Those were certainly the halcyon days in educational matters in Boone. A great many promising young men from the immediate vicinity, as well as from a distance, attended the school. I recall the four stalwart sons of Chiles Coleman—Walter, John, James and Robert, fine speci mens of physical and mental manhood for whom length of years might be presaged, all of whom passed away in early manhood. Mr. Craven's sons seem still living. Lewis Webb's, Ezekiel Utz's, the Duncans, the Gaines' and Graves' from a little further out, and many others, while from Lawrenceburg were the three Tousey boys and Pink Porter; from North Bend, two or three of the Baisleys and as many of the Moors; from East Bend, Geo. Brazier, Robt. Platt and Wm. Lodge; from Walton, John Murphy and Col. Jim Sims' three boys; Jim Corbin from Union, and Will Grandin, from Cincinnati, a splendid school of 75 or 80 youths and young men.

Mr. Mead was a good teacher, scholarly enough to meet all the requirements of the position, enforcing order, while not a strict disciplinarian. He married Miss Anna Collins, daughter of Dr. Collins, just east of Burlington, and left two sons, William and Omer. William recently retired from the Admiralty in the U. S. Navy, after reaching the age limit of 62 years. Omer is engaged in commercial pursuits in the South.

Mr. Mead died some 15 years since at his residence in San Raphiel flats, on 4th street, Cincinnati. John L. Sandford, Jno. Matson and I, his pupils, were his pallbearers.

I will not in this brief sketch undertake to follow in detail the history of the academy. After many years teaching Mr. Mead returned to Covington, and the gifted and lamented Periander C. Scott, took charge and was, I think, at the head of the school when he met his death in the explosion of the steamer Red Stone at Carrollton, Ky., in 1853. He had charge of the Baptist church in Burlington and great hopes were felt as to his future. It was while he was in charge of the academy that I took my final leave.

Mr. James Coleman and others subsequently had charge, but the endowment fund never amounted to much and the school depended on tultion fees, and gradually, I presume, died of inanition.

JOSEPH CHAMBERS.

Miss Jesse Lowe Glenn.

Miss Jesse Lowe Glenn died April 30th of bronchial pneumonia at the home of her niece, Mrs. Franklin B. Wiley, in Wayne, Pennsylvania. She was ill about ten days, and up to the night before she died seemed to be making progress toward recovery, but the strain of the disease on her heart at her advanced age proved too great. She was born in Edinburg, Scotland, on August 14th, 1820. Being a member of the Presbyterian church services were held by Rev. W. A. Patton, pastor of Wayne Presbyterian church, at the house on the 2d inst, after which the remains were brought to Burlington, where they were interred by the side of her brother, the late John Glenn. The departed was a resident of Burlington for many years previous to 1890, she and her brother John keeping house. Eight years after his death, which occurred June 15, 1882, she went East to make her home among her kindred. Miss Jessie Glenn was a quiet, christian lady, and all with whom she was acquainted, and especially by the people of Burlington to whom she had endeared herself. It was her request that she be brought back to Burlington for interment, which took place at 4 p. m. last Sunday in the cemetery just north of Burlington. The body was accompanied to its last resting place by several of the near relatives. A short service at the grave preceded he interment.

Mrs. W. O. Rouse and Miss Mattie Trusdale arrived home, last Saturday from St. Petersburg, Florida, where they spent the winter. This is not very congenial weather for those who spent the winter in the sunny south.

Mrs. Edgar Berkshire left for Ft. Thomas, Campbell county, early last Monday morning, in response to a telephone message announcing the serious illness of her youngest brother Leslie Fenton. He died that day, the fatal disease being consumption.

Chas. Clore, one of the enteprising citizens of Hebron, has spent several days in Burlington during the week just past, papering numerous apartments in the large brick residence belonging to him and his brother, John, and occupied by deputy sheriff B. B. Hume and family.

In Memory of Bessie M. Ogden.

The beloved daughter of Martha and Eugene Ogden, Bessie M. Ogden, who died January 29th 1908.

And have you gone from us darling? Will we never more look into those laughing eyes or listen to your sweet voice again? Yes, it is too real—the casket and the shroud; the poor fevered brow and parched lips are now cold in death. The waxen hands are now folded on the pulseless breast, and the warm, generous heart is now stilled forever. You are gone, darling, Bessie, to make one more angel in heaven, and we thought God would not take you, but spare you to those who loved you so much. But all our love and kindness could not keep you, for the dark angel of death folded his wings over your couch, and, stilled the heart forever, the heart that beat so warm and true. But we will think of you often, darling; think of you as a bright angel in heaven—keeping watch over the ones you loved best on earth. Sleep, darling Bessie, sleep in your narrow bed where we laid you to rest in our own beautiful church-yard at Bullittsburg.

A COUSIN.

If the weather is favorable next Saturday night the Odd Fellows lodge at Big Bone will have a record breaking meeting. The Harmony brothers are lavish entertainers, and once a partaker of their hospitality you never forget the occasion. They have been laying awake o' nights for a month studying plans for making next Saturday night's meeting the greatest in the history of the lodge, and when they undertake a thing of that kind they never let up until it is accomplished.

Mark Gorden and son and Henry Hoffman, of Petersburg, were digging a sewer, one day last week, and when at a considerable depth they were caught by a cave-in that covered Hoffman entirely, young Gordon to his neck and his father to his waist. Quck work of a rescuing party saved the men's lives.

Don't be in too big a hurry to bail out your garden in order to hasten the drying process. Rain is predicted for today already.

In a recent letter to his brother Sam, Henry Adams, who holds a position as stenographer and [illegible] writer at Wilmington, North Carolina, writes:

"At your request, I shall endeavor to give a short account of the products near Wilmington, North Carolina.

"Of course, cotton is the most important crop. According to the report posted at the Chamber of Commerce, from September 1st 1907 to April 1st, 1908, there were 467,995 bales of cotton left this port, an increase of 161,353 bales over last year's business. The annual report of the harbor master for the fiscal year ended March 31st, shows that during the twelve months from March to March there were arrivals of 125 American steamers, of 156,765 tons, and quite a number of barges, brigs, and schooners. The foreign shipping consisted of 88 steamers, of 138,675 tons, and five schooners.

"Naval stores are also important in Wilmington's commerce. Among these, "tar, pitch and turpentine" being foremost. The naval stores trade is mostly domestic. During the year ended March 31st, there were 11,843 casks of spirits; tar, 31,585 barrels; crude turpentine, 14,080 barrels, and rosin, 86,338 barrels, shipped from Wilmington. With the exception of rosin, all shipments were domestic. Of the receipts of rosin, 35,37S barrels were shipped domestic and 50,965 barrels went to foreign ports.

"There are only a few vegetables shipped from this part of the State, mostly beans and lettuce. However, the strawberry season is now coming on, then later cantaloupes, watermelons, etcetera, will be ready for the Northern markets.

"The real wealth of this new Brunswick county is in her cotton and naval stores, and the vegetables bring up only a small portion of it.

"This is the Land of the Long Leaf Pine;

Through the efforts of County Judge P. E. Cason, and Judge John M. Lassing, the State Board of Equalization has decided to accept Boone county's assessment as returned by Assessor B. L. Cleek and his deputies, and no committee will be sent to appear before the board at Frankfort. Judge Cason received notice of the board's final decision in the matter, last Friday. The sheriff is now in a condition to collect your taxes if you desire to pay them. The proposed raise would have increased the aggregate amount of taxes in the county just $1,790.

Editor of the Recorder:

In this Graded Common School District, some people have the erroneous idea that under the provisions of the new school laws they will be compelled to pay the 20 cents on the $100 as provided in the new law, additional to the 25 cents on the $100 as voted by the people.

Sec. 2. County School District Law is as follows: "Provided, That any graded common school district that may exist in any educational division or that may hereafter be established according to law, whether operating under special charter or established by popular vote, as provided for in the laws relating to the graded common schools, and school districts now operating within municipal districts established and corporated under special charter and supplementing the State school fund by a local tax of not less than 20 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation of property, shall retain their present boundaries and be exempt from the provisions of this act. The provisions of this act shall not apply to any graded school district created by special act and having a school fund other than provided by general law."

As the backwater goes off the bottoms those who enjoy spearing buffalo fish are having the time of their life. These fish come up at this time of the year to feed on the fresh blue grass and vegetation that the water overflows. When the water recedes they are so voracious that they remain in the back-water until it is too late to escape into the river. They are being speared in the old bed of the Miami now by the—well, perhaps not the wagon load, but numerously.—Lawrenceburg Press.

The Burlington horse market was unusually lively, last week, and several of the noble animals changed owners during that period. As an example John Hogan and B. B. Hume had three trades one day before dinner, and neither was put "a foot" as a result.

It has been several years since the property owners of Boone county have been given a raise by the State Board of Equalization, be it said to the credit of her efficient assessors. Other counties have their troubles every year and never escape without a raise.

WHAT SHALL BE DONE WITH THE HIGHWAYS?

BY HOWARD H. GROSS, SPECIAL AGENT, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

A SOUTH DAKOTA ROAD

IMPROVED ROAD NEAR ARKANSAS CITY, KAN.

A SUPERIOR CONSTRUCTION OF ROADWAYS & BRIDGES IN NEW ZEALAND.

A BAD ROAD IN MICHIGAN

A PROSPEROUS NEW ZEALAND CITY, MADE BY GOOD ROADS

JUST now there is no more important question before the American public than the general improvement of the highways to the standard of twentieth century requirements. The volume of traffic over the public highways is equal to or exceeds that of all the railways. The food products of the world pass over these [illegible] reach the market. Bad [illegible] interfere with the regular distribution of these products, resulting in an erratic and inconstant supply for a fixed and regular demand.

Bad roads have necessitated the practice of rushing the crops to market all in a heap; taking but two or three months instead of spreading this delivery over six to ten months. Scientifically, farm products should be moved from producer to consumer as they are needed for consumption, but the farmer will find the roads in the winter and spring bad and at times practically impassable, and for this very reason he hurries his grain to market as soon as harvested.

This causes congestion on the railroads and works havoc in business conditions. The "moving of the crops" requires an enormous amount of money, and a general upheaval in financial centers every fall is the result of this sudden drain.

The hurried disposition of the year's crop has necessitated the building of large storage houses in the grain centers to care for it. In Chicago the storage charge is nine cents per bushel per year; the carrying capacity of the elevators of that city alone is about 85,000,000 bushels, representing a storage charge of over $7,000,000 per year. The passing of the food supply into the control of the grain kings means a loss to the farmer and an additional and unnecessary cost to the consumer.

The general improvement of the highways of the country is vastly more important to the people as a whole than the building of the Panama canal, the improvement of the inland waterways, or the irrigation of the semi-arid lands of the west.

Those who have traveled know that the roads throughout Europe are good; the same is true of Australia and New Zealand, countries newer than our own, less populous, and with nothing like our aggregate wealth. The fact that the rest of the world has good roads while we have bad ones is significant; it shows that the plan we have been pursuing has not been successful. In three hundred years less than eight per cent of the highways of our country have been permanently improved and at the rate we are going it would require nearly four thousand years to complete the job. So as roadbuilders the people of the United States have been a failure.

This is all the more surprising when we consider that they are conspicuously successful in every other line of human endeavor. Millions upon millions of dollars have been wasted in every state in the union upon the public roads by ill-timed or misdirected effort and with really very little to show for the expenditure. It is only within the last ten or fifteen years that any real progress has been made along the line of permanently improving the conditions.

The trouble is we have been endeavoring to untangle the snarl by pulling the wrong string. Without any reason for doing so, the farmers of the country, from Maine to California, from the very first assumed that the country roads belonged to them and it was their business to improve them, and this misconception held sway for nearly 300 years.

A few years ago a man in New Jersey made a discovery. It was that the highways are public property, as much so as the state house. This raised the question: "Why, if the highways are public property, should not the public take care of its own; why should not the state and all property therein contribute to building the roads?" Everybody is interested in them, everybody is affected through the markets by the road conditions; they are benefited by good roads and injured by bad ones. The new thought spread throughout the state and finally New Jersey led the way to better conditions by passing a law by which the state should contribute one-third the money required to improve the roads. Other states followed, increasing the proportion to one-half and in one case, Massachusetts, to three-fourths.

In many cases of the New England states farm property is only a very small portion of the total taxable property, in some cases not ten per cent., and when the cost of road improvement was distributed over all property of the state, the burden was hardly felt, and yet immense sums were raised for road purposes. Best of all, the roads were built under proper supervision, instead of leaving it to the inexperienced hands of the local path master.

Ten years ago New York state began in a small way to aid and appropriated $50,000 to start the work. The plan grew in favor so rapidly that within five years the state by an overwhelming vote passed a constitutional amendment providing for an issue of $50,000,000 in bonds to help build the highways. What a record! In five years from fifty thousand to fifty millions! The tax necessary to pay the interest on this enormous sum and then finally pay off the bonds will hardly be felt by the property owners of the Empire state owing to their immense list of taxable property.

Ohio, after 40 years of building roads by the old plan of local taxation and bond issues, in which the farmer had to pay practically the whole bill, has passed a state aid law which will enable it to build three miles of improved roads where it has been building one, without any increase whatever in taxation upon farm property.

Virginia is the first southern state to join the state aid column for good roads. Kentucky is alive to the situation and is taking steps to change its constitution in order to be in a position to spread the road tax over all the property in the state.

In certain parts of the country, notably in the Mississippi valley, there is an entire misconception as to what the state aid plan of road building means. Some imagine the state would take control of the highways, build expensive roads and tax the people to pay for them; others that it is a scheme to force road building against the wishes of the farmers. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The state does not in any manner, under a state aid law, interfere with the absolute local control of the highways. The voters of every township decide whether any roads shall be improved, what roads, to what extent, when it shall be done, if at all. The state has absolutely no voice in the matter. If, however, the township, by a majority vote, decides to build a road under the state aid plan, it makes application to the state for that purpose; the state engineer thereupon visits the locality, goes over the road proposed to be improved with the local authorities, and decides upon the character of the improvement best suited to the conditions. He then prepares plans and specifications and when these are approved by the highway commissioners or other properly constituted local authorities, the contract is let to the lowest responsible bidder and the work is then done under the supervision of the state engineer. This insures proper construction and that means durability and low cost to maintain the road afterward.

Under a state aid law not a rod of road could be built unless the residents of a township decided to do so. Not a dollar of state money could be expended unless the farmers who live in the rural township voted for improvements.

If it should be alleged that state aid was a plan to compel railroads, corporations, merchants and manufacturers to help build the roads, it would not be far from the truth. Under state aid the farmers control the situation; if they decide to improve the roads the other people are obliged to help pay the bill.

In order to build roads cheaply they should be built extensively. It costs a great deal more proportionately to build a half mile of road than it does to build ten half miles. No contractor cares for a small job but for a large one competition is keen. It takes just as much time and bother to get ready to build half a mile of road as it does to build ten miles. By building in the larger quantities from 20 to 25 per cent. in cost of construction can be saved.

As roads properly built will last for a great many years they should be built as school houses and court houses are built, viz: by a bond issue; thus a township under state aid could build 10, 15 or 20 miles of roads in one year, have the roads to use, and spread the payment of the same over say 10 or 20 years. If this is done and the state aid plan prevails, there will be very little, if any, increase in taxation.

Few people have any idea to what extent bad roads interfere with travel and how they affect the business of the merchant in the country town. The Illinois highway commission has gathered some very valuable data upon the effect of road and weather conditions upon highway traffic. Observations were made at 72 well distributed points in the state and an actual count was made by the vehicles passing upon different days throughout each month of the year, covering all kinds of weather and road conditions.

The report shows that traffic over stone or gravel roads was fairly uniform throughout the year, while upon the earth roads it was subject to the widest variations. The following figures are significant and tell more forcibly how great is the burden of bad roads than anything else can possibly do.

The Clear Lake earth road leading into Springfield, Illinois, showed an average traffic for four days in March, 1906 of 65½ vehicles per day. Over the same road in June and July the average was 389 vehicles' On the same days in Peoria, 60 miles away, under the same weather conditions but over a hard road, the [illegible] March was [illegible], and the average for June and July 153.

Observations at Champaign over an earth road showed the average for January, February and March to be 65, as against 200 for September and October. The count at Decatur over a gravel road was March and April, 240; July and August, 278. Over an earth road leading into Sullivan, the count for January, February and March was 54; August and September, 316.

While delivering an address upon good roads, the writer was once interrupted and asked if he would favor taxing the widow's cottage to help build the roads. He answered that he certainly would, as the annual tax would probably not exceed 10 or 15 cents, and he gave the following illustration of how bad roads burden the people: A woman goes into a grocery store for a dozen eggs and a pound of butter. When told the prices, she protests. The grocer in defense, says: "Well, you see, madam, the roads are so bad now, very few farmers are coming to town, so butter and eggs are scarce." She pays three cents more for the eggs and four cents more for the butter, and this seven cents represents her bad road tax paid that evening. This is repeated from time to time throughout the year, not only in her case but in hundreds of others in that town and in thousands of towns throughout the length and breadth of the land. There is no doubt that the woman in question would benefit through good roads by at least ten times the amount of the tax on her cottage.

It would be interesting to take a concrete example of state aid, apply it to a typical farm in one of the central western states and see exactly what state aid means so far as taxes upon that farm are concerned. For the purpose of illustration, let us take an average farm of 160 acres in the corn belt of Illinois, and see what the effect upon the taxes on that farm would be if the state should undertake a very vigorous campaign of road building under state aid, one that contemplates an expenditure of the enormous sum of $50,000,000 in ten years—enough money to improve all the main highways of the state, connect every community with the market town and county seat and give a complete network of good roads from Galena to Cairo; the plan being that the state should pay one-half the expense and the townships or road districts the other

If $50,000,000 were expended in ten years, the state would be required to raise $25,000,000 of it. There is in the state property to the total assessed valuation of $1,250,000,000. To raise $2,500,000 a year, or $25,000,000 in ten years, would require a two mill tax upon this property; so a two-mill tax applied to all the property of the state of Illinois at the present assessed valuation (and not taking into account the possible increase in value thereof) would produce the sum required.

The records show that the taxing value of an average 160 acre farm in the corn belt of Illinois is a little less than $2,000, the actual value being approximately $10,000. A two-mill state tax on this farm assessed on the value of $2,000 would be exactly $4 a year and no more, and in ten years the state tax would be $40, which would be the farm's proportion of the $25,000,000 total. Where this farm would pay $40, one single corporation in the city of Chicago would have to pay $570,000, another $190,000, and the railways of the state over two millions of dollars. Thus we see by a state levy of two mills for ten years, one-half of the $50,000,000 is provided for. The other half must be raised by local taxation or by a bond issue.

Let us assume that the township in which the farm in question is located votes bonds to the full constitutional limit, that is, goes into debt just as far as it can go and pays the highest interest that the law permits it to pay. The limit of the bond issue is five per cent. of the assessed valuation, so the amount of bonds resting upon the farm would be five per cent. of $2,000, or exactly $100, payable one-tenth each year, with interest at five per cent. The total interest on this bond issue, so far as this farm is concerned, for the ten years would be $27.50.

Thus, if we add the bonds	$100.00
Interest on bonds	27.50
And the state tax of	40.00

We have a total tax on the farm of.... $167.50 which is exactly the amount of the tax that would be levied and collected upon this farm for both state aid and to pay off the road bonds and interest. This amount is about 10½ cents per acre per year and the total charge against the farm for the whole ten years would be $1.05 per acre. This amount of money paid by the farm under the state aid plan would enable the state to expend $50,000,000 upon its highways, and the expenditure of that sum would add to the value of farm property at least five and probably ten times as much as the respective farms would be taxed in order to pay the bill.

SLEEPING GUESTS CAUGHT BY FLAMES

THAT DEVOURED FT. WAYNE HOTEL—MANY DRIVEN BACK TO THEIR ROOMS BY SMOKE.

TEN ARE KILLED AND SEVERAL INJURED

Ohio Man Leaps From Fourth Floor to Death—"Will No One Save Me?" He Screamed, Before Deciding on the Fatal Jump.

Ft. Wayne, Ind., May 4.—Ten known dead, many missing and 13 seriously injured is the result of a fire that destroyed the new Aveline hotel, Ft. Wayne's principal hotel, at an early hour [illegible].

Chief of Police Anckenbruck said Sunday afternoon he believed 20 bodies were still in the ruins.

The entire interior of the building is a smoldering heap of ruins and how many dead are concealed by the debris can only be conjectured. The hotel register was consumed by the fire and there are no accurate means of determining who is missing.

The known dead: R. S. Johnson, Pana, Ill.; M. Hirsch, New York (there is also an M. Hirsch among the ones saved); J. B. Miller, Sheboygan, Wis.; J. E. Ellis, Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Chicago; W. A. Pitcher, Ft. Wayne, salesman for S. F. Bowser & Co., Ft. Wayne; J. W. Devincy, salesman for Crawford & Lehman, Philadelphia; three unidentified men; one unidentified woman.

Known missing: Frank Baxter, attorney, Auburn, Ind.; companion of Frank Baxter, of Auburn, Ind.; E. B. Alty, Wabash, Ind.; Charles Benjamin, salesman for Detroit Neckwear Co., Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Sarah Hathaway, Misbawaka, Ind.; unknown woman, companion of Mrs. Sarah Hathaway.

Some of the bodies taken out are mangled and charred beyond recognition and the work of identification is in these cases a task almost baffling.

The fire was discovered at 3:30 Sunday morning in the elevator shaft by Night Clerk Ralph Hopkins.

He rushed to the upper floors alarming the guests until the flames, which had spread with appalling rapidity, drove him back. His efforts, however, saved many lives.

The hotel was erected half a century ago, and the woodwork was dry as tinder. It burned like matchwood and within a few minutes from the time the fire was discovered the whole interior of the hotel was a mass of flames.

The fire department rescued many by means of ladders, but some, frenzied by the onward rush of the flames, leaped from high windows to the pavement.

Some did not wait for the efforts of the firemen and leaped to the street. Several were seriously injured in this manner.

There were many thrilling escapes. Claude H. Varnell, of the Ft. Wayne baseball team; his sister, Mrs. John Hendricks, and John Hendricks, of Chicago, manager of the Ft. Wayne team, together with Master Hendricks, aged 5 years barely escaped with their lives. Varnell lost his personal belongings.

When the fire was at its height a man at a third-story window was seen wildly waving his arms.

He shrieked: "My God, men, save me! Will no one save me?"

He then leaped from the window and went swirling to the pavement below. He was picked up desperately hurt.

He was E. M. Matthews, of Columbus, O.

FIVE KILLED.

And Four Injured By a Tenement Fire In Brooklyn.

New York, May 4.—An early morning fire in a four-story brick tenement at No. 17 Humboldt street, a thickly populated district of Brooklyn, caused the death of five persons and the serious injury of four others.

Every member of one family, consisting of a mother and four children, are among the dead. There were many thrilling rescues by police and firemen, and it was due to their brave work that the death list was not larger.

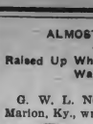
A half dozen or more persons, trapped in the upper stories, were saved by jumping into life nets. The financial loss is estimated at $10,000.

The dead: Mrs. Dora Abrams and Sadie, Carrie and Charles Abrams and Mrs. Jennie Cohen.

The injured are Mrs. May Noble, Mrs. Amelia Hirschorn and Fannie Hirschorn, who sustained severe burns, and Annie Hirschorn, who suffered a broken shoulder from jumping from a window into a life net.

The fire started in the cellar of the building when the people comprising the eight families living the house were asleep.

Jack, the Poisoner.



Philadelphia, Pa., May 4.—The police are hunting for a dangerous criminal, whom they dub "Jack, the Poisoner." To one 5-year-old girl whom he met on the street he gave poisoned cake and the child is dying.

Two Officials Assassinated.

Cairo, Egypt, May 4.—A British subject, Scott Moncrieff, deputy inspector of the Blue Nile province, together with a native official, has been assassinated at the instance of a local chief.

ALMOST A MIRACLE.

Raised Up When Science Said There Was No Hope.

G. W. L. Nesbitt, Depot Street, Marion, Ky., writes: "I was a chronic invalid with kidney troubles, and often wished death might end my awful sufferings. The secretions were thick with sediment, my limbs swollen and my right side so nearly paralyzed I could not raise my hand above my head. The doctor held out no hope of my recovery, and I had given up, but at last started using Doan's Kidney Pills and made a rapid gain. After three months' use I was well and at work again."

SANDY ATE THE "PARRITCH."

But He Had to Play Mean Trick on Himself to Do It.

An old gentleman in a village not far from Glasgow breakfasted every morning on porridge, and, in order to save fuel, cooked a whole week's supply every Saturday. One Friday morning the stuff seemed very cold and very salt, and he felt he must abandon the struggle to eat it. But his stubborn nature forbade any such thought. So he fetched the whisky from the cupboard, poured out a glass and placed it before him on the table.

"Now, Sandy," said he, "if ye eat that parritch ye'll hae that whisky, an' if ye don't ye won't."

He stuck again at the last spoonful, but keeping his eye steadily on the glass of whisky, he made a bold, brave effort, and got it down. Then he slowly and carefully poured back the whisky into the bottle with a broad grin, as he said to himself: "Sandy, my lad, I did ye thot time, ye ould fule!"

Returned Him.

A man returned to his native village after having emigrated to Kansas some 20 years previous. He asked about different villagers he had known in the old days, and finally of the town drunkard of his time.

"Oh, he's dead," was the reply.

"Well, well; dead and buried is he?"

"Nope; they didn't bury him."

"Didn't bury him!" exclaimed the former resident. "Well, then, what did they do with him?"

"Oh, they just poured him back in the jug."

Just a Deduction.

A polite little girl was dining one day with her grandmother. Everything at the table was unusually dainty and unexceptionable, but on this occasion the little girl found a hair in her fish.

"Grandma," she said, sweetly, "what kind of fish is this?"

"Halibut, my dear."

"Oh," replied the child, "I thought perhaps it was mermaid."

Revenge's Furious Appetite.

He who, from a natural sweetness and facility of temper, should despise injuries received, would doubtless do a very great and a very laudable thing; but he who, provoked and nettled to the quick by an offense, should fortify himself with the arms of reason against the furious appetite of revenge, and, after a great conflict, master his own passion, would doubtless do a great deal more.—Montaigne.

FRIENDS HELP.

St. Paul Park Incident.

"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. C. T. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee; she was troubled for years with asthma. She said it was no cross to quit coffee when she found she could have as delicious an article as Postum.

"Another lady who had been troubled with chronic dyspepsia for years, found immediate relief on ceasing coffee and beginning Postum twice a day. She was wholly cured. Still another friend told me that Postum and Coffee was a Godsend to her, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking on Postum.

"So many such cases came to my notice that I concluded coffee was the cause of my trouble and I quit and took up Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

BORAX IN THE DAIRY

A Matter of Profitable Interest to the Farmer and Dairyman

The problem of keeping sweet all the utensils used in connection with milk and cream selling, and butter making, has been a serious one with the farmer.

He has come to realize fully that the slightest taint or hint of staleness left in a can, tin or churn may ruin a whole output; that the taint which is left is in the form of bacteria which grow and multiply in milk or butter, producing disastrous results.

The farmer has learned that hot water won't rinse away the greasy residue in dairy utensils.

He has learned that soap leaves a residue of its own which is, if anything, worse than the milk or cream residue, and it is little wonder that that there has been a constant clamor for a dairy cleanser and dairy [illegible] that will meet modern requirements.

A few of the largest creamery establishments have called experts into consultation on this problem and have with this scientific aid hit upon a product of nature which exactly fills the bill—borax.

Scientists have long known borax as a cleanser, a sweetener and an antiseptic destroyer of bacteria and germ growths. Destroys all that is harmful and promotes and preserves freshness, sweetness and purity, relieving the dairyman and dairy housewife of drudgery and of needless work and worry.

Its cheapness and value should give it first place in the necessities of every dairy.

The cow's udder is kept in a clean, healthy and smooth condition by washing it with borax and water, a tablespoonful of borax to two quarts of water.

This prevents roughness and soreness or cracking teats, which make milking time a dread to the cow and a worry to the milker.

15 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Burning, Painful Sores on Legs—Tortured Day and Night—Tried Many Remedies to No Avail—Cured by Cuticura.

"After an attack of rheumatism, running sores broke out on my husband's legs, from below the knees to the ankles. There are no words to tell all the discomforts and great suffering he had to endure night and day. He used every kind of remedy and three physicians treated him, one after the other, without any good results whatever. One day I ordered some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. He began to use them and in three weeks all the sores were died up. The burning fire stopped, and the pains became bearable. After three months he was quite well. I can prove this testimonial at any time. Mrs. V. V. Albert, Upper Frenchville, Me., July 21, 1907."

Paving the Way.

"George," said the pretty girl, "I know you're awful bashful."

This was portentous, with leap year so new. He blushed assent.

"And you'd have proposed to me except for that?"

This, too, he was bound to acknowledge.

"Well, I would have accepted," she went on, "and so that's settled."

Discussing the matter later she expressed a natural pride that she had not taken any advantage of the season.

Stupid Jeweler.

"Yes, George—that is, Mr. Fickel proposed last night," said the truthful Dora, "and we're engaged now; and I'm the first girl he ever loved, too."

"Indeed!" replied Miss Wise, "I don't notice your ring."

"Oh, he gave me one, but he had to take it back to get it fixed. The stupid jeweler made the inscription read, 'George to Genevieve,' instead of George to Dora.'—Philadelphia Press.

BUYING PAINT BLINDLY.

Many people look upon paint buying as a lottery and so it is, the way they do it. It is not necessarily so, however. Pure White Lead and linseed oil are the essential elements of good paint. Adulterants in white lead can be easily found by the use of a blowpipe. Adulterations in linseed oil can be detected with a fair degree of certainty. See that these two elements are pure and properly put on and the paint will stay put.

National Lead Company, Woodbridge, Building, New York City, will send a blowpipe outfit and instructions for testing both white lead and linseed oil, on request.

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

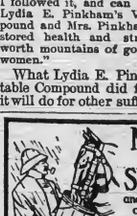
LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.



Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N.C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

MARRIED—George Kaub and Miss Frances Bramlage, April 29th, at the St. Cecelia Catholic church at Independence, in the presence of many friends. After the ceremony the happy young couple returned to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bramlage, at Bank Lick, where a magnificent reception was tendered them, in which a host of friends and invited guests participated, and a most delightful evening was enjoyed by all. The charming bride is the pretty daughter of C. H. Bramlage, a prominent citizen of Banklick, and the manly groom is a son of Joseph Kaub, who recently purchased the McCarty farm on Crusie creek, where the young couple will probably reside, it adjoining the parental home. The best wishes of many friends in this quarter are tendered the happy young couple for a long and prosperous life together.

Tuesday evening of last week thieves broke into the drug store of A. W. Smith, the merchandise establishment of E. P. Northcutt, and the L. & N. Railroad Depot. Entrance was made into the places by breaking through the windows and glass door at Northcutt's. Three suspicious looking characters, hobos of the most pronounced type, were suspected. One evidently cut his hand breaking through the window into the drug store, as blood was found about the place. Smith lost $1 in money, two pocket books and a box of fine candy; Northcutt, a half dozen shirts, two pairs of gloves, a cheap watch, pair of shoes, some underware and $1 50 in money; the railroad depot, $1 32 in money, box of cigars, a hat and a half-gallon jug of whiskey. No clue to the thieves was obtained, though the hat was found on the road near Beaver Lick, evidencing that they bad gone that way. Nexet evening three hobos were found near the railroad depot, and the authorities locked them in the calaboose for safe keeping and to prevent them from committing any depredations.

The new turnpike road between Walton and Verona is an assured fact as sufficient money has been about subscribed together with the $500 a mile subscribed by the county, to guarantee the building of the road. The greatest credit in this enterprise should be given Charles L. Griffith, who worked early and late to secure the necessary amount of subscriptions, and but for his good work it is doubtful if the matter would have reached a successful issue. Another effort is on foot to turnpike the Stephenson Mill road to connect it with the Verona and Mud Lick turnpike, a distance of about 5 miles, and every thing looks favorable for the building. Good roads are a great blessing to any community, and especially to a farming locality, where much depends on good roads to get the produce to market when good prices prevail, which is usually in the winter season, when the roads are in a bad condition. Another road that should be built in a first-class manner is the road between Walton and Beaver Lick. This road is extensively traveled, and connects the two best sections of the county hereabouts, and a little enterprise and public spirit would get the road built without much trouble and expense.

Saturday afternoon a very interesting game of base ball was played at the ball park here between the Walton Stars and the Erlanger Stumps. In the fore part of the game it looked as though the Walton nine would win out, but the visitors got busy and won the game by a score of 7 to 6. In the ninth inning the game was tied and it took eleven innings to decide the victor. The feature of the game was the pitching of Holder, who struck out 16 men in 11 innings. At one stage of the game three of the Stumps had three balls and he gave back three strikes and out, showing he was perfect master of the ball. Following is the summary: Struck out—Holder 16; Carter, 7; Hits—off Holder, 8; off Carter 6; bases on balls—Holder 2; Carter 4; two base hits—Victor and Noell; left on bases—Walton 8; Erlanger 9. Leslie Jones umpire. Attendance 250. Following is the line-up: Walton Stars—Houston, 3b.; Watts, 2b.; Byland, s. s.; Watson, 1st b.; Noel, c.; McGoldrich, r-f; Holder, p.; Dahling, c. f., Stamsifer l. f. Erlanger Stumps—Carter, p., E. Victor, c., J. Lee, 1 b., C. Victor, 2b., D. Carter, 3b., E. Shearer, s. s., H. Stephens, rf., S. Bentler, cf., L. Fricker, lf. Next Saturday, May 9th, the Covington High School, members of the Inter Collegiate League, will play the Walton Stars here. The boys are playing good ball and the attendance should be much larger. Come out everybody next Saturday.

The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion, PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $5 discount on the two seasons—paying only $35 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $20 will be collected.

This Stallion is a Mahoghany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone County as his colts speak for themselves. A ring of this Stallion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

Care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur. Positively no business done on Sunday. Parties breeding must follow up the season.

He is a very handsome horse with a disposition that is perfect. We could take up more space in giving a long description and pedigree of his ancestors, and what they had done, but William Penn will prove for himself that he will transmit to his get the rare qualities that he possesses. Pasture furnished at $2 a month.

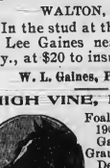
HIGH VINE, No. 2733

PROPERTY OF



High Vine Horse Company,

WALTON, KY.,

In the stud at the farm of W. Lee Gaines near Richwood, Ky., at $20 to insure live foal.

W. L. Gaines, President.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733,

Foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667. Graud sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730. Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2282, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1665. Second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60. Third dam, Maxey by Granger. Fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

A number of prominent citizens of the locality of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine saddle horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20.00 to insure.

High Vine was shown at various county fairs, last fall, and was a prize winner at all of them, taking first in the Sweepsteaks Saddle and Harness ring at Erlanger, and defeating the great Chancellor gelding at Sanders. He has proved to be a fine breeder, and his colts will be ready sellers at fancy prices. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and keeping.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from breeding of 1908, the time and place of the show to be announced later.

KIDVILLE.

The extension of the rural mail route is proving a great convenience to a large number of people in this neighborhood.

The worst part of the road from the end of the Constance pike to Limaburg is about one-quarter of a mile along John D. Aylor's farm, and there is an abundance of material within 50 feet of this to put it in first-class condition.

Neighbor Chas. Garnett and sons, Dick and Tanner, drove their mules and spring wagon down on Gunpowder, last Wednesday afternoon, and spent a few hours fishing before the rain started them home. By the time they reached Limaburg the volume of water in the creek had reached such proportions as to cut them off from home, and they, with others who chanced to be in the town that evening, had to seek lodging for the night. Charley's mules are low water animals. Mr. Garnett intends investing in a boat that can be used in the dual capacity of a wagon and a fishing boat.

Last Saturday was pay day at the Creamery, and to see the patrons standing around with their hands full of money, made one think, for the time being, that he was in Wall Street, N. Y., instead of Hebron, Ky.

The output at the Creamery here for the month of April was 2,487 lbs. of butter fat, which made 2,825 lbs. of butter, an overrun of 338 lbs., or about 14 per cent gain. From the amount of milk coming in this month it bids fair to exceed any month since the creamery began operation.

At the meeting of the State camp M. W. of A. which was held at Owensboro May 6th more than 1,000 Woodmen were present, and if they all enjoyed the occasion as much as the delegate from Boone did, it must have been a grand meeting, and judging from the two column write-up that the Owensboro daily paper contained the next morning, it was everything that goes to make such an occasion a success. The next State camp will be held at Newport and the next county camp for Boone will be held at Petersburg, which promises great things for the cause of Woodcraft in this neck of the woods.

THE RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

BURLINGTON, - - KENTUCKY.

Wives of the Night-Riders.

The night-rider wears a black mask. Some of them may make their own masks, but the chances are that there are many Kentucky housewives who have sat down with a piece of black cloth on their laps, and with a pair of scissors have cut the holes in the goods, in order that the cloth might not interfere with the vision, and have sewed the strings to the piece of goods in order that it might be tied securely around their husbands' heads. In doing this, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, the chances are that these women have been prompted by the same spirit that the mothers and wives were actuated by when they fitted out their sons and husbands when they left for service in the Confederate and Union armies, back in the '60s. Then, again, the wives are bound to be in on the secrets of the night-riders, because it would be necessary for these men to account to their wives for their absence at night. An explanation might be made once or twice, but it would not suffice for any length of time. The exhaustion of limb, body and mind of the rider and his horse could not be kept secret from the wife, and those who have read and heard of the operations of the horsemen have no doubt that, while they are scurrying through the country on their mission of warning, and sometimes of devastation, the wives of all of them are keeping a lonely vigil at home and each one is wondering whether the hand will be attacked, and if it should be, whether her husband will escape with his life.

Endowed Theaters.

Mr. Granville Barker, the English actor-manager, who is likely to be the director of the endowed theater in New York, says that "if plays were judged simply for their value as dramatic literature, and were performed without the idea of pleasing the multitude or of a long run, the result would be a wonderful improvement of the drama." Just how he makes this out is not clear. Plays that experienced managers think will not please the majority of theater-goers can only be produced in endowed theaters, and if in the latter place they prove to have popular qualities such a fact will help to encourage more high-class productions perhaps. But if they please only the select few the average writer of plays will prefer to study the tastes of the general public and produce work accordingly. Critics, says the Indianapolis Star, often recommend books to the public which the public stubbornly refuses to read. It will reject as emphatically plays that it does not like, even though the elect patrons of an endowed theater pronounce them good.

Great Britain has adopted measures of reform in the military service. A feature of the system is the disbandment of the "volunteer" organization, which approximated that of the militia in the United States, and the substitution therefor of a "territorial army." The changes made are much after the same order as those assured by the reorganization of the American regular establishment and the closer assimilation of the National Guard to the standing army. The tendency in both countries is to do away with military frippery and to promote efficiency. England's volunteers were a showy body, but did not meet the requirements of a really up-to-date military organization, and the authorities over there seem to have learned a lesson from American procedure.

The bishop of London, in a recent call on the Anglican clergy and laity, emphasized the need of greater activity by religionists of every name if London were to be saved from reverting to a godless, religionless state. It is encouraging to read that the chief officials of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish communions in London are planning to work together, says the Boston Herald, and are to enlist their adherents in a joint demand on parliament for certain remedial legislation. They are wisely planning to accept as allies the radical labor party.

A trade hygienic institute is to be established in Frankfort, Germany, where all matters appertaining to the health and protection of German factory operatives and the working classes in general are to be studied and taught.

Since the city waterworks of Cincinnati were moved ten miles up the Ohio river, the number of typhoid fever cases has fallen off more than 50 per cent. It is an achievement that fully justifies a feeling of deep satisfaction.

Bishop Fallows said to a Chicago congregation that "People ought to be ashamed that they do not live to be 100 or 120 years old." But there are some who ought to be ashamed that they have lived as long as they have.

POWERS SUPREME IN POLITICS

MAY INTERVENE TO SAVE MONTGOMERY FROM PRISON GATES.

CASHIER'S DEFALCATIONS ARE ENORMOUS

Partner of the Silent Quay, He Made a Fortune for Both Betting on Harrison's Election—Bank Officials To Demand Rigid Investigation.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 11.—That the defalcations of Cashier William Montgomery, of the Allgheny National bank of Pittsburg, will reach $750,000 is now believed here, and that powers high in state and national politics will intervene and keep from prison the smiling banker whose counsel in years gone by helped Quay make one president of the United States and whose advice, financial and otherwise, made several governors of Pennsylvania.

Within a trifle over three years' time there has been stolen by employes of banks in the Pittsburg district almost $5,000,000, at least this much has been made public.

Rumor is rife in Pittsburg that some one connected with the Allegheny National bank will demand an investigation of the source of fortune which in the past few years has come to certain women in Pittsburg.

It was in the little back room of Montgomery's bank, the room known as the Quay room, that it was first figured out that Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, should be run for president of the United States. Montgomery was present at this meeting, called by Quay for his henchmen, and it is said that "Monty" gave the advice at this meeting which decided Quay to look toward Indiana at this time for the next president.

In any event, both Quay and Montgomery made a fearful killing on the election of Harrison. It was to Montgomery that Quay sent the message some nights before election to put up every cent he could get, at any odds obtainable, on the election of Harrison, and it was Montgomery who at this time arranged for the hasty mortgage on the home of Senator Quay at Beaver, so that Quay might bet even more cash on the chances of Harrison. Quay is said to have taken down $250,000 as his share of the wagers when all was over, Montgomery taking an equal amount.

It was the same Montgomery now under arrest who was sent hurriedly by Quay to some conference in Philadelphia, about which some one had wired the silent senator at length. Quay had been asked to reply by wire, but instead he sent "Monty," his next friend, who delivered this expression, since grown famous in politics:

"Don't write; send." Which meant that nothing if importance in politics should be entrusted to the mails or the telegraph wires, but should be sent by trusted messenger to deliver by word of mouth.

STANDING IN A COFFIN,

Salvation Army Captain Preached to an Audience in the Slums.

Pittsburg Pa., May 11.—Draped in mourning, standing in his coffin and clad in robes of the dead, Staff Capt. Trevet, of the Salvation Army, preached on "After Death, What?" Sunday evening to a room crowded with people from the slums at the Pennsylvania Avenue barracks. Of all the spectacular performances to attract the sinful Sunday evening's gathering outclassed all previous efforts, as Trevet intended it should.

Prior to the gathering at the barracks the Salvation Army band, followed by lassies with tambourines, held an open-air meeting on Diamond street. Capt. Trevet was dressed in the garb of a corpse. He headed the procession, while the band played a funeral dirge. Behind the captain followed six men carrying a coffin, on which was a large silver plate, and the whole scene carried one back to the funeral processions of medieval days. A vast crowd of people followed the line of march to the barracks.

The Salvation Army members wore emblems of mourning, and instead of the usual shouts of joy they groaned as if they had lost their dearest friend by death.

METCALF REVIEWS FLEETS

ADMIRAL EVANS UNABLE TO PARTICIPATE IN CEREMONY.

Formally Relinquishes Command of Fighting Vessels and Departs for Washington.

San Francisco.—The combined Atlantic and Pacific fleets of battleships, armored cruisers, torpedo boat destroyers and auxiliaries, aggregating in weight of displacement the enormous total of more than 400,000 tons, were reviewed in picturesque San Francisco harbor Friday by Secretary of the Navy Metcalf.

The 44 vessels of the two fleets lay at anchor in four long columns and, proceeding from the Oakland shore, the secretary on board the little gunboat Yorktown—a reminder of the days when the navy was in its infancy—proceeded southward through the lines formed by the armored cruisers of the Pacific fleet, nearest the Oakland shore, and the second squadron of the Atlantic fleet, headed by the Minnesota. Turning back to the north at the end of these two lines, the Yorktown traversed the lane formed on the starboard by the battleships of the First Atlantic squadron and on the port by the little destroyers.

Rear Admiral Evans, who had hoped to end his active naval career by participating in the official ceremonies, was not permitted by his attending physician to go aboard the Connecticut. Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas was again the senior office. Admiral Evans formally relinquished command of the fleet Saturday and left for Washington.

The afternoon was marked by the presentation of silver services to the battleship Nebraska and the armored cruiser California, from the states after which the ships were named. Gov. Sheldon of Nebraska and Gov. Gillett of California personally made the presentation speeches.

At night in the St. Francis hotel the official dinner of welcome by the city of San Francisco was presided over by Mayor Edward R. Taylor. All the flag and commanding officers of the fleet were present. At a later hour and attended by all the higher officers and a host of the younger men, came the dance of the Friday Night club at the Fairmont hotel.

CHESTER PUPILS STRIKE.

Teachers Forced to Apologize for Riding on Street Cars.

Chester, Pa. — As a manifestation of the bitterness with which many people regard the Chester Traction company and the men who took the places of the motormen and conductors when they went on a strike several weeks ago, this city Friday witnessed a sympathetic strike of the pupils of the Morton avenue school because two teachers, Miss Anderson and Miss MacFarland, rode on the trolley cars manned by strike-breakers. When the pupils learned that the teachers had ridden on the cars they refused to attend the sessions.

As a climax to the incident mothers of the children went before the school board and demanded the removal of the teachers. The parents were promised that the teachers would make an apology to the children on Monday and also make a public apology through the columns of the local newspapers.

Black Paper and White Ink.

Appleton, Wis.—If a proposition put forth Thursday by Wisconsin print paper manufacturers is taken as seriously by eastern manufacturers and by the publishers of the country as it is here, Americans in the near future will be reading black newspapers printed with white ink. The chief points advanced for this revolutionary proposition are the preservation of forests, the saving of millions of dollars annually in pulp wood and the reduction in price of print paper to perhaps one-half the present price.

PRINCE EULENBURG ARRESTED.

Once a Confidential Friend of the Kaiser—His Ruin Predicted.

Berlin. — Prince Philip Zu Eulenburg was Friday placed under actual arrest. The crown prosecutor took this step as a result of the testimony given by two men at the prince's bedside to the effect that Prince Zu Eulenburg had been guilty of wrongful actions with them 25 years ago. Prince Zu Eulenburg was involved in the court scandal in Berlin that grew out of the charges brought by Maximilien Harden, editor of Die Zukunft last summer. At the second Harden trial the court declared that all the charges made by Harden were absolutely without foundation. The prince was taken into custody at his castle at Liebenberg and brought in an ambulance automobile 40 miles to the charity hospital, where he was detained pending a further investigation of a charge of perjury made against him. The prince's arrest is taken to mean the irretrievable ruin of this brilliant man who was at one time a confidential friend of the emperor.

OHIO TROOPS ORDERED OUT.

Threats to Burn Two Towns in the Tobacco District.

Columbus, O.—Threats to burn the towns of Aberdeen and Higginsport, emanating from unknown sources but resulting from the bitter warfare in the Burley tobacco district of Ohio and Kentucky, were largely responsible for an order issued by Gov. Harris Tuesday evening to Adjt. Gen. Critchfield to dispatch troops to the towns mentioned.

Troop B of Columbus left for the scene of threatened trouble Wednesday morning at five o'clock. Capt. R. W. Knauss had about 50 cavalrymen in his command. Companies of the First regiment at Cincinnati and Batavia are also said to be under waiting orders.

GREAT FIRE IN ATLANTA.

Two Business Blocks Destroyed, the Loss Being $1,250,000.

Atlanta, Ga.—One million and a quarter dollars is the loss, conservatively estimated, of a fire which started at 3:30 o'clock Friday morning and swept two blocks of Atlanta business property.

By night the fire was under control with ruined buildings in the district bounded by Forsythe, Nelson, Madison and Hunter streets. Late in the day the police and fire departments dynamited what was left of the ragged walls.

VICTIMS NOW TEN

ONE MORE BODY DUG UP IN MRS. GUINNESS' BARNYARD.

PROBABLY WAS A WOMAN

Witness Found Whose Story Tends to Prove Lamphere Knew of Crimes and Tried Blackmail.

Laporte, Ind.—One more body was added to the death roll of the Guinness farm Friday, the grewsome relics now numbering ten.

Coroner Mack at first announced that the grave opened in the morning contained one complete cadaver and portions of a second, but in the evening said that what he had at first believed to be additional thigh and arm bones are in reality pieces of the first set.

Developments of the Day.

Other important developments of the day included the following:

Peter Colson, a new witness in the case, told R. N. Smith, the prosecuting attorney, that Ray Lamphere had acknowledged attempts to blackmail Mrs. Guinness. This is considered as definitely establishing a motive for a disagreement between Lamphere and the woman which resulted later in the burning of the farmhouse.

Mrs. Leo Greening said that her son Emil, who formerly worked on the notorious farm, saw two strangers at the place the night that Jennie Olsen disappeared in November, 1906. Emil Greening is now in Oklahoma City, and the sheriff's office will try to communicate with him in the hope of establishing the fact that Mrs. Guinness had accomplices in the murders at her place.

Matt and Oscar Budsberg departed for Iola, Wis., in the afternoon, after making arrangements to have the body of their father, Ole Budsberg, shipped to that town as soon as Coroner Mack releases it for burial.

Fort Wayne Officials There.

Sheriff Grieee, Chief of Police Angenberk and Dr. White, all of Fort Wayne, visited the Guinness farm in the afternoon and had a long conversation with Sheriff Smutzer of Laporte county. None of the three would reveal the object of their visit and all refused to discuss a report that they were searching for a missing resident of Fort Wayne.

The Pinkerton detectives who were brought here at the instigation of Sheriff Smutzer began their investigation.

Finding of One More Victim.

The resumption of excavation at the farm again drew an immense crowd of spectators. The rush of visitors has become so great that some of the local liverymen have established a regular 'bus line from the downtown district to the farm.

The premature announcement by Coroner Mack that two bodies had been discovered only served to increase the rush of curiosity-seekers. The scraps of humanity were found in the barnyard which had already given up nine cadavers. About four feet below the surface, the excavators encountered bits of bone and burlap and a few strokes more of the spades and hoes revealed the skull, a decomposed torso and leg and arm bones.

Less Skilfully Dismembered.

The body was by far the least preserved of any of the ten grewsome relics. In addition to the usual traces of lime, the evidences were that a less skilful hand had accomplished the dismemberment of this corpse. The legs had been, as usual, severed above the knee joint, but the bones were splintered and the shoulder blade shattered. The skull had been separated and was lying near the feet. It was thought that the body was that of a woman, as a pair of woman's oxford tie shoes and the metal frame of a woman's purse were found in the grave.

Ready to Pay Fine.

"I know where $3,000,000 in cash lies concealed," said a New York lawyer. "This vast sum lies concealed in the inside vest pocket of the 30,000 automobilists of New York state. Each man carries $100 of it in one crisp note, ready to be paid out in a fine, if he should be arrested for speeding. Fines, though, don't appear to stop speeding," he continued. "Perhaps the rich automobilist regards them much as the Suabian wood thief did. The thief was arrested. The magistrate said to him: 'You are brought up on the charge of stealing wood. This charge has been proved against you. But you are old and poor and you shall be let off this time. Only don't do it again.' 'Nonsense!' retorted the thief. 'Let us not have any false sentimentality here. I steal my wood, I pay my fine, and there's an end of it.'"

You Would Not Accept Counterfeit Money, Why Accept Counterfeit Goods?

Good money is made by the Government in which you have implicit faith and confidence. Good goods are made by manufacturers who are willing to stake their reputations on the quality of the material offered to you through the medium of their advertisements in this paper. Counterfeit goods are not advertised. The reason for it is they will not bear the close scrutiny to which genuine advertised goods are subjected. Counterfeit money pays more profit to the counterfeiter. Counterfeit goods are offered to you for the same reason.

DESERVED TO WIN HIS CASE.

Really Able Argument Put Forward by Accused Sailor.

A very good story has recently been told in the fleet of an incident which happened when Admiral Evans was in command of the Indiana. An old-time bluejacket was at the mast before Capt. Evans, charged with getting food out of a mess chest outside of meal hours. This getting of food for night watches is a common and strong desire on the part of most men aboard ship.

Capt. Evans asked the man what he had to say; and the man, sizing up the delicate situation, said:

"Captain, I didn't take no food outer that chest. Why, captain, there weren't no food in that chest! I looked in that chest, and, captain, I met a cockroach coming out of that chest with tears in his eyes."—Harper's Weekly.

Bees in Block of Stone.

While workmen were sawing through a block of Bath stone at Exeter, England, they cut into a cavity in which was found a cluster of two or three dozen live bees.

The incident occurred at the works of Messrs. Collard & Sons, monumental sculptors. There was not much sign of life in the bees at first, but when air was admitted they gradually revived and after a few hours several of them were able to fly.

CHANGE IN FOOD

Works Wonders in Health.

It is worth knowing that a change in food can cure dyspepsia. "I deem it my duty to let you know how Grape-Nuts food has cured me of indigestion.

"I had been troubled with it for years, until last year my doctor recommended Grape-Nuts food to be used every morning. I followed instructions and now I am entirely well.

"The whole family like Grape-Nuts, we use four packages a week. You are welcome to use this testimonial as you see fit."

The reason this lady was helped by the use of Grape-Nuts food, is that it is predigested by natural processes and therefore does not tax the stomach as the food she had been using: it also contains the elements required for building up the nervous system. If that part of the human body is in perfect working order, there can be no dyspepsia, for nervous energy represents the steam that drives the engine.

When the nervous system is run down, the machinery of the body works badly. Grape-Nuts food can be used by small children as well as adults. It is perfectly cooked and ready for instant use.

TOBACCO BEDS

Protected By Farmer, Who Killed Two Raiders and Wounded One.

Frankfort, Ky.—Information has reached the adjutant general's office here that two negroes were shot and killed and a white man was badly wounded in Madison county, between Kirksville and Richmond, by a well-known tobacco grower whose property was threatened with destruction in the event of his attempting to grow a crop this year. The information came direct to Col. E. F. Lillard, who has charge of the state troops in this section, with headquarters in Cynthiana. Col. Lillard's informant said that a half dozen men called on the tobacco grower late at night and made a peremptory demand on him to destroy his plant bed. Upon his refusal to do their bidding, they started to scrape a large bed of young tobacco plants, when he opened fire, killing two of them and shooting a third man's arm off. The latter is said to be a prominent citizen of the county. According to Col. Lillard's informant the occurrence is said to have been rigidly suppressed, although the informant volunteered to give the names of the parties concerned in the affair for investigation by the adjutant general's department.

HOUSES AND BARNS RAZED

By Twister That Swept Through Franklin County—No Fatalities Reported.

Frankfort, Ky.—Reports were received here to the effect that the severe storm that swooped down on this city spread over the county, doing considerable damage to residences, barns and fencing. Near Choateville the storm developed into a twister, unroofing a number of houses and demolishing a residence on the farm of Taylor Collins. There are no fatalities reported.

The cyclone that passed through Choateville was 100 feet in width. The residence on the farm of Collins was occupied by Jesse Collins and his family of five. There is not a vestige of the house left, and all of the members of the family are injured, but none of them fatally. The residence of Neville Collins was blown 20 feet from its foundation, and set on the side of the road. A large barn containing stock was blown down on the Collins farm. A tobacco barn on the farm of Mrs. Jack Hulitt was demolished. The storm seemed to follow the course of the road, leveling the fences, breaking off telephone poles and uprooting trees. The telephone lines are all down in the western part of the county.

Gov. Willson Postpones Pardon Decision To May 17.

Gov. Willson, in a statement made, says:

"I can not possibly help the delay. The mass of petitions and requests in these cases was not presented to me until the hearing. I was not willing to decide the cases without reading the records myself, because the responsibility will rest upon me.

"In order to hurry the work I gave the Howard record to Attorney General Breathitt. I did not intend, in any event, to decide these cases before the end of the republican convention, because I am not willing that my decision, either the one way or the other, should be in any way affected by any political or party consideration. In view of this, I have been more willing to delay the final decision to have a clear separation of the case from partisan or political matter."

VOTERS MUST ACT

IN THEIR HANDS IS POWER TO CHECK TRUST EXTORTIONS.

Arrogant Refusals of Monopoly to Reduce Prices to the Home Consumer Should Lead to Action at Coming Election.

The steel trust officials refuse to reduce the high prices for steel products because its few small competitors have combined with it to maintain prices. Judge Gary, chairman of the street trust, declares that: "The mere fact that the demand is greater than the supply, that the necessities of the purchaser are great, does not justify an increase in price, nor does the fact that the demand is less than the supply furnish an argument for lowering the price. In neither case would the quantity bought or sold be more or less."

At the present time the demand is much less than the supply, and only about 50 per cent. of the capacity of production is being operated. Yet this steel monopolist tries to make us believe that if the price of steel products was reduced there would be no greater quantity sold, thus overthrowing all the experience of business, that the cheaper products of general utility can be produced and sold, the greater the consumption. If the price of steel products were reduced 25 per cent., which it would be with open competition the world over, those who are now waiting for a reasonable reduction in the price of steel would at once begin to manufacture and build. All the numerous things that steel enters into would thus be 25 per cent. or more cheaper than they now are, and that would undoubtedly lead those who have money to invest to take advantage of the low prices. The railroads would be able to buy more rails and engines; steel bridges would replace wooden ones; steel buildings would be ordered by those who have capital to invest in them, because a demand would be created by the reduced rents that could be charged. The farmers would buy more agricultural implements, wire for fencing and tools, if the price was cheaper; new stoves and household utensils would be bought because they would be offered as bargains, whereas now nothing is bought at present high prices that is not absolutely needed.

Why should this gigantic trust be protected by the tariff from competition when it refuses to reduce prices under the spur of no demand? Why should wire for fencing be taxed 41.90 per cent. to help the trust keep up prosperity prices? Why should wire netting be taxed 41.70 per cent. to prevent competition to the trust? Why should wire rope be taxed 55.60 per cent.; why should chains be taxed 87.21 per cent.; why should cutlery be taxed 93.23 per cent. and razors 55.56 per cent., and scissors 52.66 per cent., and common table and carving knives 69.43 per cent.? Why should files be taxed 74.69 per cent., and firearms 46.50 per cent., and boiler tubes 38.32 per cent. unless it is to protect the steel trust and allied manufacturers from competition?

Yet when the panic comes, of which this protective tariff is one of the causes, and business is depressed and prices of everything not controlled by trusts and not protected by the tariff are declining; when wages are being reduced and thousands of workmen hunting jobs, this monopolistic trust declines to reduce prices because its manager declares it would sell no more at lower prices than at its present exorbitant prices.

In the meantime, while the American people are paying protection prices, the trust is selling abroad at much less prices; because the Republican congress has been standing pat for years and continues to follow the injunction of Mark Hanna to "continue to stand pat."

Will you continue to vote for a party who by law allows the trusts to sell cheaper abroad than here, or will you vote to change the tariff that protects the steel and other trusts, so that you can participate at the trusts' bargain-counters as the foreigners do?

Quinine and Paper.

More than a quarter of a century ago the Republican party was shamed into granting the American people free quinine. Over the protest of Pig-Iron Kelley and William McKinley the bill passed to deprive disease and pain of the encouragement they got out of the prohibitive duty on this indispensable drug. Mr. Kelley's argument was that the bill would destroy a great Philadelphia industry without decreasing the price of quinine. He was wrong in both predictions, and from one enactment of the McKinley bill quinine ceased to be a medicinal luxury, so to speak. Just as the tariff on quinine was a tax on health, the tariff on print paper is a tax on intelligence. Every newspaper and book is laid under tribute by the paper trust that is accused of selling paper abroad at a less price than it sells at home. The thing is a monopoly, grasping and odious, and there is little doubt that Mr. Ridder's petition for free paper would pass both houses of congress if a vote could be had.

The net result of Uncle Cannon's investigations into the alleged wood pulp trust is that Mr. Attorney General Bonaparte has done nothing to it. But Mr. Speaker's committee on ways and means is as obdurate as ever, and as deaf, whenever the free list and pulp are mentioned in the same sentance.

WHOLE PARTY IS RESPONSIBLE.

Republicans Must Answer to Country for Action in Congress.

The house of representatives has now become but a machine to register the edicts of Speaker Cannon and Dalzell and two or three other standpatters and trust protectors. Those who blame the speaker for wielding his enormous power adversely to the evident wishes of the public must remember that he is supported in running his autocratic machine by the votes of all the Republican members. The vote of 39 Republicans, in conjunction with the Democrats, could depose him from power or again make the house of representatives a deliberative assembly, but not one Republican member has so far dared to show independence for fear of what the machine would do to crush him. It is come to the pass that congressmen who are in theory supposed to represent the people and carry out their will have surrendered their power to the three Republican members of the committee on rules, namely, the speaker and the two other members appointed by him, who are therefore but messenger boys to do his bidding. Leaving the Democratic members out of the question and looking at the matter from the Republican point of view, how many Republican voters are satisfied with this condition.

If a referendum vote of the Republican voters of the country could be taken on the question of repealing the tariff tax on wood pulp and print paper, is it not certain that but few would oppose it? Yet Speaker Cannon refuses to allow the bill to be reported from the ways and means committee.

On March 19 Mr. Ridder, president of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, wrote to Congressman Payne, chairman of the committee, requesting that a hearing be granted upon the bills relating to free paper and pulp. On March 21 Mr. Payne replied, stating that:

"The majority of the committee determined early in the session that it would not be wise to enter upon a revision of the tariff during this year, thus adding to the uncertainty and disquiet always caused by a presidential election. They also had in mind the disturbance caused by the recent panic. In order to avoid all agitation, they decided that they would have no hearings upon any subject affecting the tariff rates. After receiving your letter I again met with a majority of the members of the committee and they adhered to their opinion. I therefore feel authorized to say to you there will be no hearing upon tariff rates until after the presidential election."

This reply is but an exhibition of arrogance on the part of the "majority" members of ways and means committee—the Democratic members not having been consulted—for who is silly enough to believe that a single bill putting print paper and wood pulp on the free list would disturb the business of the country or add to "the uncertainty and disquiet always caused by a presidential election." If Mr. Payne and the other Republicans had stated that it would disturb the business of the paper combine and probably prevent a liberal contribution to the Republican campaign fund, they would have come nearer to the truth. This free paper and pulp bill is one of those recommended by President Roosevelt, which the Democrats are now trying to force the Republicans to consider, and is but a sample of other bills that the Republican majority of congress refuse to consider.

Every Republican in congress is backing Speaker Cannon and the majority of the ways and means committee in this do-nothing policy. New drastic rules to prevent the minority from even discussing the bills recommended by the president have been adopted. The voters that believe in these reforms will doubtless remember the standpat action of their representatives when election day rolls around and accept no excuses that they were standing with the majority of their party, for surely a Republican member of congress could politically afford to stand by the president.

Same Old Republican Trick.

The evident intention of the administration to crowd the asphalt controversy upon Venezuela indicates that every effort is to be made by the Republican party to take the minds of the American people off their domestic affairs until the highly important matter of securing the succession of the representatives of special privilege has been accomplished. With a battleship squadron booming its way around the world on one side of us and a first-class row with the fire-eating Castro on the other, the Republican leaders and the tariff and trust combines who finance and control them may think to pull off another election on anything but the real issue. But the scheme lacks originality. The people are "onto the game."—Pittsburg Sun.

There, If Necessary.

When Attorney General Bonaparte is called on to pass on the employers' liability bill and it is explained that the president does not wish to take the risk of signing anything unconstitutional, it may be expected that Mr. Bonaparte may find something as facetious in the present bill as the joker which was found by the supreme court in the last one.

The sentencing of a French butcher to a year's imprisonment at hard labor for furnishing bad meat to the army is another evidence that, in some respects, they are harsher in France than we are in this country. "Embalmed beef" a case in point.

PROFIT TO THE GOVERNMENT.

Vast Amount of Paper Money Never Presented for Redemption.

It is stated that of the $7,500,000 of clearing house certificates issued by the banks of Chicago, $131,000 are still outstanding. It is probable that a few more thousand dollars may be turned in for redemption, but it is not at all unlikely that $100,000 or so of the total issue may share the same experience or fate as that of the money emitted by the government.

Paper money is very destructible, and large amounts of it are constantly being destroyed, of which we never hear, because of an apparent indisposition on the part of those who make our laws to provide machinery for detecting contractions of the currency due to that cause. In the case of the clearing house certificates it is possible that a considerable amount has found its way into the possession of collectors, but the greater part of the unredeemed notes has doubtless been lost or destroyed.

It would be interesting to know just how much of the $346,000,000 of legal tender currency of the government, which is supposed to be in circulation, is still in existence. The opportunities for destruction since the date when congress stopped the process of contraction by fixing the amount supposed to be in circulation at the above figure must be very great. Some have ventured to estimate it at not less than $100,000,000.

There has also been an enormous loss of silver and gold certificates, no one can tell how much; and singularly enough no one in authority in Washington seems to be at all curious concerning the amount. And yet there is good reason why curiosity should be manifested.

There is no sense in stating in our treasury reports that there are $346,000,000 of legal tenders outstanding when it would be easy to ascertain that the amount was much less, or that the total silver and gold certificates in circulation is greater than it really is. —San Francisco Journal.

Like a Bread Line.

Dr. E. T. Devine, the noted charity expert of New York, said the other day of the well-known "bread-line" that the men attracted to it were not deserving men—that time and again he had offered these men work if they would come for it, but they never came.

"I am afraid," said Dr. Devine, "that the bread line is composed of weak men, men who, when it comes to a decision, listen to their baser and not their higher selves.

"The bread-line men, I fancy, he went on, "are like a man of whom I heard recently, who celebrated Easter by drinking 11 glasses of egg nog. Then, staring vacantly before him, he was heard to mutter to himself:

"'Shall I have a twelfth or not? My head says no; my stomach says yes; but my head is the more sensible of the two, and in a dispute the more sensible party always gives in. Waiter, another egg nog!'"

Why They Sighed.

Two men, one a bachelor, the other married, happened to sigh simultaneously while riding downtown together, and each looked at the other.

"Why did you sigh?" queried the married man.

"Because I get lonesome," replied the bachelor. "And you?"

"Because I don't get a chance to get lonesome," answered the married man. Whereupon they both sighed again.

Many Injured in Boarding Cars.

Contrary to the prevailing opinion, there are more persons injured in boarding the street cars in New York city than in alighting from them. The monthly average during the last year has been about 18 per cent. more.

Made Good Investment.

Six months ago the Tendring (Eng.) guardians decided to keep pigs and to feed them on the waste from the workhouse. At a meeting recently it was announced that the profit from the sale of the pigs amounted to $325.

BOONE CO. RECORDER.
W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

Sheepshears ground by R. W. Clark, Burlington.

Harry Roberts has put a metal roof on his residence.

The inspector went over proposed rural route No. 3 again last Friday.

It is now the 13th of May and a very small per cent of the corn crop has been planted.

All who can will begin planting corn this week. No time now for waiting for the ground to dry out.

It looks like several Burlingtonites have been using horsetraders cathartic. That branch of business is developing rapidly.

Andy Sheban, of Erlanger, is building a fine bowling alley. When completed it will be among the best in Northern Kentucky.

The Law and Order League at Erlanger has caused the closing of A. S. Cates' saloon, which was located on the most prominent corner of the town.

There will be a lawn fete and euchre given at the home of Mrs. Martin Michels on May 20th, 1908, for the benefit of St. Henry's church —afternoon and evening.

Several veterans and widows of veterans called upon County Clerk Adams, last Monday, and had their vouchers for the last quarterly pension payment made out.

Some of the women are having bad luck with their young chickens, while others are having exceptionally good luck with them. Mrs. Albert Conner is about the biggest loser in this locality.

The postoffice department has sent out notices in regard to repairing dirt roads over which rural mails are carried in this county. Something will have to be done with the roads if the rural routes are permitted to remain in operation.

Sidney Gaines, as examiner, filed a rare exhibit with a deposition he took one day last week. It was a lady's gold watch in which was enclosed a small picture of a man who is a conspicuous figure in a damage suit for $10,000 for alienating a wife's affection.

The following common school pupils stood a very creditable examination in Burlington, last Friday and Saturday: Clifford Miller, Mabel Morris, Lillian Bell, Ruby Corbin, Alma Masters, Alma Blankenbeker, Lillian Bristow, Anna Hempffling, Roxie Aylor.

To pay the William Hedges loss of barn by fire, The Boone County Mutual Fire Insurance Co., found it not necessary to make an assessment, it having enough money on hand to meet the loss, although all the officers of the company have not been paid for their 1907 services.

Many kids in Florence have mumps and of the pupils from the Florence school, Miss Ruby Corbin, who came over to Burlington, last Friday, to take the examination for Common School graduation, took mumps after she returned home Friday evening and was not able to return on Saturday. However she was permitted to complete the examination at home.

A strange disease has attacked a horse and cow belonging to W. J. Rice. It is in the muscles of the mare's shoulders. He first observed that she traveled like an animal taking the sweeny. It was after this discovery that he noticed the swelling. The animal was quite stiff for several hours and then began to improve under the application of salt and vinegar baths followed by an application of liniment. The mare never appeared to suffer much. One of the cow's hind legs was swollen considerably for several days.

The new mail schedule went into effect yesterday, the morning mail departing from the Burlington office at 5:30 a. m., arriving on return at 10:30 a. m. The afternoon schedule has not been changed, neither has the time for the departure of the rural carriers. The time of the departure of the morning mail would suit Mr. Hume, who has the contract for carrying it, much better were he allowed to leave Burlington 30 minutes sooner in the morning, which would enable him to connect with the 6:20 a. m. north bound train at Erlanger.

Depositions were taken in Burlington a couple of days, last week, in the damage suit of Thos. W. Chambers against Charles F. Crump, pending in the Circuit Court of Bartholomew county, Indiana, where the Plaintiff is seeking to recover of the defendant $10,000 damages for alienating the affections of his wife, Hattie Chambers, who is the daughter of Mrs. Levi Tanner, of this county. Mrs. Chambers was divorced from Prof. D. I. Tanner, of this county, and afterwards married Mr. Chambers, of Indiana. Mr. Crump is a Columbus, Indiana, capitalist.

Quite an interesting shoot was had at the ball park, last Saturday afternoon, Joseph Case and W. P. Sullivan being captains of the opposing sides. Case's men made the following records:

Cases.		Sullivans.
Bert Rouse,	20.	John Hogan,	17.
N. Sullivan,	18.	A. Conner,	17.
R. Berksh'e,	15.	Earl Smith,	13.
R. Smith,	21.	L. Weaver,	17.
Total	74.		64.

Each man shooting at 25 pigeons. The spectators were very anxious for a tie score, which would have caused Captains Case and Sullivan to come to the front with their marksmanship at which both are experts, and, no doubt the match would have been postponed on account of darkness, as both were in fine shape for the occasion.

James A. Riddell, of Hebron, and daughter, Mrs. Chester Utz, of Hamilton, Ohio, were guests of M. L. Riddell and wife, last Saturday. Mrs. Utz is spending a couple of weeks with her parents.

J. M. Barlow, of Pleasant Valley neighborhood, was transacting business in Burlington, last Saturday. He has "cut out" both corn and tobacco this year, and says he will devote his entire time to a bean crop.

Miss Lizzie Robert's school closed last Friday and she has returned to her home at Verona. Miss Lizzie is an accomplished lady and has many friends in Burlington whose best wishes she takes with her to her home.

Dr. J. G. Furnish and children, of Covington, came down to spend Sunday with his mother and sister, but had been there only a short time when he received a telephone message to hurry back home to see a patient.

Ed Burris, who farms for T. J. Walton out on the Belleview pike, was in town one day last week laying in chicken feed, and gave it as his experience that there is no profit in raising chickens for market if you have to buy feed.

R. S. Stephens, of Home City, O., called in last Saturday and subscribed for the RECORDER to be sent to him at his new home in Missouri. His many Kentucky friends hope health and prosperity will be the portion of him and his in Missouri.

Mr. John Stephens and daughter, Miss Lizzie, of Bullittsville neighborhood, moved to Erlanger, last Wednesday, where they will make their future home. They are desirable acquisitions to any community, and their Boone county friends wish them all the good luck imaginable in their new home.

Harry C. Menefee, son of Judge B. F. Menefee, of Crittenden, was in Burlington, taking depositions, a couple of days last week. He uses a typewriter at the manipulation of which he is an expert. He is one of the army of candidates for county offices now announced in Grant county, having designs on the office of Circuit Court Clerk.

W. R. McCleary, of Indiana, inspector of rural mail routes, was here again last Thursday to inspect rural route No. 3 from Burlington to Francesville and North Bend and back to Burlington by way of Bullittsville. He gave the same route some attention several months ago, but it became necessary to give it another viewing, and he came at the worst time that could have been selected, as dirt roads are particularly bad just now. If the route is recommended under the present road conditions there is no doubt what would have been the result had the inspection been made a few months later. If established it will be a route over which the carrier can make 313 trips a year, excepting holidays.

H. Clay Roberts, of South Dakota, brother of Robert Roberts, of Mud Lick, and Miss Lizzie Roberts, of Verona, was a guest of C. C. Roberts and family a couple of days last week. Mr. Roberts is a son of the late Thomas Roberts, of Verona, from which place he moved to Indiana 48 years ago; from there he moved to Illinois, then to South Dakota, where he has been residing for many years. Mr. Roberts was an early investor in real estate, and for many years his venture was anything but encouraging, but he had nerve to stay with it, and it finally took a turn in his favor and he is now one of the wealthy men of South Dakota. He had the misfortune to lose his wife last fall, and is now visiting his children who are considerably scattered, some of them living in Delaware while others reside in California. Mr. Roberts has not lost his love for his old Kentucky home, but regards South Dakota far a head of it in many respects. He is very pleasant and a well informed gentleman.

Tuesday morning lightning struck the Short Creek Baptist church and it was burned to the ground. Not a thing was saved and it is reported there was no insurance. This church is situated on the Falmouth Pike and was one of the largest churches in point of numbers and also in respect to the size of the building. This will be a great loss to the congregation but they will probably rebuild right away.—Williamstown Courier.

At a mass meeting of all interested persons held at the court house last Saturday the question of handling and financing the 1907 pooled crop of tobacco in Pendleton county, which has been hanging fire for some time, was finally disposed of, the contract being let to a company of about sixteen gentlemen, who are to operate under the name of the Pendleton County Warehouse Co. The company has made partial arrangements with the banks of Falmouth and in the county for a large slice of required funds and expect to begin business about the second week in June. The price fixed for handling the tobacco is 75c per hundred with free storage to September 1.—Falmouth Pendletonian.

Ezra G. Hayes says: "On the morning of May 10, 1850, snow lay upon the ground two inches deep. The corn stood ankle high. I took a drove of fat cattle to Cincinnati that morning. By nine or ten o'clock the sun shone out very warm and the corn turned black and fell within two hours. All the corn from Lawrenceburg to Harrison was replanted. The frost and cold weather was late that year and the corn crop was about an average. Other grain crops were fair. There was some fruit."

Through a tip from one of the "trusties" of Kenton-co. Jail, Covington, Turnkey Henry Plaggenberg nipped in the bud a desperate attempt at a jail delivery. Plaggenberg learned that for the past two weeks prisoners had been busy making two heavy wooden keys to fit one of the steel doors. A search was made of the cells of James Pence, under four different indictments, and John Meeks, who was given a life sentence in the penitentiary by a Boone-co. jury a few days ago. Two wooden keys, two knives, and two heavy clubs were found under one of the beds. It was learned from one of the other prisoners that the plan of Meeks and Pence was to use the keys, which they had manufactured from water soaked wood, in opening the "blind" door, and then escape from the building by prying the bars from one of the rear windows. In case this plan failed they were to use their clubs, which were the handles from mops, on Plaggenberg, when his back was turned, and then get possession of the keys. The turnkey tried one of the keys on the door and found that it would tumble the heavy lock, but a portion of it broke off inside. Meeks and Pence have been placed in one of the interior cells where they will remain until arrangements can be made for their removal.

The flood in the creek near Elijah Holton's destroyed one of the abutments under the iron bridge on the Petersburg pike, last Wednesday night. The pike company had but recently spent $75 in repairs on that particular abutment and thought it was in pretty good condition.

The heavy rains last week were exactly what the farmers did not desire. Besides washing plowed land badly in many places it beat the soil until it was about as hard as it was before it was broken, while the life was about hammered out of the unbroken corn land. Crop prospects are very discouraging.

Working Out a Poll Tax

Along in the fall the roads around us, and on the way to town, began to show decided signs of dilapidation. Gullies had been worn in the sides and center of the highway, and long ruts formed where the clay had dropped down, had been carried away by the rain, leaving smooth, spout-like openings. The dirt had been washed away, also, from rocks and boulders that protruded like fangs from the soil. Bridges had lost some of their timbers, and planks on them had been loosened by the heavy and constant traffic of "thrashers," "clover-hullers" and teams hauling grain to market. On some hills it was almost suicidal to try to drive down them. It was bad enough going up, but to go down was simply dry "coasting" over ruts and boulders, with either a runaway or an upset long before you got to the bottom. The "road boss" of our district began to bestir himself.

"I reckon you'd rather pay your poll tax than work her out?" he inquired of me one morning, almost apologizing at the idea of my deliberately going out on the road instead of paying the comparatively small amount necessary.

"Why, no," was my answer. "I'll work it out." As I was neither blessed nor burdened with a horse this meant that I would have to work twice as long as I would had I been possessed of a team.

"Well, the boys will be ready at eight to-morrow morning," said the "boss," "and we start in on 'Suicide Hill.' I reckon it'll take us two days to fix that and the bridge across the creek there, and then we can take her easy on the bottom road. Two days will pay your tax all right, and you'll be right in it up to your neck on the hill," he added, with a grin. "Better fetch an ax; we'll have everything else."

Now, I was not entirely certain as to just what this "poll tax" meant, nor that I was due to either pay it or work it out, but it was an opportunity for new experiences and a chance to get acquainted with the neighbors, so I hung over the grindstone that day and got my ax down to a fine edge for the next day. Cecile put me up a hearty lunch, and at eight sharp I was at the hill ready to begin work for the day. This particular slope was jagged with boulders, seamed and scarred with deep cuts and gullies, and looked like several blasts of dynamite had been touched off under it. A tougher patch of hillside never lay out of doors. No one could go down it without getting seasick, on account of the constant "slewing" from side to side, and as for ascending it, the incline was so steep that a squirrel would almost fall off backwards.

I was directed to clasp a pickax and start digging a ditch on the north side of the hill and on down towards the bottom. This required digging in a rocky shale that lay on that side, and it was hard work. Progress was necessarily slow, but foot by foot I wore down the shale and rock until I began to see the outlines of a serviceable ditch appearing along the north line of the highway. Meanwhile some of the men clamped huge chains to the largest boulders and hauled them down and dumped them in the creek. Others plowed a deep diteb along the south border of the road, where there was a layer of gritty soil. Still others took "scrapers" and dragged dirt, sand and shale up and over the road and packed it into the ruts and hollows.

Horses and mules were hitched to the "scrapers," which were merely iron scoops of large size, which had wooden handles at each side. These handles were held by the driver of the "scraper" and as he elevated the handles the "scraper" slid into the soil and took up a load of dirt. It looked easy, and it was easy if you knew how, but when you got into heavy clay, or tough ground, or rocks, you were apt to find it pretty rough sledding.

After I had worked a couple of hours with the pickax the "boss" came and relieved me, leaving in my charge a team of salmon-colored mules and a "scraper," with instructions to go over the top of the hill and cut into the hillside there and bring down a few "scraper-loads" on to the top and shoulder of the hill and spread them out there. I had brought along a pair of buckskin gloves that morning.

I took the mules and drove over the hill, "hawed" my team around, took hold of the handles of the "scraper" and set the edge into a bank of pretty stiff clay, just beyond which was a ditch of shale and mud. Giving the mules the signal, we lunged forward. Now, my buckskin glove on the right hand had slipped over the handle of the "scraper" without my noticing it, and the handle had gone into the space where the glove buttoned. As we went ahead the "scraper" began to turn, on account of the toughness of the bank, and when I started to let go so as not to go up into the air the glove held me, and I soared aloft with the soaring "scraper." The "scraper" up-ended, but I continued on my wild career, literally shot out and over into the ditch, the glove unloosing from the end of the "scraper" just enough to send me on in advance. I came down on my nose and face in the mud and gravel, somewhat scratched and soiled, but unhurt.

Fortunately, no one was there to see my mishap. If there had been I should never have heard the last of it. I worked the "scraper" with bare hands after that, and when it went over by reason of too heavy going I did not go with it, I am happy to say. I soon got the knack of handling the machine with ease and grace, and it was not nearly so hard nor so monotonous as swinging a pick. It is wonderful how much work a gang of men can do in a few hours by sticking closely to their task. The hillside, which had looked so dangerous and stubborn that morning, commenced to assume the proportions and aspect of merely a steep incline, but perfectly safe for travel.

There was one "spring hole" in this hill, and this we had to dig deep into, tile and then rock over with heavy boulders. The strength of a spring is something enormous, and a good spring in the middle of a highway is something that will cause more trouble than any one other thing. In that country, with sheer descent of hundreds of feet along the roads, the springs sometimes wore away sections of the road from year to year, compelling a retreat further and further into the fields, until great hays and inlets would be eaten into the meadows towards the sources of the gushing waters.

The bridges in the country are generally very good or very bad. Some of them are neat iron structures, well furnished with stone abutments, calculated to stand for 50 years or so. Others, the great majority, are makeshift concerns of heavy enough timbers, but crudely put together and shored up with brush and dirt that the spring freshets carries off, leaving the supports to sag and drop as the traffic goes over them and the rains undermine them.

We took hold of this bridge at the foot of the hill and pried out the timbers to the north, and set in, much deeper than the original supports, straight and massive oak timbers, and braced them with bowlders so that they could not wear or shake loose. Then we filled in and back of them with more rock, and nailed them with heavy planks so that the entire square of support made one framework solidly set in the earth. Then we reinforced this framework to the top with additional timbers spiked to the square, and then laid on the road planks, spiked securely to the joists or heavy upright timbers laid lengthwise on the bridge frame. Everything was liberally fastened with spikes of huge size, driven down with sledge-hammers, and every point where weight would possibly cause the structure to sag was shored up with rock, so that the rains or high water could have no effect in causing the bridge to "give" in any direction. Then we nailed up stout side poles, braced at each end, to keep skittish horses from tumbling down 40 feet to the bottom of the ravine, and reckoned we had done a good, clean job of bridge-building.

At noon we halted in our work, fed the teams and comforted ourselves with a substantial "meal of victuals," as the "boss" put it. The "boss," by the way, ate more than anyone else, and did about a man and a half's work. After dinner several more men drifted up to where we were working and some of the morning "shift" went home, those who had come with teams being replaced by others with more teams. In this way the dove-colored mules passed from my sight.

I got acquainted with a great many men by reason of the changing about of the workers, and they were most of them curious to see a man from the city handle an ax or a pick, drive a team or carry and help set up timbers. But as my garb was about the same as the "scarecrows" wore, and entirely guiltless of collar, cuffs, tie or anything which might distinguish me from a tramp, the novelty wore off very soon. Indeed, I was so tanned, and looked so much like a section "hand" that when I was introduced to the newcomers they must have been unable to detect any urban significance in my attire or looks.

Being "stuck up" in the city makes a man hated; in the country, laughed at and despised. If you will work in the country you can dress as elegantly as you please on Sunday on occasions of social importance; in fact the better you dress then the more you will be appreciated. But don't dress when you go ont to work, just cover yourself and no more. I had a set of hats that I wore which were unique in their tatters. For coats I wore usually my hunting coats if it was cold. For shirts, except on state occasions, I wore the old-fashioned "hickory" shirts, preferably blue, while as for overalls, I had a collection that would have caused the blush of shame to mount to the cheeks of a self-respecting "scare-crow."

During our noon wait, several impromptu "rassiln'" matches were pulled off, but I did not feel frisky enough to waste any energy in that direction. The "hoss" proved to be the best "rassler" in our party, tipping up men much larger than he was, with apparent ease.

By the time the afternoon had waned a little, "Suicide" hill was as fine a bit of work as you would care to see in a day's journey; all the ruts hammered down with broken rock, shale, sand and well-packed dirt; all the bowlders buried under a cushion of top-dressing that covered them deeply and effectually, and a good ditch on each side of the highway. The bridge at the bottom was as good or better than when it was new, and from that time on, had lost, for the nonce, its suggestive cognomen.

When we turned our attention to the "bottom" roads, it became a matter of faster work, and more scraping, filling and leveling of the highway. Here we came across bridges where the huge bulk of the "separators" had cracked or broken the planks, and where we were compelled to go into the woods and cut logs to replace the spoiled timber. The "road boss" had a general discretion to appropriate timber for road purposes, and sometimes neighborhood feuds grew out of the fact that the "boss" has cut down some sturdy tree for a bridge timber which the owner has been saving for some particular purpose. Credit may be given to the party furnishing the tree, or the township may be charged for it, and the owner paid in cash. But the "boss" can cut where and when he pleases, and the farmer must grin and bear it.

I found that several months of outdoor life and a constant round of daily exercise had so hardened my muscles and improved my breathing apparatus that I had no trouble in "keeping up my end of the log," either actually or figuratively. Work which would have tired me mortally seven months before, was only good, healthy exercise. I had to walk about three miles to the work, and the same distance back at night, and wield an ax, a pick, or drive team and "scrape" or help lift heavy timbers, and yet I was not "played out" at the end of a day. In fact, the longer I was at the work, the more accustomed I got to it, and after all, work in the open air is much less hard than when a man is confined to four walls.

The necessity of good roads in the country is so immediately apparent that it seems strange that there has not been some attempt to make it compulsory on each farmer to keep the roads in front of his farm in shape, opposite owners to join in attending to the highways between their property. It is also surprising that the "good roads" movement has so far been confined to comparatively a limited space. A government turnpike, built and maintained by the government, to act as a "trunk line" of roads in each state, or two or three of them in the more important agricultural states, would be a "good thing" for an experiment. The side roads would branch into these roads, and while they would carry in some mud on them, it would not make much difference on a thoroughly good turnpike.

I qualified as not exactly an "expert" but a fair average "hand" at working out my "poll tax," and have the satisfaction of knowing that I have done something towards the "good roads" movement besides talking about it.

It was currently reported, after this experience, that I was not too proud to work, and that I must have been on a farm at some time during my life, or I would never have been able to handle an ax, or drive a "scraper." And as a means of breaking down the impalpable barriers that seem to exist between the man from the city and the man on the farms, "working out your poll tax" may be confidently recommended as a paying proposition. I met a number of men while on the road that I would not have known otherwise, and in my trips to the county seat I could always of a Saturday afternoon find some one "ont my way" who would be glad to give me a lift to the farm four miles away, just because we had worked side by side together with the axes, the picks, the scrapers and the teams.

My work was eminently satisfactory to the "road boss," for I worked steadily, and did not try to stand around and "soldier" on the job. A man can easily look out for the soft "snaps" in work of that kind, and he may be successful in getting them. But he will be watched, and his work in that line will be noted and commented on. The only way to do if you are going into a deal of that kind is to do your share, and not shirk the disagreeable features of the work. Going into three or four feet of mud and water to help hoist a heavy piece of timber is not so very pleasant; nor even safe, but some one has got to do it, and it might as well be you.

I got my receipt for my work from the "boss," duly signed and attested with his official authority, and I still possess this piece of paper which attests that I have well and legally paid my separate and several "poll tax" by manual labor honestly performed, although the document does not go into any elaborate detail about it.

After that experience I began to have a critical eye for bad roads, and when I used to ride down "Suicide Hill" towards the "bottom" country, I viewed with an extremely complacent gaze the fine work which I had put into the ditch which bordered the hill to the north, and took a sort of semi-proprietary interest in the bridge at the foot where I had put in such strenuous, such herculean licks in working out my "poll tax."

NEED SMALL TOWNS

THE BULWARK AND THE HOPE OF THE COUNTRY.

CENTRALIZATION AS AN EVIL

Building Up of Large Cities, with Their Crowded and Discontented Population, One of the Perils That Menace Nation.

There are many country merchants who see their trade gradually slipping away from them—leaving the country and going to the great cities by the channel of the mail-order trade, writes George H. Maxwell in the Michigan Tradesman.

There are many country editors who see the prosperity of their towns depleted and circulation and advertising income reduced for the same reason.

There are very few, however, who realize that their problem is a national one, and that it is wrapped up in and a part of the great fundamental question whether this nation shall be perpetuated or shall be destroyed by the physical degeneration of humanity, the social unrest, industrial discontent, moral and political corruption and class hatred bred in the city slums and tenements and certain to culminate in anarchistic crimes, riotous mobs and all-destroying social upheavals as the result of some long continued period of industrial and commercial depression.

The fact is that the upbuilding of the country town and suburban village, as an antidote and safeguard against the poisonous social, moral, physical and political consequences of herding millions of our working people together in the unnatural congested life of the tenements, is the one great question that rises above all others in importanee as a problem thatthis nation must solve. Unless it does solve it, it will suffer death from human deinportance as a problem that this nations and civilizations that have risen in the past only to be destroyed. Ours will he likewise destroyed unless we take heed in time.

The danger arises from the congestion of population in cities and from nothing else.

The solution lies in checking the further growth of cities as the homes of industrial workers and scattering those homes into and among suburban homecroft villages and in country towns and rural settlements.

To do that, trade and industry must be decentralized. Industries of all kinds must be established in the suburbs of the cities or in the towns instead of in the congested centers. That is something that requires an organized campaign, but first it requires a current of right thought in the minds of the people.

It requires that everything should be done that can be done to hold in the existing towns and villages the trade that now naturally centers there. Any part of it, small or large, that is diverted to any of the huge central mail-order conceins in the big cities, and thereby taken away from the locality where it originates and belongs, is an influence that promotes just to that extent the growth of the evil that is eating at the heart of our national life. Whatever is needed to supply the needs of every household in every rural community should be sold over the counter of a local store and not through the postoffice and the mail trade.

Then comes the question of the growth of towns and villages. There is where the country editors and merchants can help themselves. Once get it into the minds of the whole American people that the salvation of the unfon depends on the upbuilding of the country towns and suburban villages—get the idea planted and deeply rooted so it will grow itself—and a thousand influenees will enter the field and enlist for this great campaign for rural and country town and village development to check the overgrowth of cities with all its resultant evils.

It can not be done all at once. The first thing is to get public thought actively aroused and turned into right channels. There must be a complete common conception in the minds of millions of people of this new national ideal. Then there must be united, concerted and vigorous action to realize that ideal. The facts and arguments to support it must be disseminated through a great educational campaign—entirely separate and apart from politics.

Every country editor and country merchant should he a leader in the movement in his locality.

School Books In Philippines.

The other day I took my company on a practice march to Mariquina. When we reached the river we had to wait several minutes for the old rope ferry to come over. Just then two Filipino boys came along on their way to Pasig.

I asked one of them, a lad of about 12, to show me his school books. These consisted of a second reader, a speller and an arithmetic, and differed from those in the United States principally in the words. Was there no interesting tale of apple stealing? Not exactly; it was "mangas" the bad boys stole; yet the same terrible retribution had overtaken the thieves as had overtaken them when our great trust magnates were schoolboys. It was "Pedro," not "John," who was drowned because he went fishing on Sunday. The arithmetic had examples in bananas and pesetas instead of in plums and dimes.—From Army and Navy Life.

RIGHT KIND OF PUBLICITY.

How to Use Newspaper Space to the Best Advantage.

It is the hard blows from the blacksmith's hammer that welds the iron. It is the continual chipping away of the sculptor that is necessary to finish the statue. It is the word after word written down by the writer that constitutes the completed novel, and it is the constant advertising that brings success to the merchant, combined with the ability to carry out all business agreements.

"If you will note the successful merchant in any locality, you will find that he is the persistent advertiser. There are exceptions, of course, where business has been built up perhaps without ever a cent being spent for printer's ink. The pioneer storekeeper in a new country may have such a demand for his goods that he may be able to succeed. He may be able to retain his customers and thus go ahead for awhile. But his business is not likely to be permanent. Some advertisers will start in his field, and by liberal use of methods of publicity gain in a few months' time trade greater than the pioneer took years to build up.

Any merchant who has common sense essential to success should have all the qualities required to construct a drawing advertisement. He knows the quality of his goods, the prices, the class of customers he has in his neighborhood, and with these points as a basis he should be able to arrange matter for an attractive advertisement. He no doubt can secure pointers from his home editor; that is, if the editor has any ideas, and most of them have. One reason why advertisements in the country papers sometimes do not show up well is because of the scanty supply of type the editor is compelled to struggle along with. It matters not how good the wording of an advertisement may be, it must be well "set" to attract attention. A chimsy printer can spoil the pulling power of the best-worded advertisement.

CITIES AND TOWNS.

What is Essential for Their Upbuilding and Permanency.

Cities and towns are built up where there are certain natural advantages that afford economic means for manufacturing or for the distribution of products. Towns and cities may be classified as manufacturing towns and commercial towns. Large cities are built up by support from industries that employ people. There are few communities that can exist within themselves and upon home resources without the assistance of other communities. The city must draw from a large trade territory. All parts of the world contribute toward the sustenance of such great cities as New York, Boston and Chicago. It is the support thus received that makes these cities great. The country town has its trade radius limited. Unless the proper effort be made to protect this trade, to care for it, to cultivate it, it is likely to drift elsewhere. It requires push, continual exercise of energy to build up a good trade center. Competition is constantly growing keener. It is pulling together and constant work, push and enterprise hitched up with common sense that always wins.

Avoid Narrowness.

There is such a thing as carrying principles of economy in business to extremes, of practicing the trimming operations until harm results. Too much cutting down of expenses means decreased business and loss. It is narrowness that should be avoided. How many times do business men seek cheap help rather than those whose experience and aptness justifies their asking for good wages? Cheap help is generally expensive and poor help. The clerk who receives five dollars a week cannot be expected to be much more than an automaton, a machine, and he may be all right in certain capacities, but he will never prove a trade winner for the merchant who employs him. Many a merchant fails in business just because of his niggardly way of running things, on account of his ideas that he can win out with cheap help, and can do business without advertising.

Hustlers in Demand.

The world likes a hustler, and has little use for the laggards. No town was ever known to get to the front when its affairs were in the hands of a lot of pessimistic moss-backs. It is the optimist who has a well-regulated balance wheel who is the safest one to take the helm. One good pusher and worker in a town who has the right kind of mettle in his make-up, though he have not a cent, is worth a dozen men without progressive ideas who may be leaders in financial affairs.

One on "Labby."

As proprietor of Truth, Mr. Henry Labouchere, popularly known as "Labby," has had to spend a deal of money in libel actions. He once admitted in court that he had spent over $200,000. "Then," said the late Sir Frank Lockwood, "I must thank you, Mr. Labouchere, on behalf of the profession. Go on, and prosper!" Needless to say, there were roars of laughter in court.—London Tit-Bits.

Maude Booth's Strenuous Day.

On her recent visit to New Orleans Mrs. Maude Ballington Booth passed at least one strenuous day. She preached at a prison in the morning, held an informal reception in the afternoon, then preached at the house of detention, after this held another reception, then addressed the Era club, which wound up with a third informal reception.

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

AN EXPLANATION.

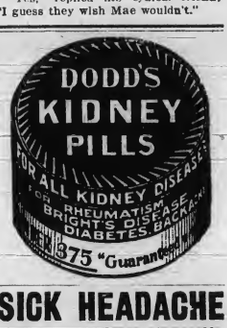
"Why didn't you answer your teacher when she spoke to you in the arithmetic class, Ethel?"

"Coz mamma told me I mustn't thpeak durin' thcool hourth."

Rough on the Candidate.

"There's a candidate outside, wantin' to see you," said the hired man.

"Hang the candidate!" exclaimed the farmer.



And the hired man went out muttering:

"I hain't lynched a man in a mighty long time, but ef he ain't too much fer me I'll foller hustructions!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Very Likely.

"Again Mae Wood!" exclaimed the non-sensational reader of the newspapers.

"Yes," replied his cynical friend; "I guess they wish Mae wouldn't."

NAAMAN THE LEPER

He Gratefully Remembers the Little Hebrew Maid

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Mason.)

SERMONETTE.

No human greatness or power or riches can blot out the stain of sin.

Leprosy is a type of sin. It is incurable, except as God applies the remedy.

The world's self-treatment for sin will never cure the plague spot of sin. Only the God-prescribed remedy of Jesus' blood can cleanse.

Many Naamans in the world to-day are waiting for the word which will lead them to the place of cleansing for sin. Speak the word as did this little maid that will point to Christ the sin-bearer.

When in a heathen land and among a strange people the little maid did not forget the true God. When away from home do you leave your religion behind you?

God's gifts cannot be purchased.

The world's gold and silver and fine raiment are not legal tender in buying the blessings of the kingdom of God.

The sinner must accept God's way of salvation if he is ever cleansed from sin.

Many a sinner misses salvation because he willfully makes out the program as to how he will be saved.

The way of cleansing was so simple that Naaman almost missed it. So is it with the way of salvation. It is so easy and simple that many a soul refuses to enter therein.

The great Syrian general had to learn what submission and obedience to God meant before he could obtain the blessing of cleansing and healing. So it is with every one who would receive of God's salvation. However great or mighty he may be from the world's point of view, he must submit his will to God's will and must obey God's word before he can be saved.

When Naaman came to the king of Israel seeking cleansing, the latter knew so little about God and his prophet that he was unable to direct the needy leper to the place of cleansing. Too often this is true of the Christian. He is unable because of the low standard of his own Christian life to point the needy sinner to the Christ who can heal.

The dark hour of the little Jewish girl's slavery was made bright by the opportunity it brought her of pointing a needy soul to the true God. So it may be with the Christian. The darkest hour of affliction may be made bright with the kindly service for Jesus.

THE STORY.

WISTFULLY, and with a great heart hunger, the little maid from her vantage ground behind the bushes watched the gay cavalcade start. She had slipped out unobserved, for all the household had gathered to bid goodby to Naaman, the lord of the house hold, who with a great company of servants and soldiery was starting for the land of Israel.

"Oh, I am so glad he is going!" exclaimed the little maid to herself, "but—but I wish I were going, too." And she began to cry softly to herself, as she had done many and many a night since she had been seized by the Syrian band during one of their raids into Israel, and had been taken into this strange land and sold to this great general.

True, they had been kind to her, but she could not forget her home away back there in Israel. She wanted to see mamma once more and her brothers and sisters. And as she watched her master depart the impulse came to rush forth and beg him to take her back to her home, but as quickly came the realization that she was only a slave girl, and could ask no favors, and with a low moan she sank back in her place. But the one comfort which she had had in her loneliness—the thought that the God of Israel whom her mother had taught her to reverence and love would not forget her—came now to help and cheer her, and she crept from her hiding place and slipped back into the house.

More than once during the days which followed the story of Joseph came to her as it had been told to her by her mother, and she had said, over and over again:

"God remembered Joseph, and he will remember me."

And there she was content to let the matter rest. So the days passed, but only once since that first morning when she had spoken to her mistress of the prophet in Israel, who could cure her master, had her mistress spoken to her of the matter, and then it was to remark, rather impatiently:

"Can help come out of Israel, when all Syria and the rest of the world has been searched for a cure?"

"The God of Israel is able to do anything," bravely but quietly ventured the girl.

"And is he more powerful than the gods of Syria?" was the contemptuous reply. "Why, then, is Syria great and Israel in bondage?"

The little maid made no reply. In fact none was expected, for the mistress dismissed her with an impatient wave of her hand and she left the apartment.

That night the household of Naaman was thrown into the greatest excitement and joy by the arrival of a runner who brought tidings that the master of the household had been healed and was even then on his way back home, and would doubtless arrive on the morrow.

There was little sleep in that household that night, because of the preparations which must needs be made for welcoming Naaman home again. Even the royal household was in a fever of excitement over the joyful news, and the king ordered his chariot ready for the morrow that he might go forth himself to meet the great general on his return.

The wife of Naaman could scarce contain herself with joy and impatiently watched every detail of the preparations, keeping the servants rushing hither and thither until it seemed as though they would drop from sheer exhaustion.

Upon the little maid fell even a more trying hurden, and by the time all the preparations had been made she was utterly tired out, and creeping off to her little couch, she soon fell into a heavy slumber. So deep, in fact, was her sleep, that she did not hear the bugle calls, the shouting and the rejoicing as Naaman with his cavalcade came up to the house and was greeted by the waiting throngs.

The greetings are over. The ceremonies attending the return of the great general are ended. The king has departed for the palace, and the groups of curious and interested people are scattering to their homes.

"Oh, how good it is to have thee back again, and healed," exclaimed Naaman's wife, when they were alone, and she reached up in a sort of awed way and smoothed the fresh new skin which had taken the place of the unsightly leprous spots which had shut him away from her for so long.

"Yea, 'tis wonderful," responded Naaman, returning the caress.

"Tell me all about it," she urged. "Yes, yes," he responded; "but first tell me: Where is the little Hebrew maid that told me of her God and whose God has healed me? I searched all through the crowds that thronged me on my return, but saw not her face."

"Ah, that is what made thee so preoccupied. I wondered of what thou wast thinking as I saw thee searching the faces before thee, when thou shouldest have been content with but one face."

"Yea, and I am," lovingly responded Naaman, as he in turn patted her cheek, "but I must see the little maid and tell her, too, what great things her God has done for me."

And to the little audience of two the great general of Syria rehearsed like an enthusiastic child the story of his visit to Israel and of his washing in the Jordan seven times, and coming out cleansed of his leprosy. And when he had finished he turned to the little maid, and, putting his arm about her, asked, tenderly:

"And now what can I do for thee, who has done so much for me?"

The little maid looked up beseechingly into his face, and then looked questioningly over at her mistress as she whispered the one word:

"Home!"

And even before the words of assent had been spoken she read the answer of her appeal in the loving, appreciative eyes which beamed upon her.

"I should like to have kept her as my own daughter," Naaman said to his wife later in the day, as they watched the departure of the little maid for her home, "but Naaman will not forget her."

Recording the Voice.

Dr. Marago of Paris is photographing the human voice, and with a powerful magnifying glass he is able to read the records of a person talking. It is the belief of certain scientists that these voice photographs eventually will take the place of writing and alphabets altogether. Stenography, too, would be abolished. Instead of writing a letter the sender would talk into the microphone, pull out the strip of zigzags when through and post it. Forgery would be out of the question, for it is absolutely impossible to deceive the electric needle, which faithfully records every shade of tone. For books and newspapers the idea is to have a conventional imitation of zigzags of the various vowels and consonants in the form of type, which will be set in lines like ordinary printed matter. Telephone conversations would be as binding as a written contract to-day.

Long Wireless Transmission.

Consul Thomas H. Norton of Chemnitz reports that by the Slaby-Arco system of wireless telegraphy over 1,000 words were recently telegraphed from the trial station of the company at Nauen, near Berlin, to the Austrian military station for wireless telegraphy at Korneuberg, near Vienna, a distance of about 372 miles. He adds that this is the record result thus far in the use of the system for overland transmission.

THOUGHT IT NATIONAL TRAIT.

Driver Couldn't Understand American Not Being in a Hurry.

A traveler returned from Jaffa tells tale at his own expense. Having journeyed to the historical seaport on his way to Jerusalem, he succeeded in hiring a conveyance to carry him to the station. By speech and gesture he informed the native driver that he wished to be carried in a leisurely, sightseeing fashion through as many as possible of the principal thoroughfares of Jaffa, and to be delivered at the terminal just in time to take the outgoing train.

He had no sooner seated himself in the vehicle, however, than the driver whipped up his horse and whirled the dismayed traveler at a furious pace through all the dust and over all the stones of the notoriously rough streets of Jaffa. The passenger was too busily employed in saving his bones to be able to see anything of the interesting town.

Arriving at the station, he found that he still had two hours to wait.

"Why in the world," he demanded, indignantly, "did you ever hurry like that?"

"You American," responded the driver, with an expressive shrug. "All American like go very much fast."—Youth's Companion.

BOY KEPT SCRATCHING.

Eczema Lasted 7 Years—Face Was All Raw. Skin Specialists Failed, But Cuticura Effected Cure.

"When my little boy was six weeks old an eruption broke out on his face. I took him to a doctor, but his face kept on getting worse until it got so bad that no one could look at him. His whole face was one crust and must have been very painful. He scratched day and night until his face was raw. Then I took him to all the best specialists in skin diseases but they could not do much for him. The eczema got on his arms and legs and we could not get a night's sleep in months. I got a set of Cuticura Remedies and he felt relieved the first time I used them. I gave the Cuticura Remedies a good trial and gradually the eczema healed all up. He is now seven years old and I think the trouble will never return. Mrs. John G. Klumpp, 80 Niagara St., Newark, N. J., Oct. 17 and 22, 1907."

Counting a Billion.

Speaking of counting the hairs of your head—suppose you undertook to count a billion, how long do you think it would take you to do it? A billion, according to the French notation, which we follow, is a thousand millions. If you had before you a pile of silver dollars containing a million, and could count one every second, for eight hours every day, it would take you 35 days to complete the task. But suppose you undertook to count a thousand of those million-dollar piles—you would be at work eight hours a day for 35,000 days, or about 100 years.

Economical Physician.

Ambassador Wu Ting-fang was once, it is alleged, telling about a certain selfish politician. He said: "The man reminds me of a doctor of Shanghai. A mandarin came to this doctor for advice. He could not sleep, had no appetite, suffered a good deal from depression and nevertheless was taking on fat at an alarming rate. 'We'll soon put you in condition again,' said the physician. 'What you need is exercise, good, hard exercise. Four times a week you can come here and put in the morning polishing my floors.' 'But why not my own floors?' the mandarin inquired. 'Mine,' said the physician, 'are larger.'"

COMPLAINTS ABOUT PAINT.

The time to complain about paint is before the painter applies it. The man who puts up the money should not shirk the responsibility of choosing the paint. True, the painter ought to know paint better than the hanker, the professional man or the merchant. The trouble is, the house-owner too often deliberately hars the competent and honest painter from the job by accepting a bid which he ought to know would make an honest job impossible.

What is Pe-ru-na?

Is it a Catarrh Remedy, or a Tonic, or is it Both?

Some people call Peruna a great tonic. Others refer to Peruna as a great catarrh remedy.

Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Peruna a catarrh remedy than to call it a tonic?

Our reply is, that Peruna is both a tonic and a catarrh remedy. Indeed, there can be no effectual catarrh remedy that is not also a tonic.

In order to thoroughly relieve any case of catarrh, a remedy must not only have a specific action on the mucous membranes affected by the catarrh, but it must have a general tonic action on the nervous system.

Catarrh, even in persons who are otherwise strong, is a weakened condition of some mucous membrane. There must be something to strengthen the circulation, to give tone to the arteries, and to raise the vital forces.

Perhaps no vegetable remedy in the world has attracted so much attention from medical writers as HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS. The wonderful efficacy of this herb has been recognized many years, and is growing in its hold upon the medical profession. When joined with CUBEBS and COPAIBA a trio of medical agents is formed in Peruna which constitutes a specific remedy for catarrh that in the present state of medical progress cannot be improved upon. This action, reinforced by such renowned tonics as COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, CORYDALIS FORMOSA and CEDRON SEED, ought to make this compound an ideal remedy for catarrh in all its stages and locations in the body.

From a theoretical standpoint, therefore, Peruna is beyond criticism. The use of Peruna, confirms this opinion. Numberless testimonials from every quarter of the earth furnish ample evidence that this judgment is not over enthusiastic. When practical experience confirms a well-grounded theory the result is a truth that cannot be shaken.

Be Just to the Past.

"The advent of a thinker changed the world. Every geography became obsolete when Magellan furled his sails. Galileo, with a telescope, expanded the heavens. Humboldt set far and wide the change of season, climate, animal, vegetable, men and things," and sublimely said, "the universe is governed by law." These men made a new heaven and a new earth. With the advent of 1908, for the first time in the history of our little village we have four young bachelor ministers for our several churches. Now, for a few suggestions: I hope those young ministers will not cling to the old methods, but will adopt the new. I hope they will believe that the gospel is elastic enough to be adapted to new conditions. A century ago John Wesley preached a new gospel, that is it was new to his age. I hope they will do likewise. The ministers being so young don't be extreme orthodox gloom that prevailed on Sunday. Such minds cannot help being impressed with the change of our time. Let us be just with the past. Human thought is a strange thing. We can not tell its origin, explain its processes nor account for its conclusions. I hope they will talk every Sunday on live topics and then men will go to church. What happened centuries ago is nothing to us, what we want is to live now and here. Why should it concern us if there is two chapters in the Bible that are alike word for word?

Sometimes I am lost in thought, and then I stop long enough to express wonder and astonishment at the rapid increase of free thought. This child called liberty, born on New England's rocky coast, only a little more than a century ago, has grown to be a mighty giant in the United States. Do you, readers of the Recorder, know that in America there are 55,000,000 people that don't belong to any church. The Catholics claim a total of 14,000,000, leaving the Protestants about 6,000,000.

Dear readers, do your own thinking and you will know why it is not a christian country. The few think, the many believe. The less one thinks the more he believes. I have faith in the American people. I do not believe that they will ever submit to being crushed under a State religion. Now, I hope those young ministers will not abuse the skeptics and the moral man, and say they are fast going to hell. Those words shock the mind of a little child. Teach the child that the age of the cathedral is the age of night, and that the schoolhouse is the mother of dawn. Let us be just to the past. The church will change. It has already changed. The stream of progress has lifted it at last and is bearing it along. The older people are frantically throwing ropes to the shore and imploring some one to haul in the line and help them to tie up. The younger ones are saying, "Let it drift, the river is God's and so is the sea."

A Hot Time in the Old Town.

For an hour or so last night there was considerable excitement in Burlington, and as a result Earl Minor, colored, languishes in jail. Minor is one of four young negroes whose actions of late have made their presence very objectionable to quite a number of whites, and when told last night, he would better go home, he acted in a defiant manner, and was soon being pretty roughly handled by about half a dozen young men. Minor had a gun which was taken from him in the melee, and which it is said he tried to use on his assailants. Fortunately no person was hurt last night. This morning there are several notices in red ink posted about town, signed, "The Vigilance Committee," designating four negro boys and stating the charges against them, and intimating the penalty they may expect if they do not heed the warning.

Night riders got in their work, last Saturday after midnight, in Indiana, immediately opposite Belleview this county. Large tobacco plant beds belonging to Henry Kiser and Lawrence Turner on the Aurora and Rising Sun pike were destroyed. Graves were dug in one or two beds and the usual notice and matches were left. Blood hounds were brought from Indianapolis as soon as it was possible to get them. They took the track and followed it back into the hill country, but no arrests had been made up to the time of this writing, Monday morning. The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion,
PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $5 discount on the two seasons—paying only $35 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $20 will be collected.

This Stallion is a Mahoghany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone County as his colts speak for themselves. A ring of this Stallion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

Care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur. Positively no business done on Sunday. Parties breeding must follow up the season.

He is an exceptionally fine saddle horse, going all the saddle gaits in a very attractive manner. He is a quiet, fearless driver that has speed enough at either the trot or pace to make a race horse. He is a very handsome horse with a disposition that is perfect. We could take up more space in giving a long description and pedigree of his ancestors, and what they had done, but William Penn will prove for himself that he will transmit to his get the rare qualities that he possesses. Pasture furnished at $2 a month.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733

PROPERTY OF

High Vine Horse Company,

WALTON, KY.,

In the stud at the farm of W. Lee Gaines near Richwood, Ky., at $20 to insure live foal.

W. L. Gaines, President.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733,

Foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667. Grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730. Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2282, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1665. Second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60. Third dam, Maxey by Granger. Fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

A number of prominent citizens of the locality of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine saddle horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20.00 to insure.

High Vine was shown at various county fairs, last fall, and was a prize winner at all of them, taking first in the Sweepsteaks Saddle and Harness ring at Erlanger, and defeating the great Chancellor gelding at Sanders. He has proved to be a fine breeder, and his colts will be ready sellers at fancy prices. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and keeping.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from breeding of 1908, the time and place of the show to be announced later.

FROM CITY TO FARM

"Ye who listen with credulity to the whisperings of fancy; who pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope; who expect that age will perform the promises of youth, and that the deficiencies of the present day will be supplied by the morrow:—attend to the history of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia."

The Rural Swain

"Zeke crep' up quite unbeknown
An' peeked in thru' the winder,
An' thar sot Huldy all alone
'Ith no one nigh to hinder."

Cupid works overtimes in the country. A hard-worked little god he is indeed in the rural districts. If it be true or false that it is "love that makes the world go round," it is certainly a fact that the main world for the boy between 17 and 21 in the farm lands, is that delectable land of Heart's Desire, bounded on the east, west, north and south by the vision of his "best girl," and festooned by dreams of various circuses, band concerts, dances, Sunday school gatherings, "fish frys," picnics, barbecues, and buggy rides.

To see a boy emerge from the chrysalis stage of 16 or thereabouts, into the full-grown butterfly of 17 or 18, is something marvelous to behold, and instructive to contemplate. The transformation is invariably accomplished by means of a red-wheeled buggy. This really marks the time when he strikes off the shackles of boyhood and emerges into the fierce white light of country society. He becomes at once a target for the side-splitting witticisms of the country editor with his: "Jake Beaver seems to be driving out pretty regular towards the Osgood farm now. Sunday nights. Hey! Jake! When shall we send our congratulations?" This makes "Jake" feel as though he had drawn a capital prize at some grand lottery.

A boy without a buggy is absolutely not in the "running" at all. A great deal of "sparking" is done while on the road to the various entertainments, and Cupid in the country would be especially appropriate with wings, for the boys usually drive at breakneck pace, just to scare the girls and impress their sweethearts with their prowess as drivers. A boy who is driving "the old man's rig, feels about as important as if he was wearing his elder brother's old clothes, and every one knew it. But with a new buggy, with a heavy near-fur robe for winter, and a fancy blanket for summer, and a new buggy whip, and a "steppy" nag to leave the dust in "the other fellow's" face, the rural swain is in his element, and on the top wave of delight.

We saw a great deal of the evolution of the rustic cavalier at the farm. Saturdays and Sundays especially were his busy days, and the road in front of the house was scalloped with the print of his buggy wheels. You may be sure that the question of dress was a most particular point with him, and to save time and be strictly en regale, he always wore "patent leather" shoes. Soft hats were the style, black in the fall and winter, and light in the summer and spring. Some of the boys were prone to silk mufflers and elaborate ties, and were really gotten up regardless.

As is usual in such cases, there is always some one boy who is known as "the best dressed fellow in the township," and he is especially careful to live up to the reputation, even if it takes nearly all he can earn to appear with the latest novelties in dress. Some of the boys were variously the best dancers, the best boxers, the best swimmers, skaters, etc., but the most important member of society in the community, the "Ward McAllister" of the district, was the boy who was the best dancer and "caller-off" at the dances, for he could make or unmake either a boy or a girl who wanted to shine at these assemblages.

A curious feature of the "courting" which was carried on, was the gatherings of the young boys and girls who played games among themselves, but who did not dance. These embryo society events would often be attended by eager crowds of as many as 30 or 40 couples, most of them girls and boys of about 14 to 16, and they always went home early, and it was as if Cupid was merely making tentative arrangements for more serious affairs. Sometimes at these little "parties," as they were called, there would be an attempt to have a quadrille or two before the party broke up, some of the more ambitious of the girls wanting to try their wings before "budding" out at the regulation dances.

Then after a year or more you would see some of the boys and girls who attended these "parties" at dances, and you would know that nevermore would they be seen with the youngsters, but that they had fairly entered the arena of society, and were now escorted by the boys who owned their own buggies, and who were preparing to enter the doubtful state of matrimony in the immediate future.

Boys and girls marry early on the farms. A great many of them are married, the boys at 21, the girls at 18 or younger. A good many are married, boys before they are 20, girls at 16. This makes for early grandparentage, and extensive families. Courtship, therefore, is confined to a period of from two to three years, to five at the furthest. A year's courtship is a fairly long time and marriage and giving in marriage occupies but a brief space, all things considered, in a rural community.

When the staring and flaring circus advertisements first made their appearance on the dingy bill-boards in the neighboring towns, there was immediately great excitement in the community, and much talk about who was going with who, and what the girls were going to wear. There was quite as much heart-burning among the girls as there would be at any fancy-dress ball at Newport, and the amount of crisp sarcasm indulged in by the girls was as is usual in such cases made and provided. If the boys were short of money, there was the usual scramble to get some, and any chance to get out and do a little extra work was always snapped up in a hurry.

Circuses were always a long ways off, at some one of the larger towns, but such an event drew on the neighborhoods for 30 miles around. Those who went from the smaller towns usually could go by rail, but the main body of the circus goers went in buggies.

As we had seen a tiger or two in our time, these events did not excite us beyond our control, but we rather lost caste, I imagine, by our staying away from where "the monarch of the jungle" and the corrugated-hided rhinoceros disported themselves, and the bareback riders contorted. A long line of buggies, with a joyously anticipatory couple in each vehicle would pass the house in the early dawn, and if we happen to be up, we would be greeted always with "ain't you going to the circus?" A "liberal spender" among the swains was sure to make a hit, as it was supposed a "line" could be gotten on his liberality as a husband in that way. Red lemonade, peanuts, taffy, the concert after the show, dinner, the "flying dutchman," the side-shows, the fortune tellers—well, there were several ways in which the "nimble shilling" could be induced to change hands, and along about midnight the rigs would come trooping back, an occasional yell from some jolly Lothario notifying us of the passing of a home-bound couple.

The "band concerts" were always given at the towns where they boasted of a town band; and they were attended by the boys and girls for miles around. Those in our section were held invariably on Saturday nights. The band gathered at a little plank pavilion on one side of the public square opposite the courthouse, and there discoursed sweet music from about eight to ten p. m. The rural swains came in great droves, buggy-laden, and from all points of the county. They bought the girls supper at the hotels or restaurants, ice cream at the drug stores, and lemonade, peanuts and popcorn wherever these necessities could be found. There was visiting among the various neighborhoods, and a pernicious amount of reckless driving about at racing speed around the dusty streets and corners of the town.

Sometimes a boy who had been bitten with a desire to be "a bad man" would get into an argument with the police force, one in number, and be escorted to the town jail, there to ruminate until the next Monday morning, but usually there was very little trouble at the concerts. The music was the best they had, and if you did not like it, you could go home. We attended at least one "band concert" that I remember. The music was of the "catch-as-catch-can" order, Queensbury rules, classic holds barred, and every fellow for himself until the finale, when they were all supposed to unite for the end of the piece.

At the country dances the swains appeared in full force, dancing until daybreak, and with their best "bibs and tuckers." The dances were the most important of all rural functions, and by the time a fellow began to take a girl regularly to these events, there was no doubt but that he had been "hooked, played and landed," and that there was something shortly to be heard of in the matrimonial line. And yet, as everywhere, the course of true love went awry, and we would see some one of the boys driving swiftly past with a new girl on the seat beside him, and the girl he used to drive with appearing in public with another cavalier, and by these "presents" we knew that the silken cord had been loosed" and that Cupid had received another "back set."

The "fish frics" were where old and young congregated, but the boys and girls never missed these exciting occasions. They were usually held in some grove near a river or lake, and the men went early to catch enough fish to supply the dinner for all. The women brought huge baskets loaded down with everything possible in the way of good things to eat, and sometimes an organ would be brought along, a platform built, and to the music of fiddle and organ a dance would wind up the entertainment.

All boats in the vicinity would be pressed into service, and the woods would ring with the good times the folks were having. Impromptu swings would be installed, and the shrieks of the girls who were being hoisted heavenward shook the leaves in the branches above.

"Oh! George, tell them to stop,
This was the cry of Mariar;
But the louder she hollered
The harder they pushed,
And the swing went a little bit higher."

"Fish fries" broke up about dark, and the grind of wheels on the gravelly spots and the shouts of the returning couples soon died away along the road.

Barbecues were rather infrequent affairs, sometimes occurring when a noted political speaker was to make an address. They were held usually at the county fair grounds, or out in the woods somewhere, and whole beeves, sheep and hogs were roasted, and literally tons of eatables consumed. There was always something to spend money over, and while the boys and girls seldom enthused over the oratory, they did over the good things to eat. Picnics were also infrequent happenings.

The buggy ride is at present the piece de resistance of country courtship. It takes the couple away from the prying eyes of little "Bub" and "Sis," and it usually loosens the tongue of many a bashful swain. There is something for a boy's hands to do, and his feet are under cover. The awkwardness of hanging on to a chair and trying to think of something to say is gotten rid of, and the motion of the flying buggy cheers, but does not inebriate him. He is therefore more at an advantage, as to carrying on a conversation, and many a proposal is jolted out on a buggy-ride which otherwise might remain unspoken.

The fashion mainly in our neighborhood was for the girls to go bareheaded on these drives, and Sunday afternoon and evening the dull reverberation of wheels along the road, and the distant rumble over near-by bridges, told that Cupid's cohorts were bestirring themselves. In the winter time there was of course the shifting from buggies to sleighs and cutters, and even the old-time bob-sleds, when parties went out. Skating parties were also popular, and at all seasons they held the dances.

"Bridge whist," needless to say, was unknown. "Progressive euchre" an unknown quantity. "Receptions" there were none, and as for "tea-pouring" or any such lack-a-daisical performances, they were unheard of. Cupid depended mostly on the red-wheeled buggies and the country dances, and his success justified his selections. Of course the time-honored institution of "sparking" was not done away with. This interesting process, however, is mostly confined to Sunday nights, and may be, and usually is protracted until around Monday morning early, say close to one o'clock a. m. Sunday nights the lights in many a farm house shone out over the fields, and inside the houses the various couples talked over their dances, and parties, their neighborhood topics and matters of local interest, and scanned the family album, and gossiped and bantered one another.

And here, too, Cupid appeared behind the scenes, and, matrimonially inclined, wove the webs of mutual trust and confidence between the couples, and aided in unfolding the mystery of his divine art. Outside the stars gleamed, and the trees waved by still fields. Inside, perhaps the organ sounded softly, or a fire glowed in an old-fashioned fireplace or in a more modern stove.

After the "old folks" went to bed and there was nothing to disturb the quiet of indoors but the monotone of the two responding voices, Cupid betook himself to other times and spaces, confident that his spell was already progressing bravely.

In the country papers the "correspondents" from the various quarters of the township regularly reported all these different courting "bees," and the usual jokes were leveled at the swain when the paper made its appearance. Indeed, he would be somewhat disappointed if he thought that his comings and goings were to pass unrecorded, and generally had a retort ready for the greetings which he may be sure will follow his appearance in public.

And how quickly marriage follows on in the country! And be sure that whoever are invited to the wedding, all the country round knows of it. And the thoughtful groom, knowing the custom of the country, provides himself with various boxes of cigars, and the newly-made bride cooks plentiful quantities of toothsome viands, and together they sit down in their darkened home, awaiting with pleased expectancy the arrival of the band of neighbors intent on "shivareeing" them.

With a fearsome blast from shotguns, dinner-horns, sleigh-bells, cow-horns, dinner-bells, cow-bells, etc., and a terrific din made by beating a suspended circular saw with a sledge-hammer, the entertainment opens, and the "reluctant" couple are finally driven to open the doors and welcome "all hands." Cigars are passed around, and pies, sandwiches, doughnuts, cakes and other eatables disappear as if by magic, there is a great deal of hand-shaking and hearty good wishes from all assembled, and the bride and groom, and at last, with a parting salute from all artillery and noise-producing instruments, the serenaders file out and fade in the surrounding darkness.

And then the happy couple come out and sit on the porch and discuss those matters and things over which no one has special interests but themselves, and the katy-dids strike up while the stars shine down in an entirely friendly and disinterested manner, having seen these things before.

As usual, Cupid has won again.

GUNNESS VICTIM IS BURIED

HELGELEIN'S BODY INTERRED AFTER IDENTIFICATION.

Woman Herself Is Dead—Doubt Removed by Dentist's Examination of Jawbone Fragments.

Laporte, Ind.—The first of the Gunness victims to be interred with Christian rites was buried Friday night in Patton's cemetery, on the outskirts of Laporte. The corpse was that of Andrew K. Helgelein of Mansfield, S. D., the last man to meet his death in the trap to which Mrs. Gunness lured her victims.

The body was released for burial after Coroner Mack had received the reports of the Bertillon experts who have examined it and compared their findings with figures taken from the records of the Minnesota penitentiary at Stillwater.

"The identification of the piece of jawbone taken from the ruins of the Gunness farmhouse as a portion of Mrs. Gunness' skull, bears out most conclusively the contentions of the state regarding the identity of the bodies found in the cellar on April 28. It is the clinching bit of evidence which should set at rest the rumors that Mrs. Gunness had escaped."

This statement was made by Ralph N. Smith, prosecuting attorney, Friday night. It followed a report from Dr. C. P. Norton, a dentist, who found that the piece of charred bone presented characteristic conditions which he had observed while working on Mrs. Gunness' teeth.

David Havens, for whom both the defense and state [illegible] to have been searching, was found Friday at Gallien, Mich. He was one of the men who helped disinter the bodies from the ruins of the farmhouse and his departure from this vicinity had given rise to comment. He explained, in his communication to the city authorities, that he had merely gone to Michigan in search of work.

Another missing man also turned up in Charles Edmonds, a former employe of Mrs. Gunness, who was supposed to have been one of her victims. He has been working at a farm only a few miles from the Gunness place.

BANDITS TAKE AWAY $35,000.

Rob New Mexico Station—Are Pursued by Bloodhounds.

El Paso, Tex.—Pursued by men and bloodhounds, three bandits with $35,000 of loot in their possession fled through the rugged mountain passes north of French, a little station 80 miles from East Las Vegas, N. M., on the Santa Fe railroad, in an effort to escape the clutches of the law.

At French Thursday afternoon they broke down the door of the depot, bound and gagged the station agent and special guard, blew open the safe, took the money and rode away, leaving their victims helpless.

Bishop of Cleveland Dead.

Canton, O.—Rt. Rev. Ignatius F. Horstman, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Cleveland, was stricken with heart failure here Wednesday after having celebrated mass at St. John's church. He remained unconscious for some time but finally responded to stimulants. Later, however, he suffered another attack and died at 9:30 o'clock.

Church and School Burn.

Cleveland, O.—The church and school of the Immaculate Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary were completely destroyed by fire Tuesday. Church and school occupied the same building. The fire occurred during the afternoon recess and very few children were in the building at the time. They escaped from the building easily.

New York Firemen Dyed.

New Yorkers [illegible]ing in relays and temporarily blinded by spattering dye and dense smoke, the firemen Friday fought a fire in the factory of Holliday, Read & Sons, manufacturers of aniline colors and chemicals. Firemen who mounted the fire escape were met at the windows by choking volumes of smoke laden with dyes and those who fought their way into the building were covered from head to foot with a solution of colors which in some instances burned their hands and blinded their eyes.

SENATE PASSES ALDRICH BILL.

Substitutes It for Vreeland Measure Adopted by House.

Washington.—The Vreeland currency bill, which was passed by the house Thursday, was delivered to the senate Friday and at once sent to the committee on finance. Senator Aldrich promptly made a report from the committee substituting the Aldrich bill in an amended form for the house measure and in that form it was passed by the senate. This action threw the bill into conference, the house refusing to accept it.

The work of cleaning up legislation in the house preparatory to adjournment May 23, proceeded at a rapid pace. Both the military academy appropriation bill and the omnibus public building bill were passed, leaving of the supply bills only the general deficiency bill to be considered. In addition 325 private pension bills were put through.

A bitter and sensational attack on former Speaker Keifer of Ohio by his colleague, Gen. Sherwood, was a feature of the day's proceedings.

Washington.—The Vreeland currency bill, agreed upon by the Republican caucus, was put through the house Thursday under a special rule by a vote of 184 to 145. Fifteen so-called insurgents of the majority party voted with the Democrats, who went on record solidly against the measure.

The great sundry civil appropriation bill, carrying a total of about $120,000,000, was passed by the senate. This is the last of the large supply bills, and its passage places the senate squarely alongside the house in the consideration of the appropriation bills, and of the entire 14 leaves only the general deficiency and the military academy bills to be considered by either house.

JOHNSON IS NAMED.

Minnesota Democrats Stand by Their Favorite Son.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Democrats of Minnesota Thursday formally indorsed Gov. John A. Johnson as a presidential candidate and at the same time, by a vote of 772 to 166, refused to declare in favor of William Jennings Bryan as second choice.

The followers of Mr. Bryan did not carry out the threat which they had so often made during the last ten days—that they would bolt and hold a rump convention if their contests were defeated before the committee on credentials, or if they were not able to secure a partial indorsement of their leader. They made a sturdy fight for their man, and when they had been overwhelmingly defeated, remained quietly in their seats and made no motion to leave.

Illinois Sues for Fees.

Springfield, Ill.—Five suits in action of debt aggregating $1,750,000, and for damages of $150,000, were filed in the Sangamon county circuit court Friday by Attorney General William H. Stead and Gov. Charles S. Deneen against the sureties of former state treasurers and one former state auditor, for fees retained during their administrations for collecting interest on county, municipal and district bonds.

Encompassed by God's Hosts

Elisha Fears Not the Mighty Syrian Army.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Edson.)

SERMONETTE.

Lions of evil in the way of the Christian are always chained if he is walking the pathway marked out by God.

It takes the eye of faith to see that the resources and power of God are always greater than those of the enemy.

The forces of evil can never crowd in so close upon the soul as to prevent God's hosts coming in between.

A fact for the Christian to rest on: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them."

The peace and assurance that that fact brings: "Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear; though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident."

The unseen forces of God are ever on guard lest evil come nigh thy dwelling.

Syria's mighty army was but a puppet in tha hands of God. What fools God made of those mighty men of war as like sheep they were led into the trap set for them by the prophet. Surely God "bringeth the counsels of the heathen to naught: he maketh the devices of the people (evil) of nona effect."

How wonderful seems this story of God's hosts coming to the deliverance of Elisha, but it is no more wonderful than the experience which may come to every child of God. Positively no evil can befall the one who is abiding in Christ save that which is to the honor and glory of God and the furtherance of the Gospel. With what sublime courage did the realization of this fact fill the apostle Paul and send him fearlessly into every danger and every suffering, even unto death. It was the realization of this fact which enabled the Christ to turn upon Pilate as he boastad of his power to crucify him and calmly declare: "Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above."

The Christian who fears before evil not only dishonors God but proves traitor to the cause of Christ in which he has enlisted.

We need to offer the prayer of Elisha: "Lord, open thou mine eyes," in order that we may see the mighty forces which are at our command in the fight against sin in our own lives and the evil in the world.

Not only did God give sight to tha' young man ao that he could see tha invisible forces present to deliver, but he shut the eyes of Syria's mighty men so that they saw not whither their way took them. How limitless are the powers of our God.

THE STORY.

"MY MASTER, we needs must flee lest the king of Syria catch thee as a bird in a snare," excialmed the servant of Elisha one day as he rushed into the presence of the prophet. The young man was all out of breath with his running, and in broken sentences he went on to explain how he had chanced to be passing through the city's gate as two strangers had entered and had overheard them questioning those standing in the market place as to whether Elisha the prophet had come thither, saying that they had important tidings for him, and when they had received an affirmative reply, they made as though they would search thee out in the city, and then by another route they passed out of the city and hastened away.

And why thinkest thou that they were emissaries of the Syrians?" asked the prophet, calmly.

"Did not I follow them, and noting that they were making for the outer gate to the city, I hastened thither, and from a place of concealment near the gate I overheard them say as they passed out that Syria's army would not be long in sweeping down upon the city. But we have time to flee ere they come!" exclaimed the young man, his voice trembling in fear.

"Nay," rejoined the prophet, unmoved, "the Lord sent us to Dothan and here we shall remain till he hids us go. Cannot God save us from even [illegible] army of Syria?"

"Yes," reluctantly admitted the young man, his fears not by any means dispelled; "but how, if we remain here while the army descends upon the city? The people of the place will deliver thee into the hands of the Syrians to save themselves, and thou knowest how that the Syrian general has sworn that he will have thy life for the many times thou hast delivered the king of Israel out of his hands. It is for thee that he has been searching the land, and if he come thither how can thou hope to escape?"

"God will provide a way," was the confident response, and the prophet resumed his reading out of the scroll he held in his hand, and his servant turned dejectedly away. He was too loyal a follower of the prophet to flee from him. If he was to perish, he would perish with him, but he felt certain that to remain in Dothan meant to certainly fall into the hands of the Syrians.

"Perhaps the Lord will yet send my master away," thought the young man to himself as the afternoon wore away; "there is yet time."

But the prophet remained busy with his reading and gave no sign that he would do aught but remain where he was. The young man watched him with failing heart as the evening shadows began to fall. He noted the earnest look upon the prophet's face as he read along and then he saw a look of triumphant joy flash forth, and heard him exclaim under his breath;

"It is God's word. He will not fail!"

"Hath God sent thee word to go thither?" eagerly exclaimed the young man, breaking in upon the prophet's reverie.

"Nay, we shall remain here," and the prophet rolled up his precious scroll and placed it in the bosom of his mantle. He had been reading the Psalms of David, and had fallen upon that portion which read: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." The words seemed to flash forth a message to his own heart in its hour of need. It was enough. And as he went about his preparations for retiring for the night, after their simple meal was over, he kept repeating the words over softly to himself:

"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him to deliver them."

He felt as though God himself had spoken to him and, resting in the perfect assurance that God would not fail him, he went to sleep.

Not so with the servant. Little sleep came to quiet his troubled heart. In imagination he pictured the army of the Syrians gathering about the city, and as occasionally he would drop off into a fitful sleep he would dream that the whole army with spears before them were closing in upon them. And then he would start up and find that darkness still prevailed and that all was quiet about, and he would lie down again upon his couch. Thus the night passed, and just before the dawn was breaking he again dropped off into a troubled sleep. This time he dreamed that the rulers of the city had seized him and his master in answer to the demands of the Syrian general and had carried them to the walls of the city and then threw them off the high parapet into the hands of the waiting soldiers below. He awoke to find that the terror of his dream had caused him to throw himself from his couch with a start and he had landed upon the floor. He was all a-tremble and the dream seemed so real that he looked about to reassure himself that he was not in the midst of a hostile army. But no. In the light of the early morning he could see his master still sleeping over there as peacefully as when he had lain down the night before, and all without was quiet.

"But the army must be about the city!" he exclaimed to himself. "Oh, I know we cannot escape!" and, rushing forth, he strained his eyes to the rising hills without the city. With a wild cry he rushed back into the house and, falling down in terror by the side of his master's couch, he shook him rudely, crying the while that the hosts of the Syrians were upon them.

"Alas, my master! How shall we do?" he continued, as he led the way to the door and pointed to the horses and the chariots which filled the hillsides opposite.

"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him to deliver them," calmly spoke the prophet.

"Nay, rather does it seem to be the hosts of Syria which are encamped about us," was the almost impatient rejoinder.

"Ah, but God's hosts are there."

The young man looked at the prophet half in wonder, half in fear. Had his master gone insane that he should talk thus, and he so indifferent to the certain destruction which was before them? He saw the prophet lift his eyes to heaven. He saw his lips move. He knew he was in prayer. Then, as he ceased and opened his eyes again, he pointed in the direction of the Syrian hosts.

The young man turned his eyes in that direction, and the vision that met his astonished gaze made him fairly shout with joy, for behold! the hillsides between the Syrian hosts and the city were full of the horses and chariots of fire of the Lord.

Buoys Lighted by Acetylene.

The Brazilian minister of marine has interested himself in the subject of illuminated acetylene buoys for use on the coast. The type of buoys is that lighted by acetylene which will burn continuously for six months. The largest of the buoys is situated at the mouth of the Amazon and weighs complete about [illegible] tons. The use of 25 lights of this character and varying in size, is contemplated at different points along the ocean coast.

"Big Hat" Nuisance.

To remedy the "big hat" nuisance in Paris theaters the theater committee of the municipal council has decided to recommend drastic action. The committee proposes that every spectator shall have the right to request the police officer on duty in the theater to call for the removal of any hat which prevents an unobstructed view of the stage. If the wearer refuses to comply the officer may order her to leave the theater.

MAN WITH CAMERA EYES.

Detective Sheridan of New York Can Name 100,000 Men.

What would you say of a gentleman, who, having looked once into the face of each of those soldiers that made up the grand army which Napoleon took to Russia, and being told the soldier's name, would know him, name and face, two years, ten years, twenty years later? Think of a gentleman who could thus have called the muster roll of an army of 100,000 men. Such, however, would seem to be the fell power of eye and memory which belongs to Detective William P. Sheridan of Mulherry street, the "Man with the Camera Eyes;" and a low estimate declares that he has filed away in his brain, each tagged with the proper name, the pictures of no fewer than 100,000 men.

Criminals are forever changing their names and hiding their pasts. It is worth while to do so in New York, where the oft-convicted criminal gets finally a life sentence. Other detectives capture, but cannot recall them. That is the place where Mr. Sheridan dovetails in.—Broadway Magazine.

Stamp Signature.

"Once in so often," said a business man, "I get a letter, typewritten, of course—what other kind does one get nowadays?—with a signature unfamiliar to me, though the name is familiar enough. Under the name is an explanation, put on with a rubber stamp, running something like this: 'Dictated but not signed by Mr. ——, as he had left the office.'

"It's a commentary on the rushing age we live in. Naturally the sender had expected to sign the letter, but something more important intervened—a telegram or telephone message, maybe; or perhaps some one of the daily crises in affairs required his undivided attention. Anyway, off goes the letter with its evidence of haste, of there being more things to attend to than can be handled properly. I'm not saying that all this is not necessary. I have proofs, too many of them, that it is."

One on Doctor Lee.

Recently Rev. James W. Lee sent an oldtime friend a fine turkey.

"My!" exclaimed a critical youngster, "them drumsticks is big enough to heat a bass drum. Where did such a turkey come from?"

He was told that Dr. Lee had sent it.

"The same one on whose name is on the front page of the four big Bibles with the pictures in them?"

By that was meant the "Self-Interpreting Bible," edited by Dr. Lee.

A newly arrived youngster asked: "Where'd he come from?" meaning the turkey.

"The man who wrote the Bible sent it," was the quick reply of the little fellow.

"Why," said the questioner, "God wrote the Bible."

"Not the one we've got in our house! Dr. Lee wrote it, an' it pays so in print letters!"

Be Happy.

Be happy! Be happy in spite of everything. When a person is not happy he is a failure in life. To be happy is to be normal, and the normal people are those who come out on top in the long run. Nature and human nature detest abnormal things, and unhappy people are certainly abnormal people. Happiness is two things—a good habit and a spiritual state.

If an Advertisement Convinces You, Stay Convinced

When you read in this newspaper the advertisement of a manufacturer who has paid for the space used to convince you that it is to your interest to buy his goods, and you go to a dealer where such articles are usually handled for sale, do not let the dealer or any one of his clerks sell you something else which he claims is "just as good." If an advertisement convinced you, it was because of the element of truth which it contained.

INSIST ON GETTING WHAT YOU ASK FOR.

HER PROTECTOR.

"Here, nurse! Who'a that young chap that's always following you around? I he a beau of yours?"

"Oh, no, sir. Dat's Jimmie Hawkshaw, de detective. I hires him to protect me from kidnapers an' things!"

SEVERE HEMORRHOIDS

Sores, and Itching Eczema—Doctor Thought an Operation Necessary —Cuticura's Efficacy Proven.

"I am now 80 years old, and three years ago I was taken with an attack of piles (hemorrhoids), bleeding and protruding. The doctor said the only help for me was to go to a hospital and be operated on. I tried several remedies for months but did not get much help. During this time sores appeared which changed to a terrible itching eczema. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, injecting a quantity of Cuticura Ointment with a Cuticura Suppository Syringe. It took a month of this treatment to get me in a fairly healthy state and then I treated myself once a day for three months and, after that, once or twice a week. The treatments I tried took a lot of money, and it is fortunate that I used Cuticura. J. H. Henderson, Hopkinton, N. Y., Apr 26, 1907."

And the Moon Man Laughed.

They were jogging along the old road and cupid was so busy that the young man dropped the lines either side of the runabout. It was then that the wise old nag turned lazily around.

"What are you looking at?" queried the owl by the roadside.

"I am reading between the lines," laughed the old nag as she gave a horse laugh and showed her long yellow teeth.

FOUND THE CAUSE.

After Six Years of Misery and Wrong Treatment.

John A. Enders, of Robertson Avenue, Pen Argyl, Pa., suffered for six years with stinging pain in the back, violent headaches and dizzy spells, and was assured by a specialist that his kidneys were all right, though the secretions showed a reddish, brick-dust sediment. Not satisfied, Mr. Enders started using Doan's Kidney Pills. "The kidneys began to act more regularly," he says, "and in a short time I passed a few gravel stones. I felt better right away and since then have had no kidney trouble."

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

Indications are that farm help will be more plentiful this season, owing to the industrial depression in the cities and dull times with railroads. Doubtless many idle men will gladly accept work on the farms until such time as there is a brighter condition in the industrial world.

The Louisville Herald, the consistent and wide awake Republican paper in Louisville, is making a strong fight for the city printing, while the Republican officials in whose political success it was a large factor, are inclined to award the work to a half-breed. The Herald is entitled to and ought get the work.

Wool is 50 per cent lower than a year ago. That's rough on the farmer. Woolen goods are higher than in 25 years. That's fine on the trusts but rough on the consumer. The tariff was never higher on wool. Those Republicans who claim that the tariff makes good times for the farmer should explain why it enables the trusts to cut 50 per cent off of what he sells and collect war prices for what he buys. If a high tariff makes high wool one year why don't it make it just as high the next?—Paris Appeal.

The notices sent out from the postoffice department to the overseers of roads in this county over which rural mails are carried put people to thinking as well as to talking.

An irate bovine of the male purpuasion is the only thing to which manager Kirkpatrick will acknowledge supremacy on the ball ground, and he says if he had had a pitch fork he would have engaged in a regular Spanish bull fight the other day when a bull bantered him for a set-to on the diamond at the ball park, rather than come back to town to secure assistance to dispossess the animal that was excavating the center of the diamond.

James L. Clore, representing John A. Fisher's Sons, of Covington, was canvassing among the farmers in this part of the country again last week, and when he went home he had several good orders to turn into the house he represents.

The RECORDER was not able to mail the entire edition on time last week, neither was its appearance up to its usual standard, owing to the fact that the press being installed was not easy to regulate and the color was not gotten under control until the printing of the edition was about completed. It hopes to do better this week.

Lou Thompson and Chas. Tanner, of Florence neighborhood, passed through Burlington, one day last week, on the hunt of the farmers who wanted to purchase implements. They place quite a number of mowers and binders every season. They know their business pretty well having had several years experience.

By a recent decision of the court of appeals banks in Kentucky will be listed at 80 per cent on the total amount of their capital stock, surplus and undivided profits. That puts these institutions all on an equal footing and will prevent some of them making a better showing in their published statements than they do on the tax book.

As is usual big premiums on sweepstakes harness, saddle and allpurpose horses will be hung up by the North Kentucky Agricultural Association at its fair at Florence, again this year. A Californian's Luck.

"The luckiest day of my life was when I bought a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, writes Chas. F. Budahn, of Tracy, California. "Two 25c boxes cured me of an annoying case of itching piles, which had troubled me for years and that yielded to no other treatment." Sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

The school law enacted by the recent legislature goes into effect on June 15, yet by its provisions the trustees are not elected until August. This will cause some delay in the employment of teachers for the fall and winter schools unless the Superintendent can, in some manner, see his way clear to permit the present trustees to contract with teachers for the next term of the common school.

Elmer Conley, carrier on rural route No. 2, says the RECORDER is about, he fears, to get him in bad. The item that disturbed him is the one wherein it was said that the night the creek south of town was past fording he left his horse at W. J. Rice's, walked across the fields to the Florence pike, finally reaching home tired out and hungry. The statement that he was hungry is the one that is objectionable, as he says he got a splendid supper at Mr. Rice's before he struck out across the fields. He wants a "stand in" at Mr. Rice's, especially with the good cooks over there, as he may be water bound often in the future—about supper time.

The Louisville Times says: "It is a fact that tobacco men, in Louisville, who, six months ago said there was no chance for the growers to win, are now talking in a different strain and admit that it looks like the American Tobacco Company will, sooner or later, be compelled to take over the pooled burley tobacco. While the company is said to have an immense stock on hand it has not a supply sufficient to run all its factories and various branches of business for two years. An official of the American Tobacco Company here is known to have said within the past week that the gravest trouble ahead of the company was the cutting out of the 1908 crop and that the growers had taken the most effective track to win their fight."

Col. William Grimsley, who holds forth on the Ohio river at the mouth of Big Bone creek, spent last Thursday in Burlington. The Colonel is very much interested in having a bridge constructed across Big Bone creek at the point known as the fish trap. As a bridge there would span the line between Boone and Gallatin counties, each county would contribute its proportional share of the cost, and when the proposition to build the bridge was sprung it was understood that Gallatin county was very willing to shoulder her portion of the burden, and her fiscal court appointed commissioners to meet Boone's commissioners on the site of the proposed structure. The commissioners met and Colonel Grimsley says that immediately thereafter Gallatin county declined to proceed any further in the matter, but he is of the opinion that steps will be taken to require Gallatin county to bear her proportion of the cost, and that the bridge will be built.

Thirty days in jail and $50 fine is the penalty Earl Minor, colored, drew as a reward for the part he played in the small riot in Burlington on the night of the 12th inst. He will pay the $50 fine by laying in jail which will make his period of imprisonment 55 days. Minor was fortunate in that he escaped without being badly hurt, as he had been about town several days "carrying a chip on his shoulder," which he began to think no one had the courage to knock off, but as is always the case when a person is hunting for trouble it is found if the search is persisted in. Following is a copy of the several notices that were posted in Burlington the night of the trouble:

NOTICE!

Special notice to the following named persons:

1st.—Earl Minor.
2nd.—Ira Sanders.
3rd.—Clarence Webb.
4th—Homer Minor.

Sec. 1—Quit congregating on the street corners and in the stores—the proprietors of said stores do not want you loafing and lounging about their place of business.

Sec. 2.—Quit eyeing white women and girls as they pass along the streets. Remember this has caused many a negro to dangle from the end of a rope.

Sec. 3.—Section two is for the special benefit of said Earl Minor and Ira Sanders.

Sec. 4.—This is the first and last warning—comply with the above named orders or suffer the consequence.

The White Narcissus.

"If I could only live among beautiful things as you do, I believe I could be good!" exclaimed a tired farmer's daughter to a city friend, whose two rooms were filled with photographs and books. The friend could but make the well-worn explanation that the sky outside the kitchen window is actually more beautiful than the photograph of Corot's vision of a sky, and that the fields, green or white, and the flowers and birds are more truly poetry than the verses of Wordsworth or Keats. Beneath the cry of the soul hungry for beautiful things is the desire for real ownership, says Youth's Companion. The cloud may be seen by a thousand eyes, but it escapes the hand which would hold it. Meadow and stream in the picture bring their message of beauty with deepened emphasis, all the year round, because they are fairly captured by the artist. Our civilization has yet to learn from the reflective east that the luxury of beauty is a necessity for human life. Without it the spirit starves, and suffers from restlessness and irritation and inefficiency, as one suffers from insufficient physical nourishment. Mohammed put into words a great symbolic truth when he said to his disciples, "If any man have two loaves, let him sell one and buy some flowers of the white narcissus; for the one is food for the body and the other is food for the soul."

Cheering Reading.

Records of averted disasters do not get the attention that is given to disasters unaverted, but they make more cheerful reading and lift one's faith in human nature. The other day a Long Island Sound steamer caught fire, and there might have been another horror like the burning of the General Slocum. But there was no loss of life, no panic. The pilots kept the steamer steady, the captain fought the fire in orderly manner, summoned help, and transferred 600 passengers to another steamer. At a children's entertainment in a New York church gauzy draperies took fire, flames shot to the ceiling and burning bits fell on the children. The audience sprang up, but the little king of the play justified his regal part. He cried, "What are you all scared about? It's just a little fire." Meanwhile a boy at the organ was playing "Onward Christian Soldiers." During the flurry he did not miss a note. Two men stamped the fire out. Others opened the doors and started to marshal the women and children. Most of the people kept their places, and there was no panic.

The recent burning of the town hall and other buildings in Guayaquil, Ecuador, with a view to check the progress of the buhonic plague, suggests that many a structure in another place invites annihilation for similar purposes. There are "tuberculosis blocks" in New York city, tenements so saturated with the disease that an occupant is almost certain to be stricken. In Paris the municipal council has just discovered that several hundred dwellings in the working-class districts are dangerous for the same reason. There are notorious "cancer houses" in Lincolnshire, England; there is at least one "plague tenement" in Bombay, India; and it is recorded that Amber, the ancient capital of the Indian state of Jaipur, had to be dispeopled and deserted because it was so completely infected with leprosy. To all such dwellings of death the Guayaquil treatment should be applied. Any municipality could better afford to pay the cost of replacing a disease-ridden building than to let it stand and take a perpetual toll of lives.

Under the law, immigrants who are admitted are on probation for three years. If in that time they become public charges, commit misdemeanors, or profess anarchy, they may be deported. The department of commerce and labor intends to make practical application of this law, with the help of the police, to anarchists and others who pass the entrance examinations and later turn out badly.

Lord Cromer's book on Egypt, which has recently been published, is a great work, like Grant's "Memoirs" and Caesar's "Gallic War." When men of action tell in simple language what they have done, they enliven history and give sinews to literature. Lord Cromer's work has won him the nickname, "The Great Prose Consul."

Two young British lords are to be sent to school at an American university. Perhaps prudent British peers are thinking it wise to send their sons to grow up with the country and catch the heiresses before other scions of nobility have a chance to see the heiresses first.

The greatest heat is never found on the equator, but some ten degrees to the north, while more severe cold has been registered in northern Siberia than has been found near the Pole.

SITUATION IS MUCH IMPROVED

ON MANY OF THE LINES OF THE CLEVELAND STREET CAR COMPANY.

ONLY A FEW DISTURBANCES MADE

President Mahon Holds Conference With Executive Committee--Developments Do Not Show Whether Arbitrators Will Meet With Success.

Cleveland, May 18.—Aside from a few minor disturbances the street car situation Sunday bore no evidence of violence, while the service given by the Municipal Traction Co. was very much improved.

A police officer rode on each car and screens of heavy wire were provided around the motorman's vestibule.

Only one instance of a serious attempt to attack the crew of a car was reported, when a crowd of boys and men sent a volley of stones and sticks at a Miles avenue car.

Some of the missiles found their mark and the conductor drew a pistol, the police say, firing one shot. No one was hit.

On many of the lines the company inaugurated the usual full quota of runs that are in effect on Sunday. In the business section quiet prevailed and no crowds gathered.

At the bars in the outlying sections there were gatherings of men and boys, who jeered the cars as they came in or departed.

Vice President Behner, of the Railway Men's union, visited nearly every car barn Sunday to note the situation. He reported everything quiet.

International President W. D. Mahon, of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes, arrived here Sunday from Chicago. He went at once into conference with Vice President Behner and members of the local executive committee. He heard detailed reports of the strike and what progress was being made toward a settlement.

Mr. Mahon also met Joseph Bishop and Judge Selwyn N. Owen, of the state board of arbitration. The state arbitrators still are endeavoring to have the union and President Dupont, of the Municipal Traction Co., come to some understanding.

President Mahon said he did not expect to take any active part in the strike and that he would return to Chicago Monday night.

In the meantime he will advise with the leaders and leave the actual management in the hands of Mr. Behner.

Whether the arbitrators will meet with any success in getting the heads of the union and the railway company together was not apparent Sunday.

SHE WAS.

Jewelry Thief Caught By Detective's Knowledge of Her Headgear.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 18.—To her persistent refusal to wear the head gear so dear to the hearts of most women, Mrs. Blanche Green owes her arrest on a charge of having stolen jewelry valued at about $1,000 and $70 in cash from the home of Cashier Shivers of the local bank at Woodbury, N. J.

The arrest was made by Detective Williams, of the city hall staff, who had been guided in his search by the knowledge that the woman wanted never wore a hat. Saturday night he was standing at Board and South streets when a number of women and girls, who appeared to have been at a party, came along.

There was one who wore no hat and Williams jumped to the conclusion that the young woman must be the one he was looking for. She was.

Canoe Capsized; One Drowned.

Annapolis, Md., May 18.—Midshipman Arthur Linford Lucas, of Cleveland, O., was drowned here Sunday afternoon by the capsizing of a small paddling canoe, in which he and a companion, Midshipman Carl D. Hibbard, of Northfield, Minn., were taking a pleasure trip. Midshipman Lucas was a son of W. Lucas, 1622 Crawford road Cleveland, and stood No. 8 in a class of 215 members at the last annual examination. He would have graduated with high honors on June 5.

Took Revenge on Wife Beater.

Hadar, Neb., May 18.—A score of citizens led Otto Huebner to the public square and administered an old-fashioned blue-law whipping for beating his wife. He was stripped to his undershirt and tied to a post. Half a dozen tough switches were worn out on his back. He took oath not to beat his wife again. Nearly all of the women of the place witnessed the thrashing.

Receiver For Insurance.

Kansas City, May 18.—Judge John C. Pollock, in the United States district court, has appointed John S. Jones, a Kansas City banker, receiver for the Great Western Life Insurance agency.

Passengers Missing.

Nassau, May 18.—The Greek steamship Cyclades foundered on May 13 of Berry islands. The captain and 15 of the crew arrived here Sunday. Four passengers and six of the crew who took to a lifeboat are missing.

SPERRY'S FLAG IS HOISTED

HE TAKES COMMAND OF THE ATLANTIC FLEET.

Rear Admiral Thomas Ends His Active Naval Career—Did Good Work on Cruise.

San Francisco. — Rear Admiral Charles Stillman Sperry, returned within six months from a mission of peace as one of the American delegates to the conference of The Hague, assumed command Friday of the strongest force of first-class fighting ships assembled in the history of the nation.

Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas, who succeeded Rear Admiral Evans as commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, hauled down his flag at 10:40 a. m. from the truck of the Connecticut, and ten minutes later Admiral Sperry was received on board the flagship with the salutes and other naval honors befitting his position.

Although he will not retire until October next, Admiral Thomas Friday ended his active naval career of nearly 47 years. He served as second in command to Admiral Evans during the recent trip of the Atlantic fleet, and by reason of the illness of the commander-in-chief had to assume all of the social and official duties incident to the call of the battleships at the various South American ports. To Admiral Thomas' loyalty to the commander-in-chief, to his tact, personality and graciousness of manner the officers of the fleet attribute much of the diplomatic success which attended the cruise upon the Atlantic to the Pacific. The calls made upon him were calculated to wear out a much younger man, but with tireless energy and at the expense of practically all personal rest and comfort, Admiral Thomas attended all the functions where his presence was required.

Under orders from Admiral Sperry, the bronze battleship target practice trophy was transferred from the battleship Illinois of the Atlantic fleet to the armored cruiser Maryland of the Pacific fleet.

DECIDES FOR ROOSEVELT.

Court Declares President Had Right to Dismiss a Negro Soldier.

New York. — The right of President Roosevelt summarily to dismiss a negro soldier of the Twenty-fifth infantry for alleged participation in the riot at Brownsville, Tex., was sustained Friday by Judge Hough in the United States district court.

Oscar W. Reid, the soldier, sued the government to recover $122 as wages from the date of his dismissal to the expiration of his enlistment. District Attorney Stimson contended that the president had a right to dismiss the soldier. Judge Hough sustained this contention and directed a judgment in favor of the government.

Resist Freight Rate Increase.

Chicago. — Delegates from 50 commercial organizations, representing most of the trade interests of the east and middle west of this country, Friday in conference at the Congress hotel took decisive action to prevent the proposed increase in freight rates by the railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio river. As a result of the day's work the leaders among the business men feel that the move of the railroads to saddle an additional $100,000,000 in freight charges on the shippers of the territory described has been checkmated.

Mrs. Metsker Is Acquitted.

Cassopolis, Mich.—The acquittal of Mrs. Christina Metsker of South Bend, Ind., of the charge of murdering Carleton Morgan of South Bend, at three o'clock on the morning of April 10 outside the home of Mrs. Mae Green in this city, was the occasion of an unprecedented demonstration in court late Friday. Deaf to warnings and threats of arrest, the crowd cheered and clapped hands and sang. Several hundred people escorted Mrs. Metsker to the depot.

Round About the State

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

DEATH ENDS CAREER

Of Edward P. Farrell, One of Kentucky's Most Brilliant Lawyers.

Lexington, Ky.—Edward P. Farrell, one of the most brilliant attorneys at the Lexington bar, a forceful speaker, and noted at home and abroad for his ready wit and sarcasm, died of Bright's disease.

Mr. Farrell was 46 years of age, and leaves a wife and three daughters. He was educated at Georgetown university, Washington, D. C., and began his career as a lawyer and politician as private secretary to the late Senator James B. Beck. He served a term as commonwealth's attorney for this district, but prosecution was distasteful to him, and ever afterward he took employment only on the side of the defense.

He was uncommonly successful in many of the most important cases in this state the past 20 years. He was one of counsel for Madeline Pollard in the famous Pollard-Breckinridge case at Washington, and was the leading counsel for the late James Hargis when he was acquitted here.

LETTERS OF APPEAL

Justify Troop Movement in Bracken, Says Adjutant General's Office.

Frankfort, Ky.—Scores of letters have been received by Gov. Willson and Adjt. Gen. Johnston giving accounts of threatening letters, warning notes, and with each of these letters comes an appeal for protection. It is said that the newspaper correspondents there have been threatened with whipping if reports of the raids of night riders are sent out, and it was upon these appeals that the troops were sent to Bracken. Adjt. Gen. Johnston said that they were sent for the purpose of protecting the men, women and children in that county against the lawless bands, and, if possible, to arrest some of the men guilty of night riding.

The names of the growers and buyers who have been threatened and whipped will not be disclosed by the adjutant general's office, as they requested their names not to be given out when they sent the letters.

Capital Increased.

Louisville, Ky.—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Bourbon Stock Yards Co. an increase of $400,000 in the capital stock was authorized. No mention was made of a merger with the Central Stock Yards Co., though this has been planned for some time. Minority stockholders in the Central will file a suit for injunction against the merger if it is attempted.

Mayer's Hammer Causes Three Deaths

Louisville, Ky.—John Mayer's hammer has been responsible for three deaths here. Mayer hit his brother-in-law, Henry Dietrich, on the head with the hammer some weeks ago, killing him. Mayer's father dropped dead as a result of the shock. Mrs. Dietrich passed away from sorrow occasioned by the murder of her husband. Mayer was acquitted in the courts on plea of self-defense.

Resistance Promised.

Lexington, Ky.—Sixty-five soldiers, parts of Lexington and Frankfort companies of militia, Second regiment, left for Maysville, from where they went to Bracken county to investigate night rider troubles. There is feeling against the soldiers in Bracken county and the sheriff says he will arrest the soldiers if they attempt to make arrests without warrants.

After Raiders.

Maysville, Ky.—It is declared here that the soldiery, consisting of two companies, will place under arrest at least 200 alleged night riders. The names of the men are in the hands of the military authorities, who state that the men, when arrested, will be placed in the jails at Lexington, Frankfort and Maysville.

Diamond On Skeleton.

Danville, Ky.—When excavating for a large business house on the property of Richard Morrissy, workmen uncovered a human skeleton, on the third finger of which was a large diamond ring. The body was in a brick vault, but there was no evidence of a coffin.

State Expected To Investigate.

Frankfort, Ky.—M. H. Thatcher, state inspector and examiner, will investigate the affairs of the Frankfort penitentiary probably within a short time, and will probe into the charges made by Geo. Chinn, formerly warden.

Maj. Robbins Dead.

Augusta, Ky.—Maj. J. W. Robbins, of the Covington revenue service, died at his home here after several weeks' illness. Maj. Robbins was a veteran of the civil war.

To Make Latonia Track Dry.

Covington, Ky.—Latonia citizens are making a strenuous fight to prevent the sale of liquor at the race track when the spring meet opens. A remonstrance was filed against granting of license to Thomas Cody.

Companies Wouldn't Pay.

Louisville, Ky.—A. R. Roberts and the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. filed suit against the Dixie and the Globe and Ruttgers Fire Insurance Cos. for $1,000 in each suit, for warehouses destroyed by night riders.

AS A LICENSE.

Blue Grass Gamblers Regard Fines, Says Grand Jury.

Lexington, Ky.—After being in session 29 days the Fayette county grand jury made its report to Judge Parker in the circuit court, and was discharged. Forty-eight indictments for various offenses were found. The feature of the report is the recommendation that a campaign should be made against gambling.

"We are satisfied from our investigation that gambling is on the increase in this city, and that there are almost as many gambling places as there are saloons.

"We find that men prominent in affairs, whose example and influence should be for good morals, are almost openly engaged in this practice every day. The persons convicted seem to regard the payment of a fine as a license to continue in the business."

"PREACHER" KINNEY

Causes Warrants To Be Issued For Men Who, 'Tis Said, Whipped Him.

Augusta, Ky.—Upon complaint of Lewis Kinney, County Judge Bradford, at Brooksville, issued warrants charging J. W. Devaughn and Frank Higa with being members of the band of masked men who appeared at Kinney's home on the night of May 4 and whipped him. Judge Bradford gave the warrants to Deputy Sheriff Thomas Cummins, with instructions to "go alone and make the arrests and not let the soldiers be present."

Lewis Kinney is a farmer and stock breeder during the week and on Sundays conducts revival services on his farm, being known as "Preacher" Kinney.

Col. Lillard declares that he has evidence upon which to swear out warrants for more than 20 "night riders."

Covington Gets Next Encampment.

Louisville, Ky.—Toward the close of the state encampment here of the G. A. R. a message of cheer was read from the Woman's Relief Corps. The message was that the women were ready to do as much as they have in the past for the benefit of the tottering men of the old federal army. Covington was chosen over Owensboro and Richmond for the next convention, winning 95 to 20. Maj. A. T. Wood, Kentucky pension agent, was defeated for a delegateship to the national encampment.

Honored Willson.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson was given an enthusiastic welcome by the Harvard graduates when he arrived in Philadelphia to attend the meeting of the Associated Harvard clubs. In a letter to McKenzie Todd, private secretary, the governor said he was met at the train by a large number of Harvard men, who cheered and sang "My Old Kentucky Home" in his honor.

Kentucky Senators Divided.

Washington. — Senators McCreary and Paynter are at odds over the creation of a federal court at Jackson, Ky. Paynter is supporting the bill and McCreary is opposing it. Paynter called up the bill for action and McCreary requested that it go over. It went over.

Damage Claim Denied.

Louisville, Ky.—The administrator of J. P. Kent, who had sued the Louisville & Eastern railroad and the Louisville Railway Co. for $25,000 in damages because of the death of the decedent, was denied damages by a jury in Judge Field's court.

Rifled the Mails.

London, Ky.—Floyd Lyttle, formerly assistant postmaster at Elktawah, Breathitt county, was found guilty on two counts on an indictment in the United States district court charging him with rifling the mails passing through the Elktawah office.

Ready For 'Em.

Foster, Ky.—John Jett, a tobacco grower of this place, is determined to run his farm as he sees fit, and it is said his house is a regular arsenal. It is also said he has dynamite about his place, and is well prepared for any intruders.

Charged With Bootlegging.

Paducah, Ky.—Word reached here that the Lyon county grand jury adjourned without indicting any of the men charged with night riding, but it did indict Sanford L. Hall, on three counts, for selling liquor without a license.

Thinks Riders Are After Him.

Lancaster, Ky.—James Merford, a young farmer, who lives near here, is a raving maniac as a result of reading the stories of the lawless deeds of night riders. He thinks the riders are after him.

Troops At Hopkinsville.

HOUSE WORK

Thousands of American women in our homes are daily sacrificing their lives to duty.

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. A female weakness or displacement is often brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden.

It is to these faithful women that comes as a boon and a blessing, as it did to Mrs. F. Ellsworth, of Mayville, N. Y., and to Mrs. W. P. Boyd, of Beaver Falls, Pa., who say:

"I was not able to do my own work, owing to the female trouble from which I suffered. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully, and I am so well that I can do as big a day's work as I ever did. I wish every sick woman would try it.

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

STOPPED TO SALUTE HOGS.

One Man at Least Grateful to the Source of His Wealth.

"The Interpreter" in the American Magazine says of a respectful father he once knew:

"Isn't it time we took off our hats and thanked this pleasant land for the good things it has done for us by going on patiently covering up our blunders, rectifying our mistakes, and responding cheerfully to our every intelligent effort?

"I knew a man out west who had the right idea about it. His father had made a great fortune in the pork packing business. The heir was not puffed up by his millions. Long after he had grown accustomed to the money and might reasonably be expected to look down on butchers, if in walking in the country with his children they saw a drove of hogs on the road, he would make his little boys stand at attention and take off their hats. 'I want them to respect the sources of wealth,' he said."

His Elusive Memory.

Employer—William, did that man who called to see me while I was out leave his name?

Shaggy-Haired Office Boy—Yes, sir; his name is—is—well, the last part of it is "shaw."

Employer—What's the first part of it?

Office Boy (making a strenuous effort to recall it)—Well, sir, it's either Grim, or Hawk, or Hen, or Brad, or Fan, or Ker, or Rick, but to save my bloomin' life, Mr. Townsend, I can't remember which.

FIT THE GROCER

Wife Made the Suggestion.

A grocer has excellent opportunity to know the effects of special foods on his customers. A Cleveland grocer has a long list of customers that have been helped in health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

He says, regarding his own experience: "Two years ago I had been drinking coffee, and must say that I was almost wrecked in my nerves.

"Particularly in the morning I was so irritable and upset that I could hardly wait until the coffee was served, and then I had no appetite for breakfast, and did not feel like attending to my store duties.

"One day my wife suggested that inasmuch as I was selling so much Postum there must be some merit in it and suggested that we try it. I took home a package and she prepared it according to directions. The result was a very happy one. My nervousness gradually disappeared, and today I am all right. I would advise everyone afflicted in any way with nervousness or stomach troubles, to leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

CHIEF TOPICS AND SPEAKERS AT CONFERENCE FOR CONSERVATION OF NATURAL RESOURCES

Natural Resources Conference

At the White House May 13, 14, 15

Topics Under Discussion

Some of the Chief Talkers

Ingenious news Photograph, showing at a glance a most remarkable, epoch-making conference, the first of its kind in the history of civilization.
In the center, Mr. Roosevelt. In the inner circle about him, beginning at the top and passing from left to right, are Speaker Cannon, Forestry Chief Pinchot, Postmaster General Meyer, John Hays Hammond, president of the American Institute of Mining Engineers; Senator La Follette, Senator Knox and Secretary Root. In the outer circle, beginning at the top, John Mitchell, Seth Low, Samuel Gompers, Secretary Cortelyou, Gov Folk of Missouri, Justice Moody of the supreme court, Gov. Haskell of Oklahoma, Gov. Curry of New Mexico, William J. Bryan, Andrew Carnegie, James Wilson, secretary of agriculture; Gov. Hughes and Gov. Johnson of Minnesota. On the margin are pictured mining, cattle raising, railroading, farming, river transportation, manufacturing, building material and forestry.

When the conference of governors of states and men distinguished in political life of the nation met at the White House in Washington, May 13-14-15, in behalf of the preservation of the country's natural resources, the strangest, and, perhaps, the most important convention ever held in the capitol was inaugurated.

Among those invited to attend by President Roosevelt himself were members of the cabinet, judges of the supreme court of the United States, governors of all the states in the union, including the executives of Alaska and Hawaii, and Andrew Carnegie, William Jennings Bryan, James J. Hill, the railroad magnate; John Mitchell, the labor leader, and prominent scientists and business men from all over the country.

Political differences, opposing lasnes of national questions and business rivalry were laid aside to discuss the ways and means of conserving the natural resources of the country.

President Roosevelt opened the convention with an exposition of the why and wherefore of the conference and an outline of his views of the matter. While on his trip down the Mississippi river last fall, with the governors of 16 states, under the auspices of the Inland Waterways association, he is said to have obtained the nucleus of the idea which resulted in the present conference.

It will be remembered that President Roosevelt on that trip expressed the opinion that the question of the conservation of the natural resources of the country was of more importance than the regulation of the rate question.

A number of papers, prepared at the president's request, were read and discussed.

James J. Hill, the railroad king, spoke on "Relations Between Rail and water Transportation." His paper dealt with such subjects as the growth of rail transportation, its distribution and extent of systems, cost and present value, traffic and earning capacity, estimated cost of the cultivation of trees for railroad ties and their preservation, increasing railways to meet prospective requirements, etc. Regarding water transportation Mr. Hill dealt with its cost, present facilities, relation to rail transportation, pressing lines of development, regulation by business interests or by law, influence of cheapened transportation on production, etc.

Under the general head of land resources, Prof. T. C. Chamberlain of the University of Chicago, in a paper on "Soil," dealt with its origin, natural products, progressive enrichment, effects of cultivation, erosion, and general estimates of loss to the country through needlessly reduced fertility and decreased production.

The question of "Forests" was expounded by R. A. Long, president of the Long-Bell Lumber company of Kansas City, Mo., who explained their early use and destruction, present extent and value, rate of consumption, estimated duration, prospective prices of forest products, the influence of forests on soil, ground water and springs, rivers, floods and low water, waterway improvement and navigation, and the relation between forest control and crop production, commerce and population.

Dr. George W. Koher of Washington in a paper on "Sanitation" spoke of the development of systems of community water supply, relation between purity and clarity of water for community supply, mortality and disease due to impure water, and the action required in the interests of the public health.

"Reclamation," by Hon. George C. Pardee of Oakland, Cal., dealt with the extent of arid and semi-arid regions, development and extent of irrigation, growth of concepts concerning water-rights and water as a basis of property, influence of irrigation on production, commerce, population, consumption of water and other resources, reclamation and stream control by drainage, and extent of swamp and overflow lands and increased value available by drainage, protection and flood prevention.

Judge Joseph H. Carey of Cheyenne, Wyo., in a paper on "Land Laws," dealt with their early policy of disposal, transfer under state charters, especial grants, etc., development, effect of creation of national parks, forests and other reserves, advantages of making this a nation of homes and home owners, state and federal action required, etc.

Hon. H. A. Jastro, president of the National Live Stock association of Bakersfield, Cal., delivered a paper on "Grazing and Stock Raising." He treated on the development of the industries in the United States, their extent and value, grazing in the arid and semi-arid regions, methods and results, comparative cost and profit and relation between stock raising and commerce.

Under the general head of mineral resources, Dr. I. C. White, state geologist of West Virginia, in speaking of mineral fuels, dealt with the coal fields of the United States, methods of mining, losses in mining, estimated duration of present methods of mining and use, improvements in mining and use, connection with coal production and transportation, relation between coal and other resources, petroleum and rock gas and possible substitutes for fuel.

Andrew Carnegie spoke on "Ores and Related Minerals," their production in the United States, price, estimates of available quantity, duration of supply, processes of mining and quarrying and probable consequences of exhaustion of standard minerals.

On May 12 President Roosevelt entertained at dinner the cabinet, the members of the supreme court, the governors and the other more distinguished guests. Gifford Pinchot, chief of the forestry division, gave a reception to the governors and the Inland Waterways association on May 14. On the afternoon of May 15 Mrs. Roosevelt gave a garden party on the White House grounds for all the delegates to the convention. At the various hotels in Washington arrangements were made for smaller receptions and dinners.

All of the governors who accompanied President Roosevelt on his Mississippi river trip last fall were present. They are: Comer of Alahama, Broward of Florida, Deneen of Illinois, Cummins of Iowa, Hock of Kansas, Blanchard of Louisiana, Folk of Missouri, Shelton of Nebraska, Cuny of New Mexico, Burke of North Dakota, Frantz of Oklahoma, Chamberlain of Oregon, Davidson of Wisconsin and Brooks of Wyoming.

That the conference attracted world-wide interest was evidenced by the fact that many of the foreign diplomats at Washington followed the affairs of the convention closely.

Those who were in close touch with the conference arrangements declare they have never known another movement which has been greeted with such quick and enthusiastic popular approval.

An indication of public opinion was afforded by the great mass of correspondence which poured into the White House on this subject. Organizations of all sorts expressed realization of the greatness of the enterprise.

That conservation of national resources is nothing about which the political parties wish to raise an issue is indicated by the attitude of the Democratic leaders. Both William J. Bryan and Gov. John A. Johnson, leading candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, wrote to President Roosevelt expressing their approval. Equally emphatic indorsement, it is understood, has been voiced by Grover Cleveland. Mr. Bryan's letter to the president read: "I greatly appreciate your kind invitation and shall take pleasure in attending the conference on the conservation of natural resources. I am, I beg to assure you, in hearty sympathy with the purpose of the conference, and I have no doubt that the discussion of the subject will be very helpful to us all."

Gov. Johnson's letter read: "To assure you that I heartily agree with your conclusion that the conservation of the natural resources of our country presents a problem demanding the best thought of our times is superfluous. We have been exploiting our resources with no thought of the morrow, and the claims of posterity upon us should certainly be taken into account."

In his letter of invitation to the conference President Roosevelt said:

"There is no other question now before the nation of equal gravity with the question of conservation of our natural resources, and it is the plain duty of us who, for the moment, are responsible, to take inventory of the natural resources which have been handed down to us, to forecast the needs of the future, and so handle the great sources of our prosperity as not to destroy in advance all hope of the prosperity of our descendants."

The need for such a conference is illustrated by a few facts vouched for by investigators. Government experts say that between 300,000,000 and 400,000,000 tons of coal were lost in 1908 by penny wise and pound foolish methods, and that the total so wasted since the beginning of the industry is 50,000,000,000 tons. Millions upon millions of horsepower are going to waste through failure properly to utilize and conserve the waterpower of the United States.

The construction of reservoirs at the sources of streams in which flood waters may be stored to be released at periods of low water is expected not only to keep the waters at a continuous level, but prevent the destruction of property by floods, maintain constant levels for navigation and to develop water power.

At the present rate of timber consumption it is estimated that the price of every kind of lumber will be about double the present price only one decade from to-day.

It is said that the total iron ore available in the world to-day is 25,000,000,000 tons, of which three-fifths is in the United States. Should the rate of consumption continue to increase in the United States in the same ratio that it has in the course of the last score of years, at the end of two centuries there would be no more ore to be mined.

In the United States there is an area of 175,000,000 acres of land susceptible to reclamation by irrigation, and 500,000,000 acres of western public range which may be made available for increased production of meat by restricting the grazing and reseeding portions which have been destroyed by unrestricted grazing. With this area made available once more, it is estimated that its meat producing capacity will be nearly doubled.

POINT TO DEFEAT

SIGNS THAT WORRY REPUBLICAN CONGRESSMEN.

Two Classes of Voters on Which They Have Heretofore Largely Relied Are This Year in Active Opposition.

There are two classes of votes that have heretofore gone almost solidly for the Republicans in many states, but which seem this year to be so thoroughly disgusted with the leaders of that party that they will be found on election day almost a unit in opposition to it. These are the negro vote and the organized labor vote.

As to the negro vote, it seems that in case Taft or any other man favored by Roosevelt should be nominated by the Republicans, that vote may largely go to the Democratic candidates, because of the attitude of the administration towards the negro troops implicated in the Brownsville affair. This vote is the controlling factor in many Republican districts. In New York it holds the balance of power in the district represented in congress by Herbert Parsons; in Indiana there are four congressmen, including Jesse Overstreet, who owe their seats to negro votes; in Iowa, there are two; in West Virginia, three; in New Jersey, two; in Ohio, two; in Illinois, three; in Kentucky, three; in Missouri, one; in Maryland, two; and in Wisconsin, two. In all, there are 25 districts in which the negro vote is absolutely necessary to secure the election of a Republican.

But the vote of organized labor is of still greater importance, since that vote counts in almost every congressional district in the country, and has practically indorsed the program of legislation for which the Democrats, under the leadership of John Sharp Williams, battled in the house of representatives against the wishes and purposes of Speaker Cannon and the Republican majority of that body:

"1. To amend the Sherman anti-trust law so that it will not include labor unions.

"2. To adopt a bill to regulate and limit the issuance of injunctions.

"3. That a general employers' liability bill be enacted.

"4. By an amendment to extend the application of the eight-hour law to all government employes, and those employed upon work done for the government, whether by contractors or subcontractors."

This program was approved by labor throughout the country on Easter Sunday in mass meetings held for the purpose of outlining the policy to be pursued by its organizations in respect to legislation. And in all those assemblies the votes of workingmen enrolled in labor unions were pledged to candidates who should favor such demands.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, in a letter read at these Easter day mass meetings, said:

"The labor unions will not flinch, but manfully stand for their rights, and the workers and their friends through the country shall pledge themselves without regard to party affiliations, without any other divergence of opinion, to unmask the open or hypocritical opponent, and send to political oblivion those who, by negligence or antagonism, fail to respond affirmatively and give their full support to the specific measures which labor demands."

With the labor vote and the negro vote in its present temper, the Republicans are beginning to feel that something must be done to save their party from defeat. But the trusts and monopolies which control their leaders will not permit them to do anything because those special interests would rather see a Democratic president, and a Democratic house of Representatives, than allow congress to make any concession whatever to organized labor. Intrenched in the senate, they would be able to defeat any measure which the Democratic house might pass.

Hence it is that Republican congressmen are unhappy and cross and peevish these days.

More Tariff Exactions.

The national board of general appraisers at New York has reversed former decisions and placed hides of the India buffalo on the tariff list of cattle. Heretofore they have come in free with the hides of the cape and water buffaloes. The decision will add about $2,000,000 annually to the shoe bill of the people. The Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin says:

"The decision of the appraisers will increase the cost of manufacturing the cheaper grades of shoes, and will therefore affect those who can least afford to meet the advance. From $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 worth of the Indian hides are imported every year. Each hide is valued at from four to six dollars in the crude state, or about one-third less than the hides of domestic cattle. Thousands of importations were held up pending the decision, and the owners of the stock will have to pay from 60 to 80 cents each to get them from the bonded warehouses. . . . the conclusion of appraisers may impose temporary hardship upon the importers and upon the shoe trade, it may be a good thing after all, as it will doubtless stimulate agitation in favor of a repeal of the duty on hides. The shoe manufacturers of the country have been appealing for such action for several years. One of the first changes when the tariff is revised will be the placing of hides on the free list."

PARTY IS BADLY DIVIDED.

Republican Leaders Seem to See Little Prospect of Success.

The Boston Transcript is one of the few honest, reliable Republican newspapers and can always be relied upon to give facts and not fancies. It follows, therefore, that its Washington correspondent is equally reliable, and what he says about the condition of Republican prospects is very interesting, as it is an inside view of conditions in the party councils. There is no doubt great alarm among Republican leaders, both as to the result of the election for president and congress, and some of those leaders in congress, who are opposed to the Roosevelt policies, would not object to a Republican defeat as an object lesson for the future, if their faction does not control.

"There is," says the Transcript, "no let-up anywhere in the scramble to line up delegates, but for some time it has been noticeable that, outside the Taft camp, there has been an apparent tendency to let the situation go by default.

"The allies have taken no pains whatever to have their view of the situation presented to the public. They have had no press bureau, although a little publicity matter is now being grouped and given out. They appear to have held no important conferences among themselves, but have sat by and watched the scramble with what looked like amusement.

"So far not the slightest move has been made by the candidates opposing Secretary Taft to unite upon anyone and give him common support. There are anti-Taft men on the Taft-pledged delegations, and there are Taft men among the delegates from the favorite son states. Neither Knox nor Cannon nor any other candidate can 'deliver' his home delegation to anyone else. Advisable as a combination might be, it would be difficult if not impossible to form one.

"How much this unprogressive condition may be due to the growing impression that the Republicans will have a hard time winning this year is an interesting question. The conclusion forced by facts is that the managers of the various booms are letting things drift because they cannot do otherwise; but this is certain, that if the 'field' felt sure that whoever the Republicans nominated would be elected every candidate in the bunch would be making a brilliant and aggressive instead of a listless campaign."

For Buncombe Only.

Speaker Cannon's resolution for a committee to investigate the paper trust is characterized by the Chicago Record-Herald as for buncombe only. It avers, as was said, indeed, in congress at the time that no one takes it seriously, it being merely a device to protect the wood pulp monopoly against popular criticism, and this the Record-Herald thinks is one of the extraordinary things about it all, namely, the power of the standpatters to deceive themselves into thinking that their sham is not transparent to every one. It goes on to say:

"Our stand-pat friends intend to 'exploit' the resolution in their 'deestricts,' to point to it with affected pride as a statesmanlike substitute for revision. They will run the risk of hooting and jeering. Their little game is too transparent. Their only serious argument—that they could not touch wood pulp and paper without reopening the whole tariff question—was gone when it was shown that the admitted need of forest-saving furnished a complete and convincing reason for treating the wood pulp and paper duties as belonging to a separate and distinct category. The house minority is on record as acquiescing in such treatment of these duties. The anxious stand-patters know that telling quotations from presidential messages and resolutions of manufacturers and clubs and other organizations were at their disposal to justify to all minds the singling out of the schedule in question for revision at this time. They are reckoning without the common sense and the humor of their constituents."

Non-Effective Trust Busting.

It was only a few mouths ago that the administration declared it had demolished the print paper combine, yet now we have Speaker Cannon introducing a resolution in the house of representatives directing the department of commerce and labor to report to the house what investigation, if any, it has made into the business of the International Paper company, or other combination engaged in the manufacture of wood pulp and print papers, and also directing the department of justice to report what steps, if any, have been taken looking to the prosecution of these corporations for their alleged violations of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The speaker evidently believes that the presidential trust busting is not effective and that the trust still exists and is plundering the newspaper publishers. Still Speaker Cannon refuses to allow the bill to put wood pulp and print paper on the free list to be reported and considered. Republican stand-patters who are wedded to the policy of protecting the trusts by the tariff and who oppose present tariff revision of any kind, as Speaker Cannon and the Republican leaders do, are but purblind partisans.

As Attorney General Bonaparte has failed to find a Republican joker in the employers' liability bill, the president's signature will forward it toward the supreme court, which is growing more and more expert with increasing experience in discovering the humorous features of Republican vote-catching devices.

The classes of Misses Ritter and Smith in elocution and music at Walton, will give two recitals. On Tuesday evening, May 26th, the three act play, "Elopement of Ellen," will be presented and on Wednesday evening, May 27th, the sketch, "The Burglar," with music and recitations, will be given. The entertainment will take place at the Walton school hall, and promises to be very enjoyable as all of the young people on the program are bright intellectually, and qualified to present a pleasing program. The admission is 15 cents and reserved seats 25 cents on sale at A. W. Smith's drug store.

The directors of the Consolidated Telephone Company held their regular meeting here at its office, Wednesday, May 15th, and the following were present: N. E. Riddell, president, Burlington; Dr. M. J. Crouch, vice-president, Union; William T. Black, superintendent, Walton; R. A. McWethy, of Petersburg; C. C. Siegel, of Beaver; J. W. Conner, of Walton; Dr. Elbert Glacken, of Richwood; Robert P. Rice, of Florence; Robert Rouse, of Hebron. Repairs all over the line were ordered, and cisterns were ordered built at the exchanges at Burlington and Beaver Lick. The business of the company has been very satisfactory, and the efficiency of its officers is being fully demonstrated in the excellent management of the business.

The Court of Appeals has again decided the case of J. Waite Cross vs. The Trustees of Walton Graded School, in favor of the school trustees. This was the second appeal taken from the Boone circuit court. Several years ago, when Prof. Dickey was the principal of the school here, Cross was a pupil, being then about 18 years old, and was assigned a part as an Irish character in a play to be given at the close of the school. Cross declined to take the part, alledging that he could not fill it and the teacher insisted on his taking it, and on refusing to do so, he was suspended. The suit was brought to wipe the suspension from the records but the Court of Appeals holds that the teacher had the right to put Cross in the play and he should have taken the part.

Walton was almost depopulated on Sunday the 10th inst., as the greater part of our citizenship attended the dedication of the new Christian church at Crittenden. Excellent sermons were preached by the regular pastor, Rev. D. T. Buck, assisted by Rev. Elliott, of Sulphur. Most elaborate preparations were made for the entertainment of the visitors, of which 2500 were entertained. Taken all in all a most delightful day was spent by the visitors in the hospitable little town of Crittenden. Much of the success of the church is due the most worthy pastor, Rev. D. T. Buck.

J. W. Williams, representing a creamery supply house of Chicago, was here a week or two ago, trying to establish a creamery at Walton, but some of the citizens who probably would take part in the investment, are of the opinion that too great a profit is being made on the machinery, and discouraged the putting in of a plant. Walton is an admirable place for a creamery and one ought to be established here, especially as the tobacco crop is cut out and there will be plenty of grass land with which to keep up the cows, and it would be a profitable investment. The major part of country produce that ought to be raised here is bought at fancy prices from the city markets, ranging from the common vegetables to the meat supply. It is bad business policy to buy anything outside that can be raised at home.

Ed Caldwell, aged about 30, the unfortunate young man who was frightfully injured in a railroad wreck at Mason on the Q. & C. railroad February 29th, died of his injuries at the Good Samaritan hospital in Cincinnati, where he was taken immediately after the accident. His death occurred early on the morning of the 10th inst. The remains were taken to his late home at Corinth. The funeral took place from the Williamstown M. E. Church, Rev. M. H. Clark, the pastor, preaching an appropriate funeral discourse over the remains, after which they were interred in the cemetery there. The deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anna Scott Caldwell. He leaves a wife and two small children, a boy aged 4 and a girl aged 2 years. He was a devoted member of the Methodist church, and a young man of exemplary habits, and besides his grief-stricken wife and relatives, he leaves a host of friends who deplore his untimely death. He was a nephew of Mrs. J. B. Daubman, of this place. The sympathy of all is tendered his bereaved relatives.

The Great Imp. German Coach Stallion, PLUTARCH 3183

THE IMPORTED GERMAN COACH STALLION, PLUTARCH, will make the season of 1908 at L. A. Conner's Stable at Burlington, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a colt to stand and suck, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

A ring of this Stallion's suckling colts was shown at Florence Fair last fall and was pronounced to be the best ring of colts ever shown at the fair. Besides this special ring, these colts were shown in other classes against other Stallions' colts and received almost every tie they were shown for, which proves this horse to be a great breeder and sure foal getter.

In offering William Penn for public service at the small fee of $10, we believe that we are presenting to the public a rare opportunity of obtaining some of the best blood in a horse that will transmit to his get quality, disposition, size, speed and magnificent conformation. He is an exceptionally fine saddle horse, going all the saddle gaits in a very attractive manner. He is a quiet, fearless driver that has speed enough at either the trot or pace to make a race horse. He is a very handsome horse with a disposition that is perfect. We could take up more space in giving a long description and pedigree of his ancestors, and what they had done, but William Penn will prove for himself that he will transmit to his get the rare qualities that he possesses. Pasture furnished at $2 a month.

MIKE, Jr.,

He sires 80 per cent. mare mules and his mules have never been defeated in the show ring.

WILLIAM PENN, the handsome combined stallion, and MIKE JR., the breeding jack, will make the season of 1908 at our farm 3½ miles southwest of Union, Ky., each at $10.00 to insure a living foal.

We cordially invite public inspection of our stock at any time, and we feel sure that you will find them to be exactly as represented.

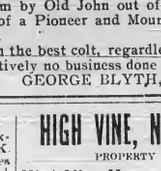
HIGH VINE, No. 2733

PROPERTY OF



High Vine Horse Company,

WALTON, KY.,

In the stud at the farm of W. Lee Gaines near Richwood, Ky., at $20 to insure live foal.

W. L. Gaines, President.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733,

Foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667. Grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730. Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2282, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1665. Second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60. Third dam, Maxey by Granger. Fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

A number of prominent citizens of the locality of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine saddle horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20.00 to insure.

High Vine was shown at various county fairs, last fall, and was a prize winner at all of them, taking first in the Sweepstakes Saddle and Harness ring at Erlanger, and defeating the great Chancellor gelding at Sanders. He has proved to be a fine breeder, and his colts will be ready sellers at fancy prices. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and keeping.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from breeding of 1908, the time and place of the show to be announced later.
